overseeing the work done at the site and how much of the profit from the recreational complex the city would receive. However, they expressed confidence about their vote Monday night to support the home-rule petition.

"Further deliberation (on this matter) is needed," said Council President Michael Cheney. "The mayor has committed to allow public input even after the legislation goes through."

"This vote only allows the mayor to enter into a lease agreement," said Councillor Timothy Cahill. "It does not bind us to the Quarry Hills Associates lease, or to Quarry Hills

Stringer, who has performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and several other opera companies in Boston, explained the components of spiritual music through narrative and song. He has toured as a soloist throughout the Northeast, Europe, China, the Middle East and recently in South Africa.

2 Beechwood Employees Commended For Heroism

Two employees at the Beechwood Community Life Center in Wollaston have been recognized as heroes by the City Council.

Kathleen DeCecco and Christine Tierney both received commendations from the council for performing CPR on 72-year-old Joseph McGinley after he collapsed Jan. 26

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, who presented the commendations, praised the pair for their quick thinking and heroic actions. He also noted that their saving McGinley's life was quite an accomplishment since only three of 10 people who receive CPR survive such an ordeal.

Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson also had kind words for DeCecco and Tierney.

"It's people like you that make this city a great place to live in," said Cheney.

Kolson suggested that the girls' names go on the special plaque the council recently hung in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall in honor of people in the city who have committed special acts of bravery or heroism.

City Seeks Regulation Of Tax Collection

The City Council is seeking a new method of collecting back excise taxes.

City Tax Collector Dana Childs told the council Monday night the city currently is owed $5 million in back excise taxes dating back 20 years. The city collects $3.5 to 4 million annually in excise taxes, he said.

Childs also noted that the recently-computerized system of collecting the taxes indicates that only about one percent of those taxed is responsible for the $5 million debt.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said he has heard of taxpayers who have claimed that they were wrongly taxed for bills they paid 10 years ago or more. He added that it is unrealistic for people to be expected to keep payments for that long and said the system should be more tightly regulated.

Both Cahill and Council President Michael Cheney asked Childs to report back to the City Council at its next meeting with a plan that could help lead to a solution of the problem.

Medically Speaking

by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

FEELING A LITTLE (COUGH) HOARSE?

When the president of the United States cuts back on top-level meetings because his voice has given out, you know hoarseness is a problem with no easy solution. Hoarseness can be caused by colds, viruses, or overuse of the vocal cords. Stores are filled with products promising relief, but the most effective remedy is resting the voice. Even whispering should be avoided, as it puts more pressure on the vocal cords than talking softly. Drink plenty of non-alcoholic liquids and suck on hard candy or lozenges with glycerine. Stay away from dry, smoky places. Persistent hoarseness is occasionally a symptom of other, more serious conditions. Contact your doctor if hoarseness persists for more than ten days.

P.S. It generally takes five to ten days for hoarse vocal cords to heal - with or without medication.

Try simmering cloves and cinnamon stick with hot water, lemon and honey for a throat-soothing lemon tea. For more information on this, or on any aspect of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. This column is presented in the interest of better health for all of our readers.

Bradley Seen A.L. Commander

Another American Legion honor appears to be coming Quincy's way.

Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley is expected to be elected Massachusetts Department commander at the state convention in Plymouth June 9-11.

Bradley served as commander of Morrisette Legion Post in 1985-86 and was Norfolk County commander from 1985-90.

He would be the third Quincy resident accorded this department honor.

Robert Eng of Quincy Legion Post was elected department commander in 1972.

John (Jake) Comer was state commander in 1975. He is a Quincy resident but his post is not a Quincy post. He is a past commander and member of the Fogg-Roberts Post in West Roxbury. Comer, of course, went on to distinguish himself as National Commander of the American Legion in 1989.

Incidentally, the late Tom McDonald brought Veterans of Foreign Wars honors to Quincy when he was elected Massachusetts Department commander in 1979.

Good luck, Hank. Bring it home.

CITY COUNCIL PRESIDENT Mike Cheney has been getting a feel for the mayor's office—and liking it.

Cheney has probably been the most active acting mayor in recent years. During Mayor James Sheets absence from the city, Cheney has held press conferences, issued snow storm emergencies and ordered out snow fighting equipment as well as attending various functions bringing the city's greetings.

Cheney says: "I like it."

Enough to run in 1995?

REP. MICHAEL BELLOTTI has decided to become a full-time legislator. He has given up his interest in the Bella Produce Co. leaving his brother Tom as sole owner.

Bellotti took out his nomination papers for re-election at the State House and says he is planning a signature drive.

He only needs 150 signatures on his papers. "But," he says, "I'd like to get maybe 2,000—or more."

Full time legislator. Two thousand names. Sounds like he may have bigger political plans, like following in the footsteps of his father, Frank, former lieutenant governor and attorney general.

CHRIS BELL, aide to Mike Bellotti and Bruce Tobin, aide to Rep. Edward Lambert of Fall River, had a close-up look when President Clinton came to Boston last week. Both got to ride in the Presidential motorcade and later had their picture taken with Clinton.

Bell, by the way, a Wollaston resident, was recently voted the Freshman Legislative Aide of the Year.

ANOTHER GOOD SIGN in the progress Councilor Ted DeCristofaro is making in his recovery from a heart attack and stroke suffered three weeks ago.

Ted, who is now at the Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital, got a call the other day from Congressman Gerry Studds.

Studds called to see how he was doing and Ted, always the ward councillor, said: "Gerry, what can I do for you?"

Just like he would ask one of his Ward 2 constituents.

Rabies is a viral disease transmitted mainly to dogs and cats through bite wounds from wildlife such as bats, skunks, foxes and raccoons. The usually fatal disease is extremely rare in humans and has been fairly uncommon among animals in this part of the country.

Less than a dozen rabid animals per year on average are discovered through analysis at the State Rabies Laboratory. Tests revealed that in the last few years, all but one of the infected animals were bats. However, an outbreak of wildlife rabies among raccoons has progressed to the Southwestern part of Massachusetts. To date, 50 animals, mainly raccoons have been tested positive for rabies, in this state.

For more information about rabies, contact the Division of Communicable Disease Control of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health at 522-3700 x 194, and/or the Quincy Health Department at 376-1273.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard of the Hotel Greenleaf, the remains of which are still standing on the corner of Hancock and Granite Streets. The steeple and the roof were damaged by fire and then removed to leave the three-story building there today. On the left is the Durgin and Merrill's block built in 1886 and still extant but covered with a new facade that conceals the original brick exterior. Down Granite Street the railroad bridge was overhead before the MBTA tracks were depressed under the road.

Reality Of Quincy Center Still One Of Underuse

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The other evening as I drove along Hancock Street from North Quincy over to Bradlee's on Quincy Avenue, I noticed a few things worth recognizing.

As I passed, across Billings Road, I noticed how busy this neighborhood business area looked. Cars were parked everywhere. As I continued on my way, I saw the same thing happening in the Wollaston Center area but when I reached Downtown Quincy, it still took on the appearance of a ghost town. Plenty of parking available and most stores closed up for the night. What was it—6 p.m., or maybe 6:30 p.m.? The economic redevelopment of downtown Quincy is still a distant hope. The reality of Quincy Center is still one of underuse. Shopperstown USA is a return to the Golden Era of Television.

Why is it that Wollaston Center and Norfolk Downs are still working for Quincy consumers long after Quincy Center has gone to bed? And why is it that Christmas decorations are still hanging from the lampposts along Hancock Street in downtown Quincy? Is this just another symbolism that this shopping/retail area still lives for the past?

There remains much potential in Downtown Quincy for some modest revitalization. The area can never compete with South Shore Plaza and it will never be Shopperstown USA again with or without a cross-town connector but it still should be a good retail area for a longtime to come if managed properly. Empty storefronts lead to more empty storefronts like a spreading disease. We've got to get something into both the former sites of Child World and Colman's because the longer they remain empty, so too do any dreams of an improved Quincy Center. What good is a connector if there's nothing to connect? Isn't it like the fable about the naked emperor?

184 Atlantic St.

[Editor's Note: As has been reported in The Quincy Sun and other local media sources, Blockbuster Video will soon be moving into the former Colman's store. Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Apris said that the public-private planning organization is actively pursuing tenants for the Child World site].

Austin Calls For Programs City Can Afford

City Councillor Edna B. Austin, chairman of the Finance Committee, called for the adoption of a five-year capital improvements program for the city based on what Quincy can afford rather than what it wants.

"The city of Quincy is in a jam, a financial jam, caused largely by the big school construction program," she said.

"Our first stop must be to find out just how much money the city has to spend on new improvements for the next five years and then to get a clear picture of just what improvements are needed and their relative necessity."

Mrs. Austin noted that the city has a borrowing capacity of about $5 million and that much is committed to the proposed school construction program. The city has a list of other projects that would cost about $4 million.

"In the face of these figures," she said, "it is obvious that we have to make some drastic decisions. We certainly can't buy $9 million worth of improvements when we have only $5 million to spend."

YARD STICKS TO SHIPS

General Manager Sam Wakeman of the Fore River Shipyard told members of the Boston Propeller Club that the Bethlehem Steel Co. will not consider any other type of work for the yard until all hope is abandoned of obtaining more ship contracts.

He said the new planer-milling machine at the yard, one of the two largest of its type in the world, is evidence that management has faith in the future of shipbuilding. There are also plans, he said, to modernize the yard.

Quincy Firefighter John J. Colligan, who rescued a North Quincy man trapped in his burning home, was presented the Basil Q. Emanuel Award by the South Shore Association of Police Reporters and Photographers at the third annual awards dinner.

City Manager William Deegan told the Quincy Lions Club that taxpayers are facing a $2 to $3 tax increase in 1995 and a $1.50 hike in each of 1996 and 1997, adding that the city is "up against a financial wall."

WJDA Radio Announcer Roy Lind

The Man Behind The Microphone

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Sun Staff

Q. Roy, you've been at the station a long time, and you've been doing "Party Line" for about eight years. How many people would you say you've interviewed?

A. Probably thousands; I don't know. You're trying and figure out how many interviews you do in a week, and before I started doing "Party Line" I used to do news and a lot of documentaries, which I wish I could still be doing because they were what I really enjoyed doing, documentary programs.

Q. Can you think of a couple of issues that have raised the most questions for you while doing "Party Line?"

A. Parking meters in Quincy Square; the meter maids, that was always a very interesting thing. And the MWRA, of course, everyone is really concerned about that. I mean, the (water and sewer) rates—thank goodness I don't live in the district. I don't know how these people can pay some of the bills. And you hear them when they call; they're very frustrated, they're people on fixed incomes that don't know where they're going to spend their money. Is it going to be on a phone bill, or the MWRA water (bill), or even food? And that generates a lot of calls.

I like to have guests on, because that makes it easy for me; I don't have to carry the ball. Let them do it; they're the experts, they know what they're talking about.

If you have pet subjects, people have a lot of questions about pets. Gardening: in the springtime and the summer-time, we always get a lot of questions about that. But the "Party Line," most of the time it's open-ended and they have to bring all of your ad-libs with you when you come into the studio.

Q. Do you have a most memorable moment while doing "Party Line?"

A. I think, perhaps, when the Penthouse (Magazine) "Girl of the Year" came in here (laughs). No, they all sort of go together. But some of the people (were memorable), like Nigel Hamilton, who wrote a book about JFK, and it's a very controversial book. We probably got one or two calls that day, and I think both of them were negative. But authors are always fun to talk to. Sports figures are always fun to interview. Politicians have been in. It's been an interesting life; I've always enjoyed the business, and I'm glad I got into it.

Q. You must recognize a lot of voices on the phone. Do you ever get tired of hearing from the same people?

A. Well, that's one of the problems with a local station like this. I get calls off the air saying, "Why do you allow this person on (the air)?" We do have regular callers all the time. And just most recently, I've been trying to clamp down to say, "call once a week." And I don't like to do that, but if it aggravates some people, at least they have a chance to get on the air at least once a week.

I just feel that if I'm not going to allow somebody on, because he calls a lot, then I can probably allow somebody else not to be on. So we ask for phone calls, and when they call up they're doing me a favor by calling, and I hate to cut anybody off. I very rarely cut anybody off. I had one lady call up one day who was talking about her medical problems, and she went on for seven or eight or nine minutes, and finally, she was repeating herself, and finally I had to get rid of her. And I got a letter from some guy that called me the Aytollah of Quincy (laughs), because I cut her off. In fact, I still have the letter someplace. And he was going to tell all the sponsors and anybody he ever knew not to listen to our station again because I cut

FULL NAME: Roy Arthur Lind
AGE: 61

ADDRESS: currently a resident of Scituate; born at Quincy Hospital and raised on Cranch Street in Quincy OCCUPATION: program director at radio station WJDA (1300 AM) in Quincy since 1983 and host of its "Party Line" program since 1986; overall, has been with the station for 30 years

EDUCATION: graduated from Quincy High School, 1950; after serving in the Army, including a period in Korea, graduated from Boston University in 1958 with a B.S. in public relations/communications

FAMILY: married to the former Joan Soltesz. They have three children: Marcia Short of Duxbury and twin sons James Lind of Scituate and Jeffrey Lind of Plymouth, and six grandchildren this woman off.

Q. Have you ever just hung up on anyone before?

A. Not really. In the number of years I've been doing it, to hang up on people in anger, I don't think I've ever done it.

Q. You must feel like it sometimes, though.

A. Yeah, I guess so (smiles). But there again, I'm not that type, I try to be as polite as possible; I listen to the people and let them get their point across. But when they start repeating themselves, and if they are becoming an aggravation to other people, then that's the time I just try to gently get rid of them. But I don't think I've ever hung up the phone on anybody. Maybe once or twice (laughs), but I can't remember a time.

Q. Some people view an interview as kind of an art form. What do you think makes a good interview, or a good interviewer?

A. Listening. Kids that come into the (radio) business, they start to interview somebody and they're thinking more about the next question they're going to ask rather than listening to the response that the person is giving them. Because usually, one response will lead to another question. And that was one of the problems with me (when I first started). So it's just a little bit of advice: when you're interviewing, you have to many times act very stupid; even if you know the answer, you have to ask the question.

Q. Do you have any favorite radio or television interviewers?

A. Well, Larry King is a good interviewer. I like Howie Carr; I like some of his ideas. I agree with some of them, and I disagree with some of them. Gene Burns was a great interviewer, a very intelligent guy, and I hope he comes back to Boston. Rush Limbaugh; I listen to Rush. I listen to them all.

Q. How about other announcers, such as those in the news business? Is there anyone you admire?

A. (WJDA News Director) Joe Catalano (laughs). Actually, Joe is a good news man. I enjoy working with him in the morning; he has a sense of humor that he can use, but at the same time, he writes very well and he delivers very well. Joe's a good news man.

As far as in Boston, when you're working at those major stations in Boston, practically every one of them are good. On the network, you can always admire a lot of the old icons, like David Brinkley, and who's the guy on CBS who does "On the Road..."

Q. Charles Kuralt.

A. Yeah, Charles Kuralt. I've always enjoyed his stuff, because he knows when to shut up and just let the picture take over. Some of the old ones, Edward R. Murrow, (Walter) Cronkite, those are all the icons of the industry.

Q. James Asher founded WJDA in 1947. Tell us a little bit about the kind of man he was.

A. He was an impeccable dresser. He knew what he wanted out of his personnel. He loved to travel; he took more opportunities to travel and would always send back programs. He would sell programs before he even went on these trips (laughs). He went to the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, for instance.

He would walk around in the station, and if someone was sitting on a desk or something, he'd say "that's what they make chairs for." He was a taskmaster, but a very likable guy, and to start a business like this, you have to be tough at times. Because in the early days, when the station first went on, it was difficult, it's like starting any business.

But he was very good to me, he gave me my opportunity, and when I came here I could do practically anything I wanted to. Announce, engineer, write the news, I did some sports. He'd just let you do what you were capable of doing. He'd encourage you; he was a good man.

Q. Would you say this is a fun profession?

A. Oh sure, there's no heavy lifting involved (smiles). I don't know what I would have done if I hadn't gotten into this business. I think at one time, I may have wanted to be a landscape architect.

You know, I get up at four o'clock in the morning, get here by quarter of five, and I drive through snow, sleet and all this business, to get here to tell school teachers they don't have to go to work that day (laughs). That's the ultimate of the worst job in the world, but I'd still do it, anyway. There's a lot of good people in this business, and it's fun.

Q. Your voice is known by so many people, but like most people in radio, there's probably a lot of listeners, other than those who read this interview, who don't know what you look like. How do you feel about that?

A. It's probably good a lot of people don't know what I look like (smiles), although we've been taping for (Continental Cablevision's) Channel 3 on occasion on Thursdays. And some people will call and say, "it's fun to know what you look like, because we've been listening to you all these years." And I have people that call, and I wonder what they look like. Oh, I don't know; I'm not a handsome guy, and I'm not television material, and my voice isn't that great, but you try to understand people, and have feelings for people.

What I look like, that doesn't matter to me. I don't care. What it is, is what I am is what you get. As far as the voice, there's a heck of a lot better voices, but I guess people enjoy listening to me. That's all that matters (laughs).

Save Your Sight With Protective Eyewear

Only a small fraction of the population today wears protective eyewear when playing sports.

Some people say that eyewear impairs vision; others cite discomfort; still others think goggles are not fashionable.

However, protective eyewear can save our most precious sense—sight. The National Society to Prevent Blindness reports approximately 1000,000 eye injuries occur each year and estimates that 90% of these injuries could be prevented if the individuals wear safety goggles.

April has been declared "Sports Eye Safety Month" in an effort to raise awareness of eye protection among sports enthusiasts of all ages. Fortunately, more professional athletes are opting to wear eye protectors and advocate their use on the playing field. Notable sports figures who have worn protective eyewear include basketball stars Kareem Abdul-Jabar and James Worthy.

Eye injuries may occur in all sports. Baseball produces the highest number of eye injuries overall, especially among children in Massachusetts. Among 15-24 year olds, basketball is the leading cause of accidents. In adults over 25, racquet sports are associated with the largest number of eye injuries. In the past year, ophthalmologists have reported an increasingly high rate of accidents from street hockey and tennis. Before masks were worn, seven out of 100 hockey players suffered a serious eye or face injury every year.

A recent study proved that the number of eye injuries resulting in youth hockey have significantly decreased since a mandatory face shield rule was implemented. As a general rule, sports involving a stick, a ball and/or body contact may require safety glasses or a helmet.

"Always assess the risk level in a particular sport," says Robert T. Lacy, M.D., an ophthalmologist at Eye Health Services, "and be particularly mindful of sports that involve flying objects such as pucks or balls."

Using protective eyewear like facemasks or safety glasses can minimize or prevent most accidents. Ordinary glass and plastic lenses, which can easily shatter upon impact, are not substitutes for appropriate eye protection. Everyday glasses are not designed to withstand the blow of flying balls or elbows and can bend or break upon impact. Protective eyewear should always be worn with contact lenses.

Approved eyeguards have the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) seal. Safety glasses should be made from polycarbonate, a lightweight, shatterproof material which is the most impact resistant available.

If you have any questions about the types of protective eyewear available, contact your local optician. He or she has important information to help you make a wise decision about your family's vision safety.

Ophthalmologists say parents can play a key role in teaching good safety habits to their children.

Patients can also encourage local little league organizations and recreational coaches to set new rules requiring participants to wear protective eyewear. Coaches can also teach children to refrain from dangerous behavior such as high sticking in hockey.

"To a certain degree, we all believe that we are immune to injury," says Dr. Michael Chang, an ophthalmologist at Eye Health Services. "However, incidence data clearly shows that accidents occur often when we are doing things we most enjoy."

Mary Vallier Honored As Sun Citizen Of Year

as well as some of her community service associates, namely Janet Ellis, the city's equal opportunity administrator and "guiding light" of the Quincy Human Rights Commission; Council of Aging Director Brian Buckley; Bruce Carr, president of the DOVE Board of Directors; and Carol Piddle, president of United First Parish Church Women's Alliance.

She also mentioned her husband, the late Quincy Police Capt. Frank Vallier. "Although he had his own agenda for community service... he was always there supporting and encouraging me."

"I could not have been as active in community service as I have been without his help."

A companion presentation, a special front page of The Quincy Sun detailing Mrs. Vallier's selection, was made by Sun Editor Robert Bosworth. "I hope this momento serves as a reminder of this day for many years to come," Bosworth said.

During her 15 years of community service, Mrs. Vallier has helped many groups and organizations and countless citizens. After co-founding DOVE, she spoke to groups in the community and was instrumental in training the DOVE staff and volunteers. She also helped set policies which led to the establishment of a permanent shelter.

Mrs. Vallier is now chairwoman of the Volunteer Committee of the DOVE board and conducts orientation meetings for new volunteers and supports their activities.

One of the main and successful goals of Mrs. Vallier's involvement is to help battered women develop self-esteem and to show them and their children how to settle disagreements without turning to the violence they had suffered in their homes.

"We try to give them a new life," she says.

Mrs. Vallier has also been active in many other community endeavors.

She is a member of the Quincy Council on Aging Board and the Quincy Human Rights Commission. She is an honorary member of the Metropolitan Boston Great Books Council, an organization she has served for 20 years, including three as its president.

For several years she has helped serve senior citizens at the Mayor's Thanksgiving Dinner and Christmas Dinner to the homeless at Fr. Bill's Place. She is an active member of United First Parish Church and serves as a board member of the Women's Alliance, a group of church women dedicated to helping church activities, supporting community service organizations and caring for its members.

As Remembrance Chairwoman she sends cards and bakes and distributes cookies to shut-ins.

Mrs. Vallier is honorary chairwoman of Religious Education at First Parish Church. She knits an afghan for each baby born in the family of a student attending Church School. Over 12 years, she has knitted approximately 17 afghans, each taking about 30 hours to make.

She was a board member of the Quincy Symphony Orchestra for 17 years and served at its ticket chairwoman.

In addition, Mrs. Vallier is a member of the South Shore Coalition of Human Rights, Quincy Historical Society, the Eventide Auxiliary, Beechwood Community Life Center and the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Friends and associates also paid tribute to Mrs. Vallier, describing her as a local hero and model citizen whose good deeds have helped an entire community. Besides the plaque award, she received commendations, proclamations and citations from city and state officials.

Mayor James Sheets proclaimed Sunday, March 20 as "Mary Vallier Day in the City of Quincy." The proclamation was presented to Mrs. Vallier by City Council President Michael Cheney. Sheets was unable to attend because he was returning from his trip to Jerusalem.

"We're very, very fortunate in Quincy to have people like you helping hundreds and thousands of people on a daily basis. We know your every day helping people is a labor of love," Cheney said.

Ward 1 City Council Peter Kolson presented Mrs. Vallier with a City Council commendation. "You are an example of what all of us should be. Your gracious soul and tender touch is truly a benefit to the people of this community."

Mrs. Vallier also received a State House citation of recognition from Rep. Steve Tobin and Rep. Michael Bellotti and a Senate commendation from Sen. Michael Morrissey. The legislators called Mrs. Vallier a "rare breed" and "unsung hero" who helps make Quincy a great city and a special place to live.

Mrs. Vallier was also made an honorary deputy sheriff in Norfolk County. Councillor-at-Large Tim Cahill, representing Sheriff Clifford Marshall, presented Mrs. Vallier with a framed plaque and badge. "On behalf of the Sheriff and all the people of Quincy, I say thank you," Cahill said.

Other notable guests attending the reception included Norfolk County District Attorney Bill Delahunt, former mayor and present city councillor Joseph LaRaia, city councillors Chuck Phelan and Bruce Ayers, School Committee members Dan Raymond, Linda Stice, Steve Durkin, Sean Barry and JoAnn Bragg, Police Chief Francis Mullen and former Norfolk County DA and city councillor

She was also praised in a letter written by Sheldon Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church. The letter, read by Bennett's wife, Molly, noted how Mrs. Vallier baked a chicken pot pie for the Bennett's soon after they arrived in Quincy.

"She has done countless little things for those in need," Bennett said.

Mrs. Vallier has 27 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren. She will celebrate her 80th birthday in May and plans to continue her activities "to help as much as I can."

Associates."

As it stands, the City Council cannot make amendments to the actual lease Sheets has proposed. Under the city's Plan A form of government, the mayor has the final say on the lease.

However, the mayor is required to submit a home-rule petition to the council for any lease that exceeds a five-year period of time, and Sheets' proposed a lease of 50 years in his home-rule petition. The council is allowed to make amendments to the petition.

The only amendment made to the petition Monday night was added by Cheney, who suggested the petition read that the mayor is entering a lease agreement of "up to" 50 years, rather than simply 50 years, to allow the council more "flexibility" on the matter.

Sheets has proposed a lease that indicates the project will earn considerable revenue for the city in addition to providing a golf course, nature trails and other amenities.

The proposed lease would guarantee the city

10 percent, or between $100,000 and $200,000, annually from the profits from the 18-hole course and rental of function facilities. The money be used for the upkeep of other Quincy parks.

The lease also requires Quarry Hills Associates to set aside $1 million as a security fund while the complex is being built.

Officials have said the complex would be built and maintained by the developers, who include developer Peter O'Connell and former Mayor Walter Hannon, at no cost to taxpayers. The details of the lease have been worked on for about four months.

The project will also depend on whether the fill can be secured. The lease also says that Quarry Hills Associates, who would be paid to accept the fill, would share any profits with Quincy after construction is completed.

In addition, the lease calls for an advisory committee of residents and officials to be appointed to review financial operations at the golf course.

Plans for the project calls for a complex of about 250 acres, including the 178-acre landfill as well as about 70 acres of private land to be purchased by Quarry Hills Associates. Officials said the complex will cost an estimated $8 to $10 million and about three years to build.

The developers are also negotiating with the Town of Milton. Officials have said adding land in Milton would allow Quarry Hills to increase the number of golf holes from 18 to 27.

City officials said this week, however, that even if Milton strikes a deal with the developers to expand the golf course, the Quincy side of the project will not be open to Milton residents.

The recreation complex would also include three baseball fields, two softball fields, nature trails and picnic areas. A one-acre artificial lake would be used for skating and the adjacent quarry is available for hiking and rock-climbing.

The estimated $10 million project would also provide residents with direct access to the Blue Hills Reservation and take about five years to complete, according to officials.

Support, Concern For Proposed Connector

Asked whether funding for the first phase could be granted without requiring a second phase, Sheets answered, "I will get the $6 million without promising a phase two."

The mayor said the project is back by both Gov. Weld and the state secretary of transportation.

Sheets and other project officials said the concourse is necessary to restore economic vitality to the downtown. Among the economic benefits they outlined were improved vehicular and pedestrian accessibility to the downtown, improved egress and access to city parking lots and reduced traffic congestion on Hancock St., Mechanic St. and Elm St.

"We don't expect to compete with the South Shore Plaza but we do expect to have a retail mix that will be taken advantage of by the residents of Quincy... We have people in Quincy who have never shopped downtown."

"That's not their fault, that's our fault and we have to change that," the mayor said.

Other officials who discussed the project at the QCBPA membership meeting were Public Works Commissioner David Colton, Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix and Tony Leonetta of Whitman and Howard Engineers.

Officials said the first phase of the project would cause "minimal disruption" to downtown businesses. The first phase or "west link" would impact only one business, Tan Line located in the Parkingway, which officials say would have to be demolished and relocated if preferred by the owner.

Also, the city would require, possibly through state eminent domain, a portion of the Paperama parking lot and the former Kincaide building site where the 1500-foot "west link" would connect with Hancock St.

Several QCBPA members embraced the first phase, saying it would make Downtown Quincy more accessible and "pedestrian friendly" by providing a convenient road with sidewalks and parking spaces directly from Burgin Parkway to Hancock St.

Sheets said the link is critical to any development of the Hancock parking area, considered a catalyst for downtown revitalization by some city officials.

"I'm fully convinced that the Hancock lot must be developed as a commercial lot," the mayor said. He pointed out a 200,000-250,000-square-foot commercial development and parking garage would add 400 to 500 employees to the downtown.

Charles D'Aprix agreed. "We have had potential tenant after potential tenant say, 'The Hancock Lot is a great site if there were improved access off the Burgin Parkway to that site.' That's where the rubber meets the road."

However, the second phase does not appear to have the same support as the first phase with some QCBPA members.

"From the Burgin Parkway to Hancock St, I have no objections," said Bernie Reisberg, owner of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop at the intersection of Hancock St. and Revere Rd., the area where the second phase could begin.

"I think you need to talk to the people who would be affected by the second phase."

Sheets and Public Works Commissioner David Colton said decisions about a second phase would not be made until after the first phase is completed. Sheets said he would not want the second phase to go forward if a traffic study shows that the main users of the concourse use it to get through Quincy, instead of to Quincy.

"We have to have a read on who's using section (phase) one," the mayor said. "I want to know if they are stopping to use the retail shops," or simply passing through Quincy to get to Hingham and other South Shore communities.

"The only phase I am concerned about is phase one," the mayor continued. "Let's get it done and evaluate it and then talk about the second phase."

Officials told the QCBPA membership that their concerns will be heard.

"We're not looking at this project through rose-colored glasses," Colton said. "We know there are concerns and you will have a voice in this project."

"You will have maximum input. We look forward to working with you to improve access to the downtown."

An 11-member project Citizens Advisory Committee will begin meeting on the proposal soon, Colton said. The meetings will be public, he said.

"I support the establishment of the committee between the two bodies to resolve this critical program," said Raymond. "It's high time we spent some resources in these critical (school program) areas."

The formation of the new committee follows the council's decision at its last meeting to delete a section from Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a separate board of trustees as the new governing body over the college. The deleted section, which was introduced by Raymond, pertained to the establishment of a special account which would allow the college to make rent payments for use of three of its properties directly to the school department or, in other words, the School Committee.

TIGHTENING TO SPECIFICATIONS

Most car owners are familiar with the sound and function of air-impact wrenches. These are the air-driven tools used to screw and unscrew lug nuts when removing a wheel or replacing it tight up against the hub. The fact is, however, that an air-impact wrench should not be used to tighten lug nuts. This is a job that should be reserved for a torque wrench, which tightens each lug nut precisely to specification. An air-impact wrench, on the other hand, can tighten lug nuts to varying degrees. The result may be uneven loading on both wheels and hubs. Overtightening can also create cracks in bolt holes and make a wheel very difficult to remove in case of any need to remove a tire by hand.

HINT: The make wheels easier to remove in an emergency, have anti-seizing lubricant applied to the lug nuts.

The technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in checking out every unusual sound you hear. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Impressive Record But No Garden Party For North

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

For the second year in a row the North Quincy hockey team made it to the Division I state semi-finals, and for the second time they went home on the short end of the score, falling to Barnstable, 5-2, last Thursday.

The Red Raiders finished their season with an impressive 16-4-3 record.

North came out strong, taking on 2-0 lead on first period goals by senior forward Bob Flannery. His first goal, at 2:16, came when he intercepted a pass in the neutral zone. He sailed in on goalie Jarrod Dwyer and beat him for an unassisted tally.

Flannery's second goal came at 5:45 when he deflected a Chris Knox wrist shot past the netminder. A goal by Barnstable's Steve Lakis made the score 2-1 after one.

Things fell apart for North in the second when Lakis netted the second of his three goals on the evening and Chris Graham tipped home what proved to be the game-winner at 10:41.

One of the turning points of the game came in third when the Red Raiders, down 4-2 due to the completion of Lakis' hat trick, were unable to capitalize on a three minute 15 second man advantage.

Excellent goaltending by Dwyer was North Quincy's downfall. He was peppered by 33 shots in the game including 13 in the final period alone. He was able to shutout North's big first line of A.J. Carthas, Brendan O'Brien and Jim Sapienza, one of the best lines in the state and one of the best in school history.

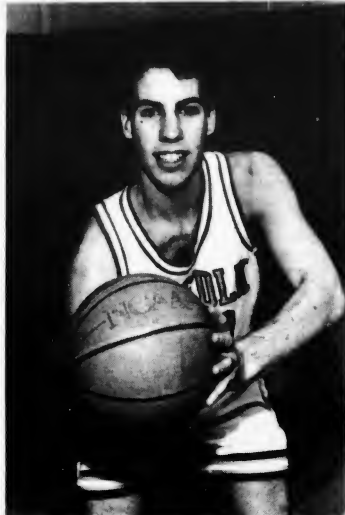

An empty-net goal by Barnstable at 13:50 sealed their trip to the Boston Garden to play in the Division I state final.

"With the exception of the second period, it was an even played game all the way," said North coach Tom Benson. "Their goaltender played one heck of a game."

North Quincy ended the season as one of the top teams in Massachusetts. They went into the Barnstable game with a school record 15-game unbeaten streak (12-0-3). It was also the longest active streak in the state and included tournament victories over Billerica and Don Bosco. The win over Bosco was the North Quincy's first win over a Catholic Conference school.

Barnstable went on to lose in the Division I championship game, 7-2, to Boston College High.

SUFFOLK HOOPSTER-Matt Dwyer of Quincy was a member of the varsity basketball team at Suffolk University this season. A 5-foot-10-inch guard, he was one of three freshmen to play on the varsity team that won 10 and lost 13 during the 1993-94 season.

Mite House

McFarland's 7 Points Powers Barry's Deli

Miah Hasson's four goals were the difference for Lydon Russell as they nipped Skatesmith, 5-4, in Mite House League action.

Tom Walsh scored the other Lydon Russell goal. Dishing out assists were Joe Norris, Tim Gleason and Jon Archambault.

apiece. David Toner had an assist.

In Barry's Deli's 11-2 win over Samoset Pharmacy, Ryan McFarland had monster four goal, three assist performance.

Justin Swierk also scored four goals for Barry's. Chipping in with single goals were Mike Delahoyde, Dan Coughlin and Ryan Tobin.

Assisting were Dan Sullivan (2), Richard

Ayer, Tobin and Coughlin.

Matt Lavery scored one goal for Samoset and assisted on the other, a Billy Ryan tally. Steve Kelley also had an assist.

Another four-goal effort was put forth by Brian "the Flying Irishman" O'Hanley as he led Campbell's Auto Service past Paul Harold Club, 11-3.

Matt Allewa netted a hat trick and Steve Summerling slammed home two for Campbell's. Single goals were recorded by Brendan Craig and Bill Jones. The big playmakers for the winning squad were Allewa, Craig and Brianna Nolan with three assists each. O'Hanley added two assists to his point totals and Shane Newell and Kevin Richardson had one each.

Bryan Cooper, T.X. Russell and Andrew Pitts were the goal scorers for the Harold Club. Pitts and Russell also made assists, as did Mike Tetreault, Jim Chicchio and Mike Lohmes.

Ryan Donahue punched in three to register the hat trick in a 7-4 win by Purdy's Ice Cream over Granite Rail Pizza.

Dan Durocher, John O'Connor, Ken Young and Pat Caspar recorded single tallies for Purdy's. Making the assists were Durocher (2), Young, Mike Brewster and Steve Dunn.

Billy McKeon, Ryan Conley, Josh Giordani and Mike Donelin netted the goals for Granite Rail. Donelin, McKeon, Brendan Conley, Paul Lennon and Mike Ogilvie dish out the assists.

Dan Jones and Joe Thorley added one goal apiece for Granite Auto. Thorley also dished out three assists. Paquette handed out two and Patten and John Mooney chalked up one assist each. The win secured Granite Auto's hold on first place.

Scoring for the Sun

were Shawn Richardson (2) and John Ryan. Assists were made by Colin Maxey, Matt Conso and Brett Keyes.

Two goals by Jordan Virtue were the difference for Green Environmental as they topped Burgin Plaster, 5-3. The win boosted Green into a tie for second with Burgin.

Ryan Graeber, David Kusy and Steve Goff added single tallies for the winners. Assisting were Pat O'Donnell (2), Matt

Miller, Joe Callahan, Jon Tallent, Goff and Virtue.

Mite A Travel Team Wins Two, Loses One

The Quincy Mite A travel team, sponsored by Northland Seafood, won two and lost one in Greater Boston League play.

Their most impressive win was a 12-2 thrashing of Canton. Quincy's scoring machines, Brian O'Hanley and Billy McKeon, each notched hat tricks. Ryan Donahue scored two goals while Jon Chevalier, Jamie Chiochio, Andy Ross and Billy Ryan each netted one. Collecting assists were Matthew Germain and Sean Moriarty with two each. Also assisting were Bryan Cooper, Miah Hasson, Stephen Kelley, McKeon, O'Hanley, Ross and Donahue.

Playing tough at left wing was Kevin Richardsson. Bruce Maggio had a strong game in goal as he backboned the top-notch efforts of blueliners Timmy Duggan and Matt Lavery.

In a 2-1 win over Somerville, Donahue opened the scoring in the second period. He was assisted by Ryan and Chiochio. Somerville tied the game just 30 seconds later but an unassisted tally by defenseman Hasson at 6:14 of the third proved to be the game winner Richardson again had an excellent game, this time manning the pipes for Quincy. The defensive corps of Moriarty, Kelley, Chevalier, Duggan, Lavery and Hasson smothered the Somerville attack.

In close 4-3 loss to South Boston, O'Hanley put Quincy up 1-0 in the first period on an assist by Germain. McKeon and Hasson added the second and third tallies. Hasson was assisted by Ryan. Quincy applied tremendous pressure late in third after falling behind 4-3 at the 6:53 mark.

Pee Wee B's Bow From State Tourney

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee B squad was eliminated from contention in the 1994 State Tournament.

Quincy's first game was a 4-2 victory over Concord-Carlisle. Goals were scored by Kevin Shaw, Didier Alther, Matt Gibbons and Sean Lefebvre. Lefebvre and Shaw also handed out an assist, as did Brian Nolan, Jeff Glynn, Chris Griffin, Kiva Tupe and Sean Haidul.

Game two was a heart-wrenching 3-2 loss to a stacked Revere team. Lefebvre scored one goal and Shaw scored the other on a third period penalty shot that he made look easy.

Hopes for a shot at the semi-finals were dashed by a tie to Revere in third round.

Quincy gave it their all against Waltham as they skated to a 7-0 win. Glynn, Alther and Gibbons scored two goals apiece. Paul Burke also notched a goal. Playmakers were Burke (4), Alther (3), Glynn (2), Tupe (2), Dempsey, Nolan and Joe Ardagna.

Park Department Meets With Managers, Coaches

The Park and Recreation Board and Park Department officials conducted the annual managers and coaches meeting on the use of municipal ballfields for the 1994 season on Wednesday.

All leagues should have been represented at the meeting in order to assure a fair assessment of the permits that will be issued for the 1994 season.

The meeting was held at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex Meeting Room, 100 Southern Artery, Merrymount Park at 7:30 p.m.

The purpose of the meeting was to resolve any duplication of requests preceding the Monday, April 4 meeting when Park and Recreation Board members approve applications presented by baseball, soccer and youth soccer league teams.

Discussions will be held later on the utilizations of city fields by adult softball teams and the ongoing problems created for neighboring property owners by indiscriminate parking, drinking of alcoholic beverages, debris and the lack of compliance for the rules and regulations governing the use of public parks, playgrounds and beach areas.

Raymond Cattaneo, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, said an increasing interest in adult softball, youth soccer programs and girls and women's leagues has developed in recent years.

St. Moritz Devils Tie Up Chiefs, 1-1

On Saturday the St. Moritz Devils skated to a 1-1 tie with the Hobomack Chiefs in their last regular season game.

It was the third meeting of the year between these heated rivals and it proved to be on of the most physical games of the season for the Devils.

Quincy's John Segalla put St. Moritz ahead early in the first period when he scored off a feed from Bobby Cellucci of Marshfield. The rest of the period remained scoreless as these two evenly matched teams battled back and forth.

Devils' goalie Kevin Regan of South Boston made save after save to keep his team in the game. Unfortunately, his team ran into another tough nemesis at the other end of the ice. When a Chiefs defenseman froze the puck in his goalie's crease, Devil Sean Sullivan of Southie was given a penalty shot. Sullivan made a valiant rush but the Hobomack goaltender came up huge. Later in the game Kevin Lynch of Milton made a great shot but was denied by the quick glove hand of the Chief goalie.

A second period Randy Medeiros goal knotted the game at one.

The Devils' defensemen were strong and aggressive throughout the contest. Robbie Johnson of Hanover and Pat Balacosis of South Boston did especially fine jobs.

The Morrisette Baseball Appreciation Night is fast approaching.

The purpose of the evening is to "help celebrate 50 years of baseball excellence."

Nick Malvesti, Frank Osborne, Ray Cattaneo, Bill Corcoran, Connie Carozzi, Bruno Carloni and Berger Ryan will be honored for the tremendous amount of time and effort they have devoted to the Morrisette baseball program.

The event is being held on Saturday, April 9 at the Morrisette American Legion Post. It begins with a social from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Dinner is at 7:15.

For tickets call Dave Perdios at 698-7323 or Joe Sheffer at 479-7626. The cost is $25 per person.

A former Morrisette standout was a member of last year's National Junior College championship team from Massasoit Community College.

Mike Baylis has already started this season in strong fashion. In a 4-4 tie to Southwestern Michigan he fanned 20 while only walking two. The game was part of Massasoit's pre-season tour through Florida. The defending national champs finished the tour with a record of 10-3-2.

The Red Raiders fell short in their bid to become Division I state hockey champs, but the city of Quincy was not short on champion-caliber hockey players.

Quincy resident Doug Nolan was a member of Catholic Memorial's Division IA "Super 8" state championship team.

The CM juggernaut, arguably the premier hockey program in the nation, breezed to four straight wins in the Super 8 by scoring 25 goals for and giving up only four against. CM's three victims in the post-season (they played Arlington Catholic twice) lost a total of one game in a combined 60 regular season outings.

Nolan scored one goal and dishied out two assists in his team's title-clinching 5-1 win over AC.

CM finished the season with an incredible 23-1 record on their way to their fourth consecutive Division IA championship and eighth state title in nine years.

Playing for Division I state champion Boston College High was Quincy's Billy Coughlin, a junior forward. Coughlin racked up five points in the tourney and was one of coach Joe McCabe's top penalty killers throughout the season. The Eagles beat Barnstable, 7-2, in the championship game.

Archbishop Williams was another Division I tournament team that featured Quincy boys on the roster. Quincy resident Neil Mahoney, a junior, shared goaltending duties this season with Steve Peacock. Based on Mahoney's performance this season the starting job should be all his next season.

"Neil could be one of the better goaltenders in eastern Mass next year," said AWHIS Athletic Director Alan Gallotta. "He has a very bright future ahead of him."

Also on the Williams roster was sophomore forward Jamie Murphy of Quincy.

Archies was ousted from the Division I tournament by Don Bosco High, a school that also featured Quincy boys on the hockey team. Pat Connolly is a resident of Wollaston and Mike Yanovitch recently moved to Quincy from South Boston. Yanovitch was mentioned in last week's Spotlight as one of the victims of North Quincy's hard-hitting Jim Sapienza. In defense of the Bosco forward, he played against the Red Raiders despite having a broken hand. He broke it in the tournament win over Archbishop Williams.

Speaking of Don Bosco. That school will induct thirteen new members into their Athletic Hall of Fame on Saturday, April 16 at 7 p.m. at the Tremont House in downtown Boston.

At a 6 p.m. reception the jersey numbers of several Bosco athletes will be retired. Among these will be the #16 worn by hockey player Pat Logan.

Logan, whose family now resides in Quincy, died in an auto accident in 1982.

Jennifer Dondoro, a 1991 Quincy High graduate, was a captain of the 1993-94 Curry College women's basketball team.

The 5'1" guard led the team with 59 assists in 22 games for the Lady Colonels. Her best performance occurred Feb. 5 at New England College when she dishied out a career high seven assists in a 55-52 win.

In high school Dondoro lettered in softball and volleyball for two years and basketball for four years. She is now a junior psychology major at Curry.

The St. Moritz Devils Squirt Minor hockey team will be holding tryouts for next season during the week of April 25 through 29. Any interested player with a 1984 birthdate should contact coach Paul Cameron at 479-3684.

Impact Quincy Tobacco Prevention Teleconference Today

More than 50 local youths, youth advocates and educators will gather at Quincy High School today (Thursday) from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. to participate in Dr. Joycelyn Elder's national town meeting on tobacco abuse prevention.

The teleconference will showcase the first Surgeon General's report-SGR 4 KIDS-ever to be written by and for kids about tobacco use. Interested parents and community members are invited to attend.

Across the country, more than 100,000 people at 500 locations will participate via satellite downlink in the "Youth and Elders" town meeting. Quincy is one of 14 Massachusetts locations that will host the teleconference as well as coordinate local pre and post-conference activities.

"We are pleased to bring our community together to address the problem of youth and nicotine addiction," said Mitch Finnegan, Project Director of Impact Quincy. "Through the continued close association between our city's schools and Impact Quincy, we are able to be a part of a national event focusing on this very real problem. We are grateful to QHS Principal Lloyd Hill and Dr. Mary Lydon, the Director of Health Education for the school, for helping us to make this event possible."

"We are also pleased that the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program (MTCP) has provided our community with the resources to combat the powerful tobacco industry and to prevent cigarette smoking and smokeless tobacco use by our youth," said Finnegan.

During the Youth and Elders teleconference, Dr. Elders and others will discuss tobacco use by young people and the six major findings of the Surgeon General's report. A pre-recorded video-roll-in features "a day in the life" of a 12-year-old barraged by tobacco "temptations" (i.e., advertising, tobacco use at home and at school). Public health, substance abuse prevention, and education professionals will participate in a roundtable discussion on the importance of youth prevention. The Center for Disease Control's Division of Adolescent and School Health will present its seven recommendations for schools. "Home" videos submitted by youth tobacco prevention programs about activities across the nation will be shown.

After the teleconference a group planning session will be conducted involving all of the participants. Impact Quincy staff members Rhett Dodge (Tobacco Coordinator) and Eric Liam (Asian Tobacco Educator) will facilitate the discussion which will conclude the meeting.

Quincy received several grants this year from MTCP to develop a coordinated effort aimed at tobacco control within the city. The Quincy Board of Health, Manet Community Health Center and Impact Quincy worked together to submit a comprehensive package of proposals, covering everything from youth peer leadership prevention efforts to smoking cessation classes for pregnant mothers.

DICK "THE DESTROYER" KIMBER shows his high-kicking form during a demonstration Tuesday at Payton's Professional Karate Center in Quincy. Kimber, who has a career record of 17-1 with 16 KO's, will compete for the PKC world heavyweight championship Saturday in Montreal. The event, part of the PKA Karatmania VIII, will be telecast on Showtime Saturday at 9 p.m. For more information about the telecast, call Quincy Continental Cablevision at 471-3200.

College Budget Increased

The School Committee has approved a supplemental budget request of nearly $1 million for Quincy College.

College President Donald Young said the 1993-94 budget approved last July was "very conservative" about expenses.

The supplemental budget for $966,500, which was approved by the School Committee last week, was necessary because salary needs were underestimated and items such as renovations at the college, rent payments to the School Committee, and severe fuel costs were unexpected, according to Young.

The money for the supplemental budget will come "almost entirely" from anticipated tuition income, he said.

Soundproofing Yardrock Cafe On Board's March 29 Agenda

By LISA CONNELL
Joseph Hajjar, manager of The Yardrock Cafe, most properly soundproof his East Howard St. nightclub before April 16 or his business will shut down until the work is completed, said Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey following Tuesday's Licensing Board meeting.

Building Inspector Kathy Nugent cited Hajjar with building code violations on March 16 for using improper material to cover the insulation used in the process of soundproofing the club's walls.

Under such a citation, Hajjar has 30 days to complete all necessary work as ordered by the Building Department, or his business will not be allowed to operate, said Mulvey.

A compressed plywood or "chipboard" was used to cover the insulation. This type of plywood has a high flammable rating and is not allowed for use in assembly buildings, said Mulvey.

Hajjar must replace the plywood with 5/8" sheetrock, Mulvey said. As of Tuesday, 80% of the work remained undone, according to Nugent.

Licensing board officials have set a March 29 hearing date to continue addressing the problem of continuous loud music noiselevels that emanate from the club.

The loudness of the club, especially during summer evenings, has been a source of contention to area residents for many years.

Licensing board officials are eager to resolve the problem before warm weather arrives.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Nearly every mother or father has shown a child how to draw something. Some things can be portrayed on paper ... but not everything. For example, when a child asked his

Daddy how to draw a picture of love, he replied, "O.K., but first I want you to draw me a picture of the wind." After a few curved lines were put on the paper, the child exclaimed, "Daddy, I can't draw a picture of the wind. You can't see it. You can only feel it."

Feelings are individual emotions. What one person feels, another may not. One of life's greatest tragedies is to allow a feeling of love to die. It sometimes happens. Such sad feelings can often be avoided by an expression of concern and love. Anyone capable of feeling is capable of saying so. That sort of feeling always makes the listener and the speaker feel good. ... very good.

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s.

Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we're constructing a 1,645-square-foot addition to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it will mean a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

box retail anywhere in the city," he said. "My first priority is to establish a retail mix in downtown Quincy, and we've worked too long to bring retailers to the downtown.

"We are aggressively pursuing new retailers for Hancock Street in Quincy Center, and we are also pursuing retailers for the Wollaston and North Quincy sections of the city. I will not support a box retail store anywhere in the city."

MacKinnon's company, Atlantic Development Corp., wants to build a 242,500 square foot shopping center on 28 acres at the intersection of Route 53 and Southern Artery. MacKinnon said construction could start in January.

The site is next to The Falls condominiums complex, which was scale back during the recession. It is less than a mile from the downtown business district.

MacKinnon said the mall would create 500 retail jobs and generate $575,000 in tax revenue for the city.

City councillors, including Council President Michael Cheney and Councillor Timothy Cahill, said the development could provide a major economic boost but added that they will reserve judgement on the plan until they hear from Quincy Point residents.

MacKinnon said the mall would attract shoppers to Quincy's struggling downtown business district, adding that the same result has happened in other communities where his company has built large retail stores. He also said Quincy residents presently go elsewhere to shop because the downtown lacks major retailers to attract them.

MacKinnon said the mall, along with the planned redevelopment of the Grossman's site off Burgin Parkway, would help Quincy's merchants regain the money spent elsewhere.

Several Quincy Center merchants said last week they were discouraged by the proposal, saying that a mall would hurt small businesses.

For the next nine months, the project will undergo a series of reviews for its impact on the environment, traffic, and neighboring residents and businesses.

Atlantic Development initiated that review process Feb. 28, when it filed an environmental notification form with the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency.

Quincy Planning Director Richard Meade said the developer must also seek a permit from the city, as Home Depot did to build its store in West Quincy. The permit would require a two-thirds vote from the City Council for approval.

MacKinnon said he plans to buy two separate pieces of land to carry out the project. He has an agreement to purchase 12 acres from N.H. Funding Corp., which recently foreclosed on the property adjacent to fire-gutted Eddie's Diner.

Pledges $22.3 M. To Combat Problem Weld Takes Strong Stand Here On Domestic Violence

Gov. William Weld took a strong stand against domestic violence at a round-table discussion Tuesday at Quincy City Hall and pledged $22.3 million to help combat the problem.

The discussion was attended by several city officials, including Mayor James Sheets, DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) Executive Director Marilyn Terry, Judge Charles Black, presiding justice of Quincy District Court and Capt. Thomas Frane of the Quincy Police Department, who has helped implement police protocol in domestic violence in the city.

Weld, who has proposed that juveniles 14 years of age and older be tried as adults for serious crimes, said he is impressed with Quincy's history in the war against domestic violence. He added that the state has a similarly strong record concerning the issue and it will now get stronger as he has proposed a budget that earmarks $22.3 million for domestic violence-related purposes.

Weld said the $22.3

million will be divided as listed:

- $13 million for battered women's shelters.
- $3.2 million for district attorneys' domestic violence units.

- $2.5 million for the Massachusetts Office of Victims' Assistance.

- $1 million for treatment and counseling programs for batterers.

- "A little less than $1 million" to make sure each Department of Social Services area office employs a specialist in domestic violence.

Menino Denies Calling Sheets A 'Crybaby'

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Boston Mayor Thomas Menino does not think Mayor James Sheets is a crybaby, Sheets said Tuesday.

Sheets was responding to a column in Tuesday's Boston Herald that quoted Menino as calling Sheets a "crybaby" because of his concerns over Boston's plans concerning a gun range on Moon Island. The two cities have been negotiating since last September over the use of the island, which is owned by Boston but falls within Quincy city limits in the Squantum section of the city.

Sheets said when he questioned Menino about the column Tuesday, Menino denied ever having made the comments. Menino also said he would have a letter drafted and sent to Sheets apologizing for what the newspaper printed, according to Sheets.

The mayor said he and Menino have been friends for years and their relationship will not be affected by the column.

He also expressed amusement at the terminology that The Herald used.

"It's the first time in my life I've ever been called a 'crybaby,'" said Sheets. "But when you do this job long enough, I guess you eventually get called everything."

Metro Contract Expiring, Other Changes Planned

Two-Hour Free Parking Set For Ross Garage July 1

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's parking system will undergo some changes by the end of this fiscal year, one of which will be the addition of free parking, according to Mayor James Sheets.

Quincy's five-year contract with Metropolitan Parking Systems Inc., which includes services at the Ross Parking Garage and the Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center, expires June 30, Sheets said Tuesday. While he would not comment on whether the contract would be renewed, Sheets said that changes are planned for the parking system, including daily, free parking at the Ross garage.

Specifically, Sheets said he plans to offer free parking on the ground level of the garage for the first two hours someone parks there. After two hours, motorists would have to pay for the parking.

The upper levels of the garage would be used mainly for downtown merchants and other people who park there on a regular monthly basis, the mayor said. He added that the free parking and any other changes to the system will go into effect by July 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

Sheets said the reason for the free parking is to offer shoppers an extra incentive to shop in Quincy Center and create a quicker turnover of vehicles at the site. He also said the free parking is one more step in his plan to revitalize the downtown section of the city.

"My hope is that the downtown will serve as a model for revitalization of other cities and towns," said Sheets.

The mayor said that any financial loss the city may suffer from the loss of paid parking should be offset by the additional shoppers and other aspects of the downtown revitalization. He added that while free parking is not currently planned for the Hancock Parking Lot, "I'm sure any decisions we make regarding the Ross garage will affect the Hancock lot as well."

Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon said a recent study compiled by Metropolitan Parking indicates that there are

First Of Several Celebrations City To Honor Cashman With Special Day April 29

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
Quincy's Olympic hero Karen Cashman will be feted Friday, April 29 with a day in her honor featuring a public recognition and awards ceremony at her alma mater, North Quincy High School.

April 29 will be proclaimed "Karen Cashman Day" in Quincy by Mayor James Sheets. Cashman's appearance at North Quincy High will culminate the school's annual Pride Week festivities.

The Cashman ceremony will be the first in a series of civic celebrations planned in her honor. Details regarding other celebrations will be announced in the near future.

The festivities at North Quincy High School April 29 will be open to the public. The program will be highlighted by presentations to the bronze medalist. She will also speak to the students.

Cashman, a 1989 graduate of North Quincy High School, won an Olympic bronze medal at the Winter Games earlier this year as a member of the U.S. women's short-track speedskating relay team. She is one of only 13 U.S. Olympians to win medals at the Lillehammer games, and one of three from Massachusetts.

Cashman's performance at the Games helped make U.S. Olympic history. The United States won a total of 20 medals, the highest U.S. total at any Winter Olympiad, said a

Sheets Clarifies His Position On Wal-Mart

Mayor James Sheets has clarified his position on the possibility of Wal-Mart moving to Quincy.

Sheets told The Sun last week that he would not support Wal-Mart or any other "box retail" business or "superstore" coming to Quincy if it would hurt the city's downtown section.

He also implied that a shopping plaza that has been proposed by a Hingham developer for a site near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point—the anchor store of which may or may not be Wal-Mart—could be harmful to the downtown and its merchants.

"I will not support a box retail store anywhere in the city," he said.

Two days later, Sheets was heard on the city's radio station, WJDA, saying he could work with Wal-Mart officials in a plan to bring the company to Quincy if it was determined it would not harm Quincy Center.

Sheets said Tuesday that the statement he made on the radio is indeed his position, adding that he may have not fully stated his feelings when he spoke to The Sun last week.

"I may not have made myself as clear as I should have," he said.

Sheets said if Wal-Mart does turn out to be the anchor store of the proposed shopping plaza, it has not yet been determined if it would have a harmful effect on the downtown. He added that such a determination will require further review by city officials.

City Observes Weights Week

Mayor James Sheets has proclaimed March 27 to April 2 Weights and Measures Week in the city.

Sheets' official proclamation notes that the first Weights and Measures Law was signed into law in March 1799 by President John Adams, who cited the "necessity of Standards of Weight and Measure as a public service."

Property Tax Bills Due May 2

Property tax bills for the fourth quarter of Fiscal 1994 have been mailed and are due Monday, May 2, announces Quincy Tax Collector Dana Childs.

Payments received in the Collector's Office after May 2 will be assessed a late charge of 14 percent back to May 2. Payments are considered late if received after May 2, regardless of postmark date, Childs said.

Property owners who have not received a bill should contact the Collector's Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. New owners since Jan. 1, 1993 are advised that tax bills for 1994 are issued in the name of the prior owner. They should obtain a copy of the bill from the prior owner or the Tax Office.

Failure to receive a bill does not negate interest for late payments, Childs said.

Sheets Wants CDBG Funds For Fight Against Crime

Mayor James Sheets is hoping that Community Development Block Grant funds can be used to help fund the city's war against crime in the future.

The mayor made his comments during a panel discussion Monday afternoon at Quincy City Hall that kicked off the city's celebration of Community Development Week (March 28 to April 3).

Sheets called crime is the "number one problem" facing the both the city and the entire country, adding that the reason it has become so is the "decline of America's families."

Sheets said he has spoken to Sen. Edward Kennedy and U.S. Rep.

Gerry Studds about adding crime-fighting money to the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program which would, in part, fund athletic and school programs that would give teenagers something constructive to do with their time and take pressure off families who constantly have to monitor their children's actions.

"The problem is at the local level," said Sheets. "I cannot overemphasize the importance of the CDBG Program. The program has become integral to the heart and soul of every community in the country."

Studds, who attended Monday's panel discussion, said when the CDBG Program was established 20 years ago, it replaced an "alphabet soup" approach by the government to fund community needs. The congressman added that he will continue to support the program in Washington.

"We will continue to do whatever we can to make (the program) continue to grow," he said.

Others who discussed community development issues and challenges included School Committee member JoAnn Bragg, Quincy Council on Aging President John Noonan, Citywide Parents Council President Ed Fitzgerald, Americans with

Teen Center Should Open In April, Bragg Says

A new center for teenagers should be open at two sites in the city by the start of students' school vacation in April.

School Committee member JoAnn Bragg made the announcement at Monday's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program panel discussion at Quincy City Hall. The event kicked off a week-long series of events pertaining to Community Development Week (March 28 to April 3) in the city.

Bragg, who serves as executive director of the city's Committee to Establish Youth Centers, said the new center—which has been named "The Teen Getaway"—should open officially next month at two sites—the South Shore YMCA, 79 Codding St. and Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St. If all goes according to plan, the center should open by the beginning of April vacation.

"That's what we're shooting for," said Bragg.

The YMCA site will be the center's main registration site where photo I.D.'s will be made and prerequisite contracts are signed by the teachers, Bragg said. It will be open Saturdays from 8 to 10 p.m., and the church site will be open Fridays from 8 to 10 p.m., she noted.

Bragg added that the center will provide teens with activities that will help keep them off the streets.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

GREGG T. REVINE, PERSONAL FINANCIAL PLANNER

A GUIDE TO IRA TRANSFERS, ROLLOVERS AND TAXES

Many people assume that if they already participate in a qualified retirement plan at work they can't contribute to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). You can set up an IRA account in just one of the great deals it used to be.

An IRA retirement fund can be set up with an investment of $2,000 annually ($2,250 for a spousal IRA). However IRAs are tax deductible only for people who don't participate in their company retirement plan or who make less than $35,000 (or single people) or $50,000 (for married couples). This restriction also applies to spouses when one of them has a company plan. In addition, if both the spouse and the IRA owner are over 50, the spouse can deduct the IRA.

The interest earned on the IRA, however, accumulates tax-free until withdrawn, even if you have a company plan. That's why it will make sense for you to set up an account.

You shouldn't set up and forget an IRA, though, and just wait for the payoff to come. You should keep an eye on performance, and switch to a different IRA if returns consistently are below the market. The large number of fund choices may seem overwhelming at first, but with research can be narrowed considerably by looking only at the funds that best fit your financial needs. Many people seek help from an investment advisor or financial planner in deciding where to put their money.

IRA transfers. An IRA transfer moves money from one trustee to another trustee directly to another. You don't take possession of the money, so the transaction isn't reported to the IRS. You can transfer funds as often as you wish, without any consequences. This flexibility is a good way to diversify where you put your money and to take advantage of market changes. IRA rollovers. Generally, there are three types of rollovers:

• Qualified retirement plan to an IRA. With this type of rollover, you can — under certain circumstances — delay paying ordinary income taxes and the mandatory 10 percent federal income tax withholding on the distribution.

• Rollovers from a segregated rollover IRA to a qualified plan. If you've set up a segregated (rollover) IRA account that contains only an eligible distribution from your employer's tax-qualified plan, you may be able to move those funds — and any earnings — into another employer's plan in the future.

• Rollovers from one IRA to another. To avoid paying taxes when rolling over your money from one IRA to another, the assets must be deposited in the second IRA within 60 days after you take possession of money from the first IRA. This type of transaction is allowed only once every 12 months for each IRA you own.

Tax implications. If you end up paying a six percent penalty tax because of IRA contributions above the allowable limit, then you need to report this penalty to the IRS on Form 5329. This form, which has other uses including the reporting of the 10 percent penalty tax on premature distributions, generally is attached to a IRA owner's federal income tax return.

According to IRS regulations, all contributions — including income contributions — must be reported on Form 5329, even if they're removed from the IRA later.

If you're considering any IRA transaction — setting up, transferring or rolling over — the smartest first step is to talk to your accountant, tax preparer or financial planner. These professionals can help you avoid any pitfalls in the process and get you started on an overall strategy that can keep you from being overtaxed during the coming year.

What The Judge Said

A juvenile judge recently sounded off about teenagers who complain they have nothing to do or no places to go.

John (Butch) Mahoney, coordinator of Social Health in the Quincy Public Schools, reports that the verbal salvo came after three teenage boys—products not of the slums, but of a good eastern suburb of Cleveland,—were found guilty of 11 burglaries.

MAHONEY

Why did they commit them?

They had "nothing to do."

This prompted the juvenile court judge to deliver this rebuke passed along by Mahoney:

"Always we hear the plaintive cry of a teenager: What can we do? Where can we go? The answer is clear: Go home! Hang the storm windows, paint the woodwork, rake the leaves, mow the lawn, wash the car, learn to cook, scrub the floors, repair the sink, build a boat, get a job. Help the minister, priest or rabbi. Help the Red Cross, the Salvation Army. Visit the sick, assist the poor. Study your lessons, and when you're through, and not too tired, read a book.

"Your parents do not owe you entertainment. Your community does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe the world your time, energy, and talents so that no one will be at war, in poverty, or sick, or lonely again.

"In plain simple words: Grow up! Quit being a crybaby. Get out of your dream world and develop a backbone, not a wishbone. Start acting like a man or woman.

"You're supposed to be mature enough to accept some of the responsibility your parents have carried for years. They have nursed, protected, helped, appealed, begged, excused, tolerated, and denied themselves needed comfort so that you could have every benefit. You have no right to expect them to bow to your every whim and fancy.

"In heavens name grow up and go home!"

QUINCY IS SHAPING up as a crucial battleground in this year's Norfolk County Commission race. Quincy Building Inspector Matt Mulvey is running out of Weymouth and Selectman Thomas Reynolds out of Braintree. Both are Democrats and looking to take the seat away from Stoughton Republican, Bruce Olson. The Quincy vote could make the difference for Mulvey or Reynolds. No Quincy candidate is in this one because former City Clerk John Gillis is a commissioner and only one can serve from a community.

GOOD NEWS: Fr. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church, one of Quincy's all-time popular clergymen, is out of the hospital and convalescing at the rectory. He still has to take it easy for a while. Glad to see you back, Father.

City Workers Face Pay Cuts In '32 Budget

Five to 10 percent wage reductions for all city employees except teachers appeared certain following a conference among Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, Council President John P. Flavin and Chairman Eddie D. Carson of the Council's Finance Committee.

The move to cut pay came after John J. Hughes and Edward Hanrahan, president of the Police and Firemen's Relief Associations respectively, told the mayor that their members refused to accept his plan to donate 2 1/2 week's pay back to the city.

President Flavin said the Council, which had a plan of its own for the donation of two weeks' pay by employees, will pass the budget for 1932 within a week and it will include a sliding scale of wage cuts.

Mayor McGrath also ordered his own salary as mayor to be cut by $500 in the budget but there was some question whether or not that was legal since the law provides that his salary may not be increased or decreased while he is in office.

PLUMBERS STRIKE

More than 25 journeymen plumbers in union shops throughout the city went out on strike in a dispute with the master plumbers over the size of a pay cut they would take to help the shops through difficult economic times.

The journeymen had agreed to take a wage cut from $1.50 to $1.25 an hour but the masters had given an ultimatum that they would only pay $1.12 1/2 per hour.

LIQUOR DOWN DRAIN

More than 600 gallons of confiscated wine was poured down the drain in the rear of the police station and some 500 gallons of other liquors were sent to Boston to be disposed of by the state.

The illegal booze was confiscated over the past eight months in raids in Quincy by Police Lt. James H. Whelan, the chief liquor officer, and his men.

Yeans For Another Adams In The White House

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Although a staunch Republican in my doddering dotage at 86, I freely admit our nation's worst scandals occurred on the Grand Old Party's watch: the heinous Teapot Dome disgrace in the mid-'20s....and unforgettable Watergate....of recent memory.

History documents that President Warren G. Harding who died suddenly and somewhat mysteriously on a train in San Francisco in 1923, had Teapot Dome inexorably linked to his name. Simply because he was betrayed by disloyal, money-hungry members of his cabinet, even though the personable poker-playing Ohio newspaper editor was never proved to be personally involved.

Insofar as out-of-control Watergate and Richard Nixon are concerned, just remember he compiled a fine record in office until suddenly he went paranoid and berserk. When he determined that, at whatever cost, he was going to stonewall and cover up the amateurish little break-in that didn't amount to a tinker's damn, politically, until our "peerless leader" went off his rocker....and I mean that literally.

So irate was I, a devout Republican, at Nixon's egregious behavior that I air-mailed letters to each and every member of the Judiciary Committee in Washington. Asking, in essence, that "Tricky Dick" be given a fair trial....and then booted out of office....post-haste.

As regards the reigning president, now on the hot seat, I'm afraid words such as ethics, integrity and morals are sadly lacking in his character....or lack thereof. Replaced by these well-documented terms in Bill Clinton's lexicon: lecher and draft dodger, the latter in its most despicable form. Such as railing against U.S. involvement in Vietnam, in, of all places he could have chosen: Communist Russia. While red-blooded Americans were fighting and dying. And, for good measure, you can toss into the Clinton character mix: "cover-up" and "scandal." Kind of a sad characterization for a likeable guy and forceful speaker who can win you over with his charm.

If only history-rich Quincy could provide another president like native sons John and John Quincy Adams....with characters as rock-ribbed as everlasting Quincy granite....to extricate us from this all-consuming miasma. Perhaps the politically-naive but unalterably honorable and honest Bill Weld would meet the Adams family's high standards.

Remember The Social Workers

Editor, The Quincy Sun: In the course of a normal business day, how many of us will interview a young boy who has been sexually abused?

How many of us will transport a battered woman and her children to the fleeting safety of emergency shelter?

How many of us will teach a teenage mother parenting skills that were never learned as a child?

How many of us will help an HIV-involved father make funeral arrangements for his child who recently died from AIDS?

March is Social Worker month; April is Child Abuse Prevention month. It is a time that we remember the critical, yet often thankless, role that social workers play in rebuilding broken lives. Most social workers do more good in a week than most of us will do in our lifetimes. Their quiet, unheralded and often heroic actions should not go unnoticed.

Those Potholes

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I am expressing my concern about the conditions of the street and sidewalks in the City of Quincy.

There is danger for the people who are walking and have to walk in the streets. Arnold Street must be plowed for Emergency Service vehicles so they can get down the street.

Get the pot holes fixed as soon as possible!

What is the point in having a hot-line to report pot holes if they don't get fixed?

Easter Bread

As if this long cold winter wasn't bad enough, our daughter Sue caught the chicken pox from her three children which made them all housebound for nearly three weeks.

But the scars are fading and we are all looking to a warm spring and the coming of Easter.

Here is a wonderful recipe for Easter Bread from my niece Jean. I hope to start baking today. They last for days and are delicious with tea or coffee in the mornings.

Easter Bread

- 1 stick of butter or margarine
- 2 eggs beaten
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 1/2 teaspoons anniseite or almond flavoring

2 or three raw eggs for top of round bread

Mix the butter or margarine with the sugar. Add the beaten eggs and stir. Add the flour, baking powder, milk and flavoring, and beat until smooth. Roll out on floured board and make a round bread with a hole in the center. Leave a little dough to make strips to hold the uncooked eggs in place. Place the raw eggs (with shells on of course) around the top of the bread then with the strips, secure each egg.

Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Make an icing with 2 cups powdered sugar and a little water. When cooled, brush on the icing and then place colored sprinkles on top. The eggs are also delicious as well as the bread.

Helping The Homeless Help Themselves

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. Joe, we've just suffered through one of the worst winters in city history. Did that reflect in the number of people you've helped in the past few months?

A. We have been over capacity, beginning back in November and right through January and February. We've been running at somewhere around 102 percent capacity. And fortunately, we haven't had to transport that many people out to other shelters in the area, but we have been over capacity. So I think that has been a sign of a very rough winter.

Q. Do you have any idea how many people you serve in an average week, or an average day?

A. Through these past winter months, we've had at least 70 people an evening that have passed through our capacity of 65.

Q. Sixty-five beds?

A. Sixty-five beds. But we can comfortably shelter 70. The highest I think we've been over this year is about 10, so we've hit 75 at one particular point during the winter. Unduplicated numbers of people who pass through the shelter, it can be anywhere from 10 to 20 people a week.

I think that one of the things people have to understand is that the homeless are not a static population; again, it's a constantly changing population, people who are temporarily homeless or people who are in the midst of a crisis and have no other place to turn but to the shelter.

Q. What other services do you offer besides shelter?

A. One of the things we try to avoid here is that we don't want the shelter to be simply a warehouse where people can come to. How we see ourselves, oftentimes, is as brokers of services. We make every effort when a person comes in, based on what that individual's needs are, to move that person beyond homelessness, beyond the shelter. And how we do that is by trying to integrate that person back into the services that do exist within the community.

So the types of services that we offer here at Father Bill's Place have included outreach for substance abuse and alcoholism, (and) outpatient treatment that's offered through Bay State Community Services. We offer 20 hours of nursing a week to work with our specific clients. We do have some tutorial programs for people who are working toward a G.E.D. or trying to improve themselves in that way.

But the strongest piece we offer at the shelter is case management; that is, a counselor that works with the individual client to help develop a plan to move beyond the shelter in some way. We offer three meals a day at the shelter. So again, we provide the basics, but we also try to link people back up with the other services they need outside the shelter.

Q. What are the main sources of budgeting/funding that you have? Do you have to rely heavily on private donations?

A. The main source of our funding is the Department of Public Welfare's emergency shelter monies that they provide. That represents about 60 percent of our budget (which was projected to total around $729,000 for FY94). We rely on private donations a great deal, both cash donations but also in-kind donations.

For example, one of the great in-kind donations that has helped keep our shelter solvent and able to put more resources back into services for the clients has been the Meal-A-Month Program, where various church groups and civic organizations and even groups of friends can come in to prepare a meal and serve a meal to 70 people on a given night. That has been a fantastic source for us. It serves us well because, again, it's a needed resource, but it's also a good experience for the people who participate in it, to begin to realize the true nature of homelessness. The people can realize that these (homeless) are their friends and their neighbors, and different people who might be impacted or affected by homelessness.

Also, the City of Quincy has been very positive in developing some of the resources necessary for the operational costs of the shelter; through the Emergency Shelter Grant and community planning and development, it has worked closely to assure that we can secure those federal funds that are necessary to help assist the shelter as well. And that represents around 10 percent of our budget.

Q. Have you ever had to turn anyone away because of lack of space at the shelter?

A. We have never had to turn anyone away because of a lack of shelter space. We have often had to make difficult decisions to turn people away because we feel that they present perhaps a danger to themselves or to other people. But if we're facing (overcrowding) in terms of numbers, what we try to do is transport (the homeless), particularly to Long Island Shelter.

Q. And do you think the city should have more shelters?

A. My feeling is that we do not need more emergency shelter beds in Quincy. In fact, I don't think we need, in addressing the problems of homelessness, to have any more emergency shelter beds anywhere. I think that what we need to do is start looking at the problems that exist out there and are leading people to homeless shelters. So I think that we need to look at affordable housing, we need to look at substance abuse treatment, we need to look at how we deal with the mentally ill within our communities, and I don't think that shelters are the answer. I think that shelters were meant to be a response to an emergency crisis, and it's time now to look at better ways of dealing with the numbers of people we see who pass through these programs.

Q. There are some stereotypes and misconceptions about homelessness, such as that people bring it on themselves because they don't want to work, etc. What are your feelings about that?

A. My feelings are that homelessness is a very complex problem. People who wind up in a homeless shelter can be there for a variety of reasons. I think that the stereotypes that people have are what we see so much, and that is, at times—particularly not so much here in Quincy, but perhaps in the Downtown Crossing (area) of Boston—that our image of the homeless person is the substance abuser who's resistant to treatment, who is out begging for change in the streets, that is the view that many people have of who the homeless are.

In reality, it's much more complex than that. We have people who pass through the shelter who are homeless for a variety of reasons. Some are homeless purely because of the economic climate that we live in today. They're not collecting welfare; in fact, they're not collecting any benefits at all. Their unemployment has run out. They may be semi- or unskilled workers for whom jobs have dried up in this area, or single adults who perhaps have no other basis for support, and wind up as a result with no place to go but the homeless shelter.

Q. One of the people who helped found the shelter was Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy, for whom it was named. Why was he singled out as the person to name the shelter after?

A. Well, I think that the main reason that the shelter was named after Father Bill McCarthy was because, back 11 or 12 years ago, before homelessness was even a known issue and before people were talking about it, Father McCarthy was already helping people who were in difficult straits, and in many ways he was a lone voice in terms of the whole issue of dealing with homeless adults.

And my understanding, although again, I wasn't here at the time it was named after him, is it was kind of the unanimous decision of the (QISC) board at that time, that it was actually most appropriate, because of the time and energy and the risks that he took on behalf of homeless adults. Long before there had been a Father Bill's Place, Father Bill had been sheltering homeless adults over in the school of St. John's in the basement shelter there (currently used as an "overflow" shelter). So Father McCarthy was the one who was willing to stand up and take the risks associated with it, and it was only fitting that it should be named after him.

Q. This must be hard work, but very rewarding.

A. Again, it is rewarding work, and I'm sure how hard it is. I'm more impressed, quite honestly, with the number of volunteers and the staff people that I see who pass through here. What's really impressive to me is the person who's out working 40 hours a week on his or her own job, and finds time to come in on a weekend to cook a meal or to help the homeless.

The rewarding element for me has actually been the opportunity to witness the generosity, and the willingness and dedication of people, particularly within this community. That's been the most impressive piece, and in many ways, the most rewarding piece.

Acupuncture As A Treatment For Cigarette Withdrawal

By DANIEL KARP
Licensed Acupuncturist
Acupuncture is a highly effective treatment for cigarette withdrawal.

With patients who expressed a strong determination to stop smoking, the success rate over several years of clinical experience is an amazing 90 percent. If you have made up your mind to stop smoking and would like some help, acupuncture can definitely help you.

Why is acupuncture so effective in helping people stop smoking? Because it is highly effective in treating the three major problems people encounter as they go through withdrawal: nicotine cravings, tension and irritability, and "breaking the habit."

Our patients routinely report a significant drop in their craving for nicotine—even after one or two treatments. Acupuncture is well-known as a muscle and nerve relaxant, and the calming and soothing effects of acupuncture are tremendously helpful during the tense period of withdrawal.

Finally, acupuncture treatment of the nervous system can help a person break the cigarette habit by interrupting the reflex habit (hand-mouth reflex) store in the brain, nerves and muscles.

If you are ready to kick the habit, I can help you.

For more information, call Acupuncture Associates of the South Shore, 12 Dimmock St., Quincy, 471-5577.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT CONSTIPATION

That uncomfortable bloated feeling settles in on just about everyone from time to time. What can you do to avoid constipation? Begin with a careful look at your diet. Replace foods containing refined white flour and sugar with whole-grain products. Eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, and avoid high-fat foods, particularly cheese. Drink six to eight glasses of water a day, and exercise regularly. Constipation can also be a symptom of an underlying problem. Check with your doctor if you experience a sudden, unexplained change in bowel function, if pain or unexplained weight loss accompanies these changes, if you notice blood in the stool or if constipation lasts longer than a week.

P.S. Pay attention to what is normal for you. Not everyone needs a daily bowel movement to be in good health.

A bowl of fiber-rich popcorn can often alleviate constipation. If you'd like more information, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2560. Office hours are by appointment. Our office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Remember, April is Cancer Control Month. Talk to your physician or call this office to learn more about how you can reduce your risk of cancer.

Disabilities Act Equal Opportunity Administrator Janet Ellis, Quincy Housing Partnership President Ed Nelson and Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix.

Also speaking were Mary Greendale, administrator for community services for the state Executive Office of Community Development (EOCD) and Robert Brown, Boston HUD (Housing and Urban Development) representative.

The city is celebrating Community Development Week with a number of events. The special week is being presented by the CDBG Program, Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development, and Sheets' office.

Similar celebrations are being held in communities throughout the country between March 28 and April 3, the week designated by the National Community Development Council.

Since 1974, the CDBG Program has operated to provide local governments with the resources to develop viable urban communities by providing housing in a suitable living environment, as well as expanding economic opportunities for persons of low and moderate income.

The city has received millions of dollars for poor and middle-income residents since the inception of the program under President Richard Nixon. Quincy received nearly $2.3 million in community block grants this fiscal year out of $4.4 billion distributed nationally, and expects to receive about $2.5 million in FY95.

Funds from the program are used by thousands of neighborhood-based non-profit groups and organizations throughout the country to address neighborhood and human services needs. The program has impacted local economies through job creation and retention, physical redevelopment, and improved tax bases.

The week's events began Monday with the City Hall panel discussion. On Tuesday, about 40 city officials and community leaders took a trolley tour through Quincy to see renovated homes, buildings accessible to the disabled, public facilities and other projects financed by community development grants.

The city's federally-funded community centers also held events on Monday and Tuesday. Among them was a chess exhibition Monday night at the Germantown Neighborhood Center featuring chess master Allan Bennett, a life member of the U.S. Chess Federation. He will also play again 36 people tonight (Thursday) at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

Scheduled events include:

Wednesday, March 30

social activities and have positive alternatives to substance and violence abuse," she said. "We need to reach out to them and offer them alternatives and encouragement to make healthy lifestyle choices. If we do this, we may be able to help curb the ever-growing violence and drug abuse that faces our young people."

The Committee to Establish Youth Centers will need about $30,000 to run the programs and only has $5,000 in hand from fundraising and a federal grant through Impact Quincy. Bragg has applied for federal community development grants to cover the rest.

Bragg noted, however, that both sites will be able to run without the additional money, although they would have to be open fewer months and have fewer activities. Depending on the availability of funding, The Teen Getaway hopes to offer sports, video games, board games, cable television and other attractions for the teens, Bragg said.

Bellotti Office Hour At City Hall Friday

Home Opener April 11 At Adams Field Sylvia Sees Returning Seniors As Key To Improvement

By KERRY BYRNE
Quincy High School baseball coach Bob Sylvia will depend on the leadership of 11 returning seniors to help his ball club improve over last year's 500 squad.

These seniors will face a stiff test as they open the season with games against tough Old Colony League opponents Taunton, Weymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham.

"We play in a very competitive league," said Sylvia. "It's a very deep league and every game will be a challenge."

In order to compete Sylvia will rely heavily on shortstop/pitcher Tom Malvesti, Quincy's top player.

"Tom is a great pure baseball player. He'll also be our ace on the mound. We'll be counting heavily on his pitching," said Sylvia.

Also spending time on the mound for the Presidents will be seniors Steve Miller, Sean MacDonald, Chris Delisle and Jason Dalrymple and junior Shaun Kivlan. Hampering the pitching staff will be the fact that all these boys are righties.

"There is a definite advantage to having a lefty, but a good lefty is hard to come by. We have some strong pitchers and we should be able to overcome this," said Sylvia.

Eighteen players are fighting for positions on the varsity squad. At catcher are senior Jon Gangi and sophomore Joe Biagini, both of whom saw considerable action behind the plate last year. Also looking for playing time is J.R. Ryan, a top freshman prospect.

First basemen are seniors Jimmy Menz and Pat Donovan and the junior Kivlan. At second base will be either senior Chris Cotter or sophomore Jeff Russell. Looking for time on the hot corner are senior Mike Caparale and freshman Mark Glynn.

Besides sharing pitching duties, Malvesti and Russell will both see action at shortstop. The outfielding crew will include MacDonald, Delisle, Dalrymple and fellow seniors Tim Messing and Dave D'Olympio. Junior Steve Barrett will also serve as an outfielder.

Several of these boys played a lot of ball last year. Malvesti, Miller, Gangi, Biagini, Cotter and Caparale were all key contributors to last year's club and Sylvia feels that this will be a key to the success of the Presidents this year.

"We have some good players returning and we hope to have a good season, but until you get a look at the rest of the league you can't really judge yourself," said Sylvia. "Depth will play a role. Will your pitching hold up - injuries, these are the factors that could make or break you."

Nice weather last week gave Quincy the opportunity to practice outdoors on two different occasions, which is unusual this early in the practice season. They also got a good look this past Saturday when they scrimmaged North Quincy.

Quincy opens their season Monday afternoon, April 11, at Adams Field against league power Taunton.

Sylvia will be assisted this year by J.V. coach Mike Draicchio, freshmen coach Larry Taglieri and general manager George Peachey.

"Larry has an excellent group of freshmen to work with, and we look for good things from those boys too," said Sylvia.

Opens Season April 11 At Plymouth Donovan: New Look North Eyes Solid Year

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The spring sports season has arrived at North Quincy High School as the baseball team prepares for a season that ninth year head coach Leo Donovan is calling a "a whole new look" for his team.

North, coming off an 8-10 record last year, will open its season Monday, April 11 at Plymouth. Their first home game is scheduled for Wednesday, April 13 (field condition pending) against Falmouth at Adams Field.

"Overall, I think we started with good practices and good turnouts," said Donovan, who has compiled a 54-103 record as head coach. "The kids are trying very hard, and we are looking forward to a solid year."

The Old Colony League is expected to be strong once again and North hopes to be up for the task.

"We hear that the OCL is strong and that Falmouth and more likely Barnstable will be the two teams to beat this year," Donovan said.

In a rebuilding process, Donovan said he will rely on three returning players to play a key role in the team's success. They are George Wirtz, Danny Duncan and Jim Sapienza. The trio will serve as tri-captains this season.

The pitching staff will consist of Duncan, junior Sean Dolbeare, sophomore Steve Manning and senior Steve Roberts as starters. Senior Mike Santoro will man the bullpen and make an occasional start. Junior Jesse Casler is also competing for a spot on the staff.

The starting infielders will be junior Dan Reynolds at first base, senior Chris Hancock at second, Wirtz at shortstop and senior A.J. Carthas at third. The starting catcher is yet to be filled, but expect Duncan and Dolbeare (when they are not pitching) to be called on. Backup positions have not yet been set as Donovan looks at other pitchers and outfielders to get a shot at an infield position.

In the outfield, Sapienza and Duncan will likely start two of the three positions. The third starter will be selected from a list of candidates that includes junior Jeremy Conley, senior John Downey, senior Brian Oliver and junior Steve Heroux.

The Raiders will use the designated hitter this season, but the DH will be selected on a game-by-game basis.

"The boys are very excited about this year and I am too," said Donovan. "There will be a whole new look to the North Quincy baseball team."

Leo Donovan has both his assistant coaches returning this year. They are Dave Perdios, the jayvee coach, and Jack Elderbridge, the freshman coach.

James Brooks To Compete In National Judo Tourney

James Brooks, 162 Monroe Rd., Quincy, is scheduled to compete in the 1994 National Judo Tournament at the University of California at Irvine April 9.

Brooks will compete for the national title and a chance to represent the U.S. at the 1996 Atlanta Olympic Games.

Brooks has worked for almost 20 years for the chance to compete on this level. He placed first in the 1993 New England Championships. Recently, he began training with the U.S. Olympic coach, Jim Pedro, as well as training with Judo champions from other countries.

Brooks has taken a leave of absence from his job to pursue his Olympic dream full-time. Many area businesses and organizations are supporting him as he travels across the country to compete for the national championship and a spot on the 1996 Olympic team.

Track

Shot-Put, Sprints Keys To QHS Boys' Success

With a large group of athletes turning out for this year's team, a group which includes a host of big, burly shot-putters, Quincy High School boys' track coach Bob Noble looks to field one of the most competitive Quincy teams in recent years.

Senior shot-putter Butch Palazza will be one of the top performers in the Old Colony League this season. Palazza heads up a list of large weight event (i.e. shot put and discus) competitors. This list includes juniors Mike Feeley and Jeff Burrell and sophomores Peter Kolson and Mark Toeffler. All but Kolson weigh in at 250 pounds or better. Besides being the defending OCL indoor track shot put champion, Palazza also qualified for the states in the discus last spring.

Quincy will also be strong at the other end of the track and field spectrum, the sprints. Sophomore Terry Bowman, who played baseball last spring but competed for Quincy during several invitational track tournaments, will be the top 100-meter man for the Presidents and should be one of the top sprinters in the league.

Also participating in the 100 will be juniors Damon Blaco and Chris McArdle. It is McArdle's first time trying out with the track team.

Other sprinters include senior co-captain Tim Dowling ("our best all-around track participant" - coach Noble) in the 200. Running in the 400-meter will be senior Sean Perkins and junior Ed Anderson.

"We expect to be good in the sprints and weight events. Quincy is historically strong in these categories," said coach Noble. "What we hope to do is improve in the distance events. This will determine how our season goes. If we have a good year in the distances it will be the first time in a long while for Quincy."

The leading distance runner for the Presidents will be junior Jim Lencki, a Boston College High transfer who will be in the blue and white for the first time this season. Junior Doug Gallagher and sophomore Hubert Lam will help provide a solid corps of milers and two-milers.

Competing in the half-mile will be junior Tuan Tan, sophomore Greg Fernald and freshman Fred Plett. Will Fitzpatrick, also a freshman, will be another of Quincy's distance competitors.

Noble hopes that the number of kids turning out for the track team will help the Presidents compete at a higher level than in years past, especially in these distance events.

"Track at Quincy High has not had a lot of participation in the past, but this is starting to change. We have 35 kids trying out this year. We have some very good kids but maybe not the depth of some other teams who regularly get large, large turnouts for the track team," said coach Noble.

Other athletes include senior co-captain Kevin Carey, junior Matt Miller and Kolson, all of whom will compete in the hurdles. Long jumpers will be Dowling and Bowman and junior Wilkins Janty will compete in the triple jump.

Throwing the javelin will be senior Ashley Davis, junior Sam Brown and sophomore Bill Dunn.

Noble credits assistant coach Jack Raymer for the high turnout on this year's track & field team. Raymer will specifically coach the weight events.

Quincy Girls Hope To Make Strides With Running Events

The Quincy High school girls' track team hopes to overcome the loss of several top field athletes with a strong group of returning mid-distance runners.

"Last year we were strong in the field events but we graduated two league all-stars in Liz Noble and Nicole Shagnessy and another top performer in Dierdre O'Donnell," said coach John Franceschini. "But this year we're very confident in our running events. We have some good veterans back as well as some very good young people."

Quincy's best group will be the mid-distance runners led by sophomore Liz Sawa and top-notch freshman Cathryn Lencki. Also running the mid-distances will be sophomores Amy Nicklas, Maryann Ashworth, Andrea Quigley and Karen Mezzetti; juniors Meagan Marini and Amy Parsons; and seniors Jaime Graham and co-captain Laurelee Summer.

Another strong group for the Quincy girls will be in the hurdles. Senior co-captain Michelle Civitarese and her sophomore sister, Suzanne, will lead the Presidents in this area. Michelle is the school record holder in the 300-meter hurdles. Boosting the Civitarese sisters will be sophomore Marina Cramer and freshman Tenta Hagrizag.

Sophomore Kasey McNaught will lead Quincy in the sprint events. She will be looking for help from senior Dana Batista, junior Terry O'Neil and freshman Marika Hewes.

Coach Franceschini feels that all these girls will provide a good base for a Quincy team which went 2-6 last year to be a strong competitor in the Old Colony League this year.

"We had a lot of holes last year, we were very young in some areas but we bring back veterans in those spots," said the coach. "The key this season will be how we score in the field events. If we can come out and score points in these events then our team will do well."

Filling the void in the field events, left by the departure of last year's top performers, will be senior Jennifer Light, junior Teresa Job, sophomore Kristen Priscella, and freshmen Jen Shagnessy, Margaret Kolson, Karen Almonacid and Felicia Tan.

Coach Franceschini feels that several of his athletes have the potential to qualify for the state meet at the end of the year and that this will make his team more competitive this season.

"Falmouth is definitely the cream of the league. They could fight for the state title, so everyone in the league will be gunning for them. But the league is very tough from top to bottom, and we'll be able to do a good job against a lot of these teams."

The Presidents open their season Thursday, April 7 at Taunton.

A DEAD BATTERY WHODUNIT

If the engine fails to turn over with the turn of the ignition key, the car battery is probably dead. As easy as it might seem for a car owner to make this diagnosis, there is more to it than merely pointing to the battery as the cause of the problem. In fact, the battery itself may not be at fault. It may be that the alternator is not working properly or the voltage regulator may not be sending enough electricity to the battery from the alternator. To check out these possibilities, the technician will likely want to see if the battery passes a "load test" to check whether or not it is taking a charge. Instead of jumping to conclusions, car owners should rely on technicians to trace the source of their car problems.

HINT: A dead battery may result from a condition as simple as a loose or corroded cable connection.

LEO AND W-LT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. Busy Weekend For Junior Red Raiders

The North Quincy Junior Red Raiders had a busy weekend, playing five games in three days while taking part in two different tournaments.

In the Milton Basketball Tourney, the Junior Raiders nipped Bridgewater in overtime, 40-38.

Trailing 20-14 at halftime, North went on a 9-0 run led by Pat Bregoli, Peter Turowski and Joe Sudak. Down 36-33, Bridgewater tied it up on a three-point play with just two seconds left. In overtime Bregoli hit a layup and a Brendan Sleeth shot provided the winning margin. Turowski and Dan Duggan made huge defensive plays as they each blocked a shot late in the overtime session. Bregoli led all scorers with 16 points. Sudak and Turowski netted 10 each.

North Quincy lost to Braintree, 44-38, in a game which they led until the final five minutes of play.

Andy Mannix was a key performer, scoring seven points and setting up his teammates with pinpoint passing. Sudak led all scorers with 11 while Turowski totaled 10. Charlie Acton and Mike Haines added four each.

The Raiders finished the Milton Tournament with a loss to a highly skilled South Boston team, 50-22.

Sudak scored 12 and Haines and Sleeth had four and three, respectively.

The Junior Red Raiders

fared better in the fourth grade division of the Sacred Heart Tourney. They reached the final four by beating Wakefield, 44-25, and Attleboro, 57-32.

The win over Wakefield was keyed by a smothering team defense led by Duggan, Haines and Acton, and the rebounding of Sudak and Turowski. Bregoli's 11 led the trio of Raiders who scored in double-digits as Sleeth and Sudak each had 10.

Hot shooting by North Quincy allowed them to run away with the victory over Attleboro. Sudak lit it up with 23 points. Acton was impressive in netting 14, while Bregoli chipped in with 12. Duggan also had a fine offensive game with six points.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

The Vancouver Canucks have Pavel Bure, the "Russian Rocket."

The Montreal Canadiens of old were known as the "Flying Frenchmen."

Now, the Quincy Mites have the "Flying Irishman," Brian O'Hanley.

In the past three weeks O'Hanley has racked up 12 goals for Campbell's Auto Service in just three Mite House League games, and he's getting better every week.

Two weeks ago he led all scorers with three goals in a 6-4 win over Purdy's Ice Cream. Last week his four goals were more than the entire Paul Harold Club scored, as his team won 11-3. This week he outdid himself with five goals in an 11-5 win over Granite Rail Pizza. Only one of the five other teams that played this weekend scored more goals than the Flying Irishman scored by himself.

This is O'Hanley's second year in the Mite House league and his first year as a member of the Quincy Mite A travel team. In the Mite A's four game championship sweep of the American Legion Post #188 Tournament held on Cape Cod, O'Hanley led his team with five goals and was second on the team with nine points.

At 4-foot-5-inches and 71 pounds, O'Hanley looks to another small guy as his role model, Bruin's defenseman Don Sweeney. Besides both being pint-sized hockey players, Sweeney and O'Hanley are also two speedy little devils.

His other hero is #91, Detroit Red Wing and Sega Hockey superstar Sergei Federov.

North Quincy High's top basketball player this past season, 6'8" senior center Jason McLeod, will be participating in the "Best 80 Games" on April 10 at Stonehill College.

The Best 80 Games are sponsored by the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association and are among the top high school all-star games in the state.

Only 40 boys, culled from a pool covering the entire commonwealth, were chosen. The players are divided into four 10-man teams based on geographical location. McLeod will be on the South squad. They will play the North team at 2:30 p.m.

After the two great wins over North Carolina and Indiana by the Boston College basketball team last week, you must all be wondering how this fits into the sports scene in Quincy.

"We are! Tell us sports guy, tell us!"

Well, the answer is quite obvious.

Add up the numbers of the four seniors on the B.C. hoop team: #12 Malcolm Huckaby, #15 Bill Curley, #23 Gerrod Abram and #10 Howard Easley. What do you get? Number 60!

As we all know there are a host of great #60s in the sports world, men such as Otto Graham and Tommy Nobis.

Graham quarterbacked the Cleveland Browns during their glory years in the AAFC and the NFL but probably never set foot in Quincy. Nobis, the all-pro middle linebacker for the Atlanta Falcons in the late 60s and 70s, was unaware of the existence of Quincy.

Therefore it is with another famous #60, Kerry Byrne, that we find a connection with Quincy. Besides his many other athletic accomplishments, Byrne is credited with single-handedly revolutionizing the game of football in the city of Quincy, and beyond. For example:

While lounging in the sun on Wollaston Beach one summer day, Byrne showed two young men, Gus Dorais and Knute Rockne, how to throw a forward pass.

When Arlington High scored an apparent last-second game winning TD against North Quincy during a blizzard in the 1992 Division IB Super Bowl, it was Byrne who told the ref to wipe off the snow to see if the Arlington player had actually crossed the goal line. His quick thinking led to a reversal of the call and saved the day for the Red Raiders.

When a tight-lipped coach named Tom Landry needed to learn the intricacies of the shotgun and the flex defense, he turned to Byrne for guidance.

And when local schoolboy coach Jack Raymer wanted a few plays to add to his arsenal, it was #60 who taught him the middle screen and the hook-and-lateral.

Women's Amateur Baseball League: Players are sought for an all women's amateur baseball league to begin playing this spring and to continue throughout the summer. If you are interested in participating please contact Katie at 337-6736 or Jon at 1-800-441-6725.

Boys' Basketball Final Four Tourney Saturday

The North Quincy Junior Red Raiders and the Sacred Heart Warriors are among the final four teams alive in the fourth grade division of the North Quincy March Madness boys' basketball Tournament.

The tourney concludes Saturday, April 2 as champions will be decided in the fourth, fifth and sixth grade divisions, and in the slam dunk and 3-point shooting contests.

At 6 p.m. the fourth grade Jr. Red Raiders will play Easton in one semifinal while Sacred Heart hopes to upset the Braintree Wamps in the other. The winners will play a championship game at 7:30, so stamina and endurance will be a key to victory.

The games begin at 12:15 p.m. when Canton faces the West Roxbury Parkway Hoosiers in the fifth grade championship game. Canton beat Hingham and knocked off previously unbeaten (26-0) Marshfield to reach the finals. West Roxbury defeated Easton and Braintree to reach the title game.

In the consolation round, Sacred Heart I will meet Sacred Heart II for North Quincy bragging rights.

The fifth grade slam dunk and 3-point shooting contests are scheduled for 1:45 p.m.

The fifth grade championship will feature two of the finest teams in the region as the Braintree Wamps take on the South Shore All-Stars at 3 p.m.

A preview of future Quincy High/North Quincy High wars will take place at 3 p.m. when the Quincy Jr. Presidents square off against Sacred Heart of North Quincy.

The fourth grade and sixth grade slam dunk and 3-point shooting contests will be held at 4:30 p.m.

The Sacred Heart fourth grade semi-finalists have been boosted by excellent team play. Philip McGillicuddy, Patrick Jaehning, Chris Ham and Jackie Liuzzo have been the scoring leaders; Tom Buckley, Billy Croke and John Fidalgo have done the bulk of the rebounding; the defensive chores have been taken care of by Matt Donovan, Dennis Thomson, Mark Maher and David Jaehning. Sacred Heart is coached by Mark Jaehning, Jim Donovan and Bob Croke.

A third Quincy fourth grade team, the St. Joseph's Blue Devils, played well but lost to a tough St. Matthew's, New York squad before rebounding to beat the Raynham Bulldogs.

The Blue Devils got excellent play from James LaFleur, Michael Kallé, Mike Lorenziano and the Ramponi boys, Matt and Steve. They are coached by Charlie Kallé and Peter Ramponi.

The games are free to the public.

Meredith Langille On State Hockey Team

Meredith Langille of 30 Edison St., Quincy, has been selected to the Massachusetts Girls, under 10, State Hockey team.

990 parking spaces at the Ross Parking Garage and 2,420 vehicles park there on a daily basis. However, Gillon said the study also reveals that only about 490 motorists, or 20 percent park there on a regular monthly basis.

Gillon said other numbers show:

•Eight percent of others who park at the garage, or about 190 motorists, stay longer than two, but less than four hours.

•Ten percent, or 240 motorists, park over four hours without taking advantage of the special $25 monthly rate offered by Metropolitan Parking.

•Sixty-two percent, or 1,500 motorists, park at the Ross garage for less than two hours. Therefore, about 62 percent of motorists would benefit from Sheets' plan to implement free parking.

Gillon said he has requested that Metropolitan compile similar numbers regarding the Hancock lot and plans to meet with the company this afternoon.

Gillon said Metropolitan Parking, which began its contract with Quincy July 1, 1989, pays the city an annual fee of $125,000 for the use of both the Ross Parking Garage and the Hancock Parking lot. The fee is paid on a monthly basis, 12 percent at a time, he said.

In addition, the city shares a portion of the gross revenue earned by Metropolitan. If the two parking areas earn between $500,000 and $600,000 in a year, the city receives 33 percent, Gillon said. Anything over $600,000 and up to $750,000 means a 50 percent take for the city, while anything over $750,000 translates into 65 percent for Quincy, he added.

Asked if he could release financial figures for the Ross garage or Hancock lot alone, Gillon said that would be impossible.

"That's not the way the contract was set up," he said. He added that it also would not be possible to estimate any financial loss that city might suffer by offering free parking.

Gillon also would not speculate on whether he thinks the mayor plans to renew the contract with Metropolitan Parking. Dan Baker, head of Metropolitan, could not be reached by phone for comment at press time.

•$700,000 to establish safe, supervised visitation centers for children to meet with abusive parents who have visiting rights to see them.

•$400,000 for legal help for women who they receive restraining orders from the state's courts.

•$250,000 for violence prevention programs in schools.

•$100,000 to train court personnel to handle domestic violence cases.

•$80,000 to train police officers to handle domestic violence cases.

Sheets said that even though he is a Democrat and Weld a Republican, he is pleased with the governor's tough stance on domestic violence and other serious criminal offenses.

"Crime is not partisan," said Sheets. The mayor added that there are "two sides" to the governor in that he is tough on the criminals but is gentle and compassionate toward the victims of crime and violence.

Terry, Black and Frane all agreed that the reason for Quincy's success in battling domestic violence is a cooperative effort between the police department, courts, district attorney's office and other agencies.

However, they also agreed that the problem is still a serious one. Terry said DOVE still receives more than 5,000 hotline calls for help each year, while Black noted that Quincy District Court handed out about 1,500 restraining orders in 1994.

sopkerson for the U.S. Olympic Committee in Colorado.

Since winning the bronze medal five weeks ago, Cashman has been busy training for the World Championships which got underway last week. At the World Team Championships in Ontario, she finished first in the 1000-meter event with a time of 1:45.97. The team finished fourth overall.

The competition continues Thursday when Cashman competes in the World Individual Championships in Guilford, England. She also has her sights set on the 1998 Games in the Japanese Alps of Nagano, Japan.

Cashman's intense training schedule, coupled with her studies at Northern Michigan University, caused city officials to postpone her special day until April 29.

Tentatively, the ceremony in honor of Cashman's achievements will be held from 9:15 to 10:40 a.m. in the North Quincy High School gymnasium which will be decorated with red, white and blue bunting as well as American and Olympic flags.

The North Quincy High School student body will play an integral role in the celebration. The program tentatively includes the singing of the National Anthem and North's school song led by a student. Another student will emcee the event and the school's Pride Committee is planning its own contribution to the program.

Presentations will likely be made by Mayor James Sheets, the City Council, North Quincy High School and the school's Pride Committee, as well as other invited guests. Further details will be announced as the celebration approaches, officials say.

The event will be broadcast live by Quincy Continental Cablevision Channel 3.

Officials are also planning a City Hall luncheon with Cashman and her family following the school celebration.

For more information, contact Recreation Director Barry Welch, chairman of the Cashman Day Planning Committee, at 376-1393.

Other committee members are:

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Easter is a time for rejoicing; one of the most joyous days of the year. It symbolizes the resurrection of life that is universally associated with springtime... the season of rebirth... meadows turning green...

... of life renewed. It is the happy time of people's faith. Easter commemorates the resurrection of Jesus Christ but, surprisingly, the theme of Easter is older than Christianity itself. Among the most ancient civilizations, rituals of rebirth were very common... Sunrise services date back to the medieval custom of praying while the sun rises. The present-day parades that mark the day had their beginning in the original Easter walk of Europe, when devout men and women congregated and walked in an orderly manner reciting prayers and singing. And one of the most charming of all customs is the Easter egg hunt for children - renewing the custom far older than Christianity. In pre-Christian time, the egg became a symbol of the rock tomb out of which Christ emerged in His resurrection. Thus, Easter is a symbol of Christianity, just as it is a symbol of the faith and hope of mankind.

Easter combines a rich mixture of laughter and solemnity. Both are good; both are needed by the soul of man...

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s. Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we're constructing a 1,645-square-foot addition to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it will mean a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

Despite FAA Ruling

Residents Vow To Continue Fight Against W.Q. Tower

By LISA CONNELL
West Quincy resident Diane Kelley needed only four words to express how she and other area residents feel about the fight to remove the controversial 700-foot radio tower in their neighborhood: "We're not giving up." Kelley wants the Zoning Board of Appeals to reopen the hearings because she believes the information presented earlier by Francis DiRico, the tower's builder, was false.

"The Zoning Board did make errors but they can correct them; they based their decision on the information presented and the information was incorrect," said Kelley.

"If the Zoning Board made their decision based on false testimony, why can't they reverse their decision? The testimony presented was not true," Kelley said.

Kelley, whose house on Argonne St. is approximately 1000 feet from the tower, is still shocked over the Federal Aviation Administration's ruling last week declaring that the tower does not threaten air traffic.

West Quincy and nearby Milton residents claim the tower is a public nuisance that devalues their property and threatens their health.

When interviewed on Friday, Kelley said she was waiting to hear from Quincy attorney Louis Cassis, counsel for the West Quincy neighborhood residents, before making future plans to appeal the FAA's decision.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath and Mayor James Sheets will look into other avenues of protesting and reversing the FAA's decision, but both admit they are not optimistic about this possibility.

"Everyone placed all their faith in the FAA and I am shocked at their (the FAA's) ruling," said Kelley.

Kelley said she and other tower abutters plan to keep the pressure on the Zoning Appeals board.

"I think it's time for the people that let this (tower) in to correct it."

Cassis and Maureen Mazrimas, Chair of the city Zoning Board of Appeals, could not be reached for comment.

Predicts Passage By August Recess Kennedy Confident Universal Health Care Will Become Law

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Sen. Ted Kennedy is optimistic a universal health care bill will be passed into law before Congress recesses this summer.

Kennedy expressed his optimism for universal health care during a visit with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors in Quincy last Thursday. He said he would not support any health care legislation that does not include universal coverage.

"I don't think the President will support anything less than universal coverage and I'm not going to support any but universal coverage." He also said he is confident the debate over health care will commence in the Senate by June.

"I think the debate in the Senate will be completed by the Fourth of July. I think the conference will be through July and hopefully passed by the August recess."

Asked if he's optimistic that will happen, Kennedy replied, "Yes I'm pretty sure. That seems to be the best guess."

Without universal health care, Kennedy said the federal budget deficit will never be resolved. He pointed out 85 percent of the increase in the debt comes through Medicare and Medicaid.

"The most popular thing you can do as a politician is say that we will stop federal spending and cap Medicare and Medicaid . .

. it will transfer that cost to the states or back to the private sector.

"That's going to be a very significant additional burden without any handle in terms of being able to get some understanding of the escalation of cost. It's a difficult and challenging process but we'll never balance the budget, never balance it until you get health care costs under control."

Kennedy said health care costs have a profound impact on businesses.

"The increase in percent of health care costs for those who are covering as a percent of profits continue to go up. When I started in the late 1960s on this, it was about 11 or 12 percent of profits

Decelle Deal Could Be Closed Within Next Week, Sheets Says

The city may close a deal to bring a new tenant to the site of the former Child World in Quincy Center within the next week, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said two weeks ago that Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, was in the "advanced stages" of negotiating a lease between Decelle, a division of Burlington Coat Factory; and Walcott Corp., the owner of the site.

Sheets said Tuesday the deal could be closed by this Friday or early next week.

"We're this close to getting it done," Sheets said, holding his index finger less than an inch from his thumb.

Sheets has said that Decelle, which sell's women's and children's clothing, would acquire about 35,000 square feet if the lease is signed. That would include the basements and upper floors of both Child World and the former Cummings store next door, he said.

The mayor also said the arrival of Decelle in Quincy Center would mark "the first return of a retailer of this major size to Hancock Street in 25 years."

Joint Committee Gives Sheets' Proposal Green Light Favorable Report For College Plan

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Less than a month after it was passed by the City Council, Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a new, independent board of trustees as the governing body over Quincy College has received a favorable recommendation from the joint state Committee on Local Affairs.

Sen. Michael Morrissey, who made the announcement Tuesday, said that although the petition still must pass the full Senate and House before taking effect, the fact that the committee has given its approval is good news.

"It overcame a big hurdle today," he said.

Rep. Michael Bellotti said there was "a lot of favorable testimony" Tuesday at the State House on behalf of the petition, adding that he personally has received "positive feedback" about the issue.

"I'm very confident this (petition) will pass," he said.

Related Story On Page 22

Quincy College President Donald Young gave a presentation on the matter to the Local Affairs committee Tuesday but was unaware of its action until informed by The Quincy Sun.

"You are the bearer of good news, and I'm very pleased," said Young. "I think this is the plan that Quincy College needs. It's the model that's appropriate for an institution that's totally self-supporting."

Among those testifying on behalf of the petition were Morrissey, Bellotti, Rep. Stephen Tobin and others. Bellotti said that a number of college officials and Quincy residents attended the meeting.

Sheets said he was very excited when he heard the news.

"I'm pleased with the speed with which it has received received a favorable recommendation," he said. "It's indicative that it

City May Take Over Two Parking Sites

The Hancock Parking Lot and Ross Parking Garage in Quincy Center could soon be under city control.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that he is "interested in taking over the management of both facilities," although he added that a formal decision on the matter will not be made for about another month.

"It may be in our best interests to take them over," said Sheets. "It would give us greater flexibility concerning any future development that may take place."

The city's five-year contract with Metropolitan Parking Systems Inc.,

which currently manages the two sites, expires June 30. Sheets told The Quincy Sun last week that although it is not yet certain if the city will renew its contract with Metropolitan, changes are planned for the parking system, including daily free parking for two hours

Karen Cashman To Lead Quincy Flag Day Parade

Quincy's annual Flag Day parade and celebration will be held Tuesday, June 14.

Edward Keohane, chairman of the Flag Day Committee, announces that Karen Cashman, bronze medalist in speed skating at the Winter Olympics in Norway, will be the parade grand marshal.

"The parade committee is delighted and honored to have Karen lead the Flag Day parade and celebration," Keohane said.

Cashman, a 1989 graduate of North Quincy High School, ran with the Quincy Track Club and was a Quincy Recreation Department participant. As a youngster, she marched in the Flag Day parade then sponsored by the Koch Club.

"This is what it's all about," Keohane said. "Karen is the pride of the city."

The parade will step off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Washington and Coddington St. and proceed north on Hancock St. to Southern Artery where it will conclude at Adams Field.

The parade will include bands, floats, military vehicles, antique vehicles and specialty units. The Flag Day events are sponsored by the city of Quincy, the Quincy

The first 100 bricks have been sold for the granite statue that is to be dedicated at West Quincy's Shea Park in June in honor of the city's granite workers.

Seven New Officers Take Police Oath

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Seven new Quincy police officers were sworn-in during a City Hall ceremony last Friday, bringing the patrol manning level to 147 on the Quincy Police force.

The new officers, all from Quincy, are:

Bruce Tait, 28, of 207 Everett St.; Patrick Folan, 27, of 57 Flynt St.; Peter Curley, 24, of 24 Madison Ave.; Paul F. Brown, 23, of 315 Billings Rd.; David Zupkofska, 23, of 10 Watkiss St.; Michael J. Cronin, 23, of 33 Bromfield St.; and Roger W. White, 28, of 10 Whitman Rd.

Folan, Curley, Brown, Zupkofska and Cronin will undergo 16 weeks of training at the State Police Academy in Foxborough and eight additional weeks of field office training with veteran officers before assignments.

Tait and White reported Monday for field office training for policy and procedure at the Quincy Police Department. Tait and White have each attended past police academies.

Tait, a Boston Housing police officer for five years, attended the 1989 Police Academy. He was a member of the Boston Housing Drug Control Team.

White, a Randolph police officer since 1987, attended the 1987 Police Academy. As a member of the Randolph police department, White was a D.A.R.E. program officer. He is an E.M.T. and received an associate degree in criminal justice from Quincy College.

The other five rookies have various experience and background.

Folan served in the U.S. Army from 1984 to 1991.

Curley, a former security officer, served in the U.S. Air Force from 1988 to 1992 as a law enforcement specialist. A member of the U.S. National Guard and a former Boston Special Police officer, he is attending Massasoit Community College for law enforcement.

Brown, a U.S. Marine from 1989 to 1992, is a former corrections officer for Norfolk County Correctional Center.

Zupkofska, who worked as a security escort for South Shore Visiting Nurse, served in the U.S. Army from 1990 to 1993. A member of the U.S. National Guard, he is enrolled in the Quincy College criminal justice program.

Cronin was a Quincy police cadet from 1989 to 1992. He has served as a constable since June, 1990. He is also a former member of the Quincy Board of Registrars a former candidate for state representative.

The officers will receive a first-year base salary of $25,304. After one year, the base annual pay will increase to $30,619, said Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger.

The rookies took the police officer's oath from City Clerk Joseph Shea as approximately 75 family, friends, department and city officials looked on. Among those attending were Mayor James Sheets, Police Chief Francis Mullen, Fire Chief Tom Gorman, State Rep. Michael Bellotti and Councillors Michael Cheney, Joseph LaRaia, Peter Kolson, Larry Chretien, Tom Fabrizio and Bruce Ayers.

In congratulating the new patrol officers and their families, Sheets welcomed the latest additions to the police department as part of the city's "front line of defense."

Calling crime the "most significant problem we face," the mayor applauded the efforts of Gov. Weld who last week announced in Quincy that he is pledging $22.3 million to help combat domestic violence. The governor is also pushing a bill that calls for juveniles who commit felonies to be tried as adults.

"We are beginning to get the kind of support in order to give all police officers the tools that they need to actively and successfully combat crime we all face every day."

Because of this effort, the mayor said "We will see a much more successful (police) effort."

Sheets also thanked the Quincy Police Department for the "outstanding job they are doing."

Mullen welcomed the new officers to the department saying, "It's a proud day for them, it's a proud day for their families and it's a proud day for the city of Quincy."

"We need patrolmen in the streets, we need them in the trenches."

The chief told the rookies that they are joining a department which focuses on a team concept. "The Quincy Police Department is a team effort. It's not one, it's all."

Mullen also thanked the City Council for supporting the department through personnel ordinances and appropriations.

Cheney, as city council president, added, "We're honored to be here. It's a long selection process to ensure that we select the very best. That's a credit to you and your family."

Camp Fire Cites Residents

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
More than ever, the children in our communities need the attention, caring and concern of the adults around them.

Today's childhood is not the same as in the past. Growing up in today's world, children are confronted with many different challenges in their schooling, their family life and their peer relationships. I am writing to acknowledge and say thanks to the Camp Fire Boys and Girls leaders in Quincy who have made the children of this community their priority by sharing their personal time, interest, homes and hearts with them.

Wednesday, April 27, is Camp Fire Volunteer Recognition Day. We invite the community to join us in saying thanks to the following volunteers in Quincy for caring about our children year round. Camp Fire's motto is "Give Service." Through participation in Camp Fire, boys and girls stay connected and involved with their community and begin the process of becoming the adult volunteers of tomorrow. Each year, Camp Fire members from kindergarten through high school contribute hundreds of hours of service from clean-ups to food drives to advocacy.

As Camp Fire celebrates 84 years of service to young people, we are proud to acknowledge the following individuals for their service to youth: Pat Fatseas, Paula Gordon, Faith Raimondi, Ann Morrill, Nancy Norton, Terri Labelle and Margaret Milne.

These individuals deserve our recognition and thanks for their commitment to Quincy's greatest natural resource—its children!

DON'T DODGE EXPIRATION DATES

If your medicine cabinet is typical, there is probably a clutter of medicine bottles and tubes inside, each branded somewhere in tiny type with an expiration date. If you routinely ignore these numbers, you may be putting your health at risk. Some medications have a very long shelf lives. Others expire quickly, becoming ineffective. However, some drugs become toxic over time, and taking these expired medications could be extremely dangerous. For example, within two weeks of its expiration date, the common antibiotic tetracycline can begin breaking down into toxic compounds that can cause kidney damage. To be safe, discard all medications after use - and watch those expiration dates.

P.S. Flush unused medications down the toilet. Don't throw them out in the trash, where a child or animal might find them

Outdated drugs are no bargain. It is simply not worth saving a few pennies at the risk of jeopardizing your health. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our comfortable office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 20C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. April is Stress Awareness Month, and a good time to learn how you can better manage the stresses in your life—for better emotional health and physical health.

Sheets: No QC Presidency

This may not be what Quincy mayoral hopefuls would like to hear, but Mayor James Sheets does not want to be president of Quincy College.

There's been speculation that Sheets might leave office next year to take over the presidency from interim President Donald Young who says he only wants to stay a year.

This would have set the stage for a wide-open mayoral race with the incumbent out of the picture.

But, asked the other day if he is interested in the college presidency, as a lot of people think he is, he replied:

"No, I'm not interested. There's no challenge there for me."

So that would seem to mean he intends to finish out his third term which he is now just four months into. And, there may be more bad news for those mayoral hopefuls.

Sheets doesn't appear to be thinking this third term is his last. Or acting like it is.

He has an agenda and wants to see it completed—or virtually completed—before he turns the mayor's office over to a successor.

One of the priorities on that agenda is the proposed Quincy Center Concourse which would connect Burgin Parkway to downtown Hancock St., costing an estimated $6 million in the first phase.

The first phase would take at least three years to start for impact studies once the finding was approved and the project given the green-light.

So, say, if the project got the go-ahead right now, they wouldn't get around to breaking ground until at least 1997.

Politically speaking, that's two city elections away.

If Sheets wants to stay on to even see that project started, or assured it was going to happen, he would need two more terms.

In addition to the roadway, he has at least a couple of other pet goals for his administration. One is a Quincy center railroad station and the other, a Quincy Center hotel.

Those aren't going to happen over night, either.

If Sheets runs for a fourth term next year, will he be challenged, and by whom? He was unopposed for his second and third terms, the only mayor in the city's history to be accorded that mayoral honor. (Two other mayors, Thomas Burgin and Francis McCauley ran without opposition for their second term.)

Who would challenge him?

The most likely would be Councillor Tim Cahill who almost did it last year. Council President Michael Cheney would like to be mayor, but it is unlikely he would run against Sheets. Other names mentioned are School Committee

CHENEY

The first parking meter in the U.S. was installed in Oklahoma City, OK on July 19, 1935.

HAROLD

Vice Chairman Dan Raymond and former Senator Paul Harold. But they, like Cheney, are not apt to oppose Sheets.

Sheets has been one of the most popular mayors in recent years and there is no sign he is slipping on the popularity charts.

Unless the roof unexpectedly fell on him, any challenger is going to have a hard time moving him out of that third floor office.

DELLA CHIESA

ROSS

Amelio Della Chiesa was Quincy's mayoral longevity champ if you count both the Plan E and Plan A forms of government. He served 12 years total—four under Plan E and eight under Plan A. The Plan E mayor was more like the city council president and ceremonial head while the city manager was the chief executive.

The man who served the longest under Plan A was Charles A. Ross who had nine years.

Will Sheets top that? He could.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE has nomination papers out for the state election. Actually, two sets of nomination papers. Charles Debreczeni of 400 Adams St., a Republican, picked up papers at City Hall for state representative and state senate and will make up his mind later as to which one he will run for. If it's state representative, it would be for the Second Norfolk District seat held by Democrat Steve Tobin.

IF YOU'RE A delegate to the Democratic State Convention in Worcester June 3-4 and wondering where you're going to stay overnight, Rep. Michael Bellotti might have the answer.

Bellotti, who is Democratic State Committeeman from this area, reserved rooms for delegates at a Worcester hotel and says he still has two left. (With hot and cold running water.)

If you're interested, give him a call at his State House office, 722-2210.

MILESTONE: Former WJDA news editor Herb Fontaine and his wife, Barbara are grandparents again. A son, Jesse Gage Fine, born to their son, Gary and Denise Fine of Pembroke. Jesse weighed in at 7 pounds, 12 ounces March 30.

Gary, who ran for Quincy School Committee several years ago, is a First Line Manager for State Street South and his wife, the former Denise Merrill is a research assistant at University Hospital in Boston.

Incidentally, the date, March 30, is one of coincidence for the family. The Fontaine's son, Steve, of Denver, Colo. was born on that date. And Fontaine retired from WJDA March 30, 1990 after 35 years with the station.

As McCauley Sees It

Thoughts On Residency Requirement Laws

By FRANCIS X. MCCAULEY

Despite the many serious problems confronting communities in the areas of education, crime, sewerage and waste disposal, politicians in a number of communities have discovered a new problem: municipal employees living outside of the community in which they work.

If you believe some politicians, this is a real crisis which must be solved by the passage of "residency requirement" legislation. According to "residency requirement" proponents, passage of such legislation will result in an increase in revenues, a better class of people residing in the community, more dedicated employees and more consumer spending by those who are forced to live in the community. All of the above arguments are false.

Argument #1: Residency requirement laws will increase tax revenues. False. Since there is a finite amount of housing units available, people forced to live in a community would simply displace the present occupants. There would be no gain in either property tax or excise tax revenues.

Argument #2: Middle-class people (i.e., a better class of people) will reside in the community. This argument is an insult to the present residents of a community. This argument implies that the real quality employee is always the one who lives outside the community.

Argument #3: A municipal employee who lives in the community where he or she works will do a better job. During my many years as a public official in Quincy, I have known and worked with many city employees. I have never known of a case where an individual's residence made any difference at all in job performance.

Argument #4: A community's economy will be strengthened. The fact is that non-residents of a community—whether they work in the private or the public sector—contribute a great deal to the economic well-being of the community where they work. They patronize stores, restaurants, banks and many other services.

People employed by the City of Quincy live in other communities for many reasons, the least of which is their belief that Quincy is a poor place to live and bring up their families. Over the years, many young couples found the higher cost of homes in Quincy vis a vis the rest of the South Shore towns to be a stumbling block to buying in Quincy. Family relationships is another factor in choosing a community in which to live.

During my eight years as mayor, I had the opportunity to bring into my administration any capable men and women to run various city departments. The majority of these individuals were city residents. However, five non-residents played important roles in my administration.

David Grunebaum of Sudbury served as my labor negotiator, while Donald Hansen of Weymouth and Norwell served as personnel director, and later as an assistant city solicitor. Dana Childs of Hingham served as city treasurer, and Jane Gallahue of Hull and Matthias Mulvey of Weymouth served as health commissioner and building inspector respectively as well as serving on the city's Licensing Board.

A residency requirement would have deprived the citizens of Quincy of their valuable services. It is important to note that Childs, Gallahue and Mulvey continue their service to the city in the administration of Mayor James A. Sheets.

In order to enforce a residency requirement law, bureaucracy must be created. Ultimately, the city would be required to snoop on city employees to ensure compliance.

Moreover, a residency requirement ordinance has been in effect in Boston for many years and it has been a disaster. It is disappointing to see Mayor Menino—newly-elected and with many major problems facing him—endorsing this law and trying to strengthen it rather than scrapping it.

A residency requirement law affecting new employees will be presented to the Quincy City Council in the near future. I hope that Mayor Sheets takes a leadership role in opposition to this measure and that the City Council defeats the plan when it comes before them.

(Francis X. McCauley was mayor of Quincy from 1982 to 1989).

Injunctions Granted In 3-Month Strike At Shipyard

Federal Judge George C. Sweeney granted injunctions sought by the National Labor Relations Board ordering the Bethlehem Steel Co. to bargain in good faith and the striking Shipbuilding Workers Union to halt mass picketing at the Fore River Shipyard.

Meanwhile, Union President John J. Grogan made an offer to Bethlehem President Arthur B. Homer which he said would return 17,000 East Coast shipyard workers to their jobs while further efforts are made to end the three-month strike.

One of the proposals called for submission of the dispute to a presidential fact-finding board, a suggestion that was rejected by Homer, citing the company's "opposition to any so-called fact-finding board as a substitute for free collective bargaining."

Said Grogan to Homer:

"The adamant position taken and the bargaining methods pursued by some of your highly placed subordinates make it clear that no agreement can be reached unless the union abjectly surrenders."

"Our union's striking members and their families are not willing to sacrifice the heritage of American freemen."

QUARRY DUMPING HIT

The State Department of Public Health recommended that the city stop dumping its refuse in Hitchcock's Quarry, cover it with two feet of clean fill and find a new dumping area pending future construction of an incinerator.

The advice was issued after the department's Sanitary Engineer Harold Rose toured the quarry area, where the city had been dumping for some three and a half years, at the instigation of Quarry St. residents who complained of bugs, rats and stench.

Secretary To Mayor James Sheets, Grace Giunchiglia

A Secretarial View Of Two Administrations

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. Grace, you've been associated with City Hall for a long time. How many people would you say are left over from the "old days?"

A. That's kind of hard to say. There are a lot of them that are still in the city but not still working for City Hall. Actually, the only one that I know of right now that was here when I was (pre-1965) is Marion Fantucchio, chairman of the Board of Assessors. The others are still living or working within the city but not at City Hall.

Q. What kind of changes have you seen at City Hall over the years, with the building and the personnel?

A. I liked the old building much better than the new building. I thought its beauty and architecture were much nicer. Everything now is very highly technological: the computers, the word processors. But I still live with my electronic typewriter (smiles).

Basically, things are the same. People have the very same complaints that they had when I left here in 1965. They still question the same way they did then about anything and everything—about the budget, about how the mayor's spending the (city's) money, about why the department heads can do this and do that. So the actual workings are the same; it's just that we've progressed in the technological field.

Q. I understand that under Mayor Della Chiesa, there was kind of an "open door" policy with the mayor where people could just walk in and say hello.

A. Yes, there was. That mayor was one of the kind of people who thought that everybody should just be able to walk in when they wanted. And I can remember very clearly, the commissions and boards used to meet in the mayor's office. At the time, the mayor was the ex-officio member of all boards. And I can remember one day, the Cemetery Board of Managers was meeting in his office, and a man came up, obviously rather drunk, and he wanted to see the mayor. And the mayor invited him in, waving and motioning him into the office. And the Cemetery Board of Managers had to stop their meeting, while he had his meeting with the man.

But things were different then; he was a "part-time" mayor, but he actually worked full-time hours. He was here at four o'clock in the morning, and he left at 10 (o'clock) to go to the State House. And he came back by about three in the afternoon and worked during the night.

Q. Do you say he was a "part-time" mayor because he was a state representative as well?

A. Yes. But his hours were not indicative of "part-time." But in those days, it definitely was a part-time job. The salary was commensurate with part-time.

Q. Is it safe to say that Mayor Sheets would like to have the same policy with his constituents, but nowadays that would be impossible?

A. This mayor would love to do the same thing, and you don't know how many times people will come into the office and say, "Jim said I could stop in and see him anytime." They don't realize that he is the mayor of a large city, there are many problems, and they don't realize that his door is only closed only because there is something important going on. He would love to be able to sit and talk with everybody in the city.

Q. Could you compare and contrast the styles of the two mayors you've worked for? How were they alike, and how were they different?

A. Alike in that both of them were, and are, "people" persons, very compassionate. They thought first of the

FULL NAME: Grace Lucia Giunchiglia
AGE: 64
ADDRESS: lifelong resident of Quincy Point
OCCUPATION: secretary to Mayor James Sheets since he took office. Previously worked as a secretary at Quincy City Hall from 1949-65, including stints in the personnel and law departments and five years under the late Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa (1960-65). From 1965-88, she worked for Quincy surgeon Dr. Edward Fitzgerald before returning to City Hall.
EDUCATION: graduated from Quincy High School, 1947; took classes at Boston University and Northeastern University; has taken extension courses through the South Shore Chapter of Professional Secretaries International (PSI), of which she has been a longtime member.
FAMILY: never married; no children citizens of the city and tried very hard to do what's best for the city. And in that respect, I feel that they're both very much alike.

Mayor Della Chiesa was a very, very frugal person; as he walked out the door of any office he would turn off the lights, not realizing that to turn it off and turn it on again would cost more money. But he thought he was saving money.

But they were very much alike. Very personable; very easy to work for.

Q. What's an average work day like for you? How many phone calls do you get in a day?

A. I would say on a calm day, about 150 between Helen (Murphy, Sheets' receptionist) and myself. During snowstorms...I actually kept track of the calls I got one day during a snowstorm, and I got 276.

Q. Are the majority of the calls positive or negative?

A. The majority of our calls on a regular day, I would say are positive. People are very proud about what the mayor's been doing. The only time we really get many negative calls are during snowstorms.

Q. What are some of your other duties? You must keep the mayor on a pretty tight schedule.

A. He has a lot of meetings; I keep his appointment book and I make all of his appointments. And I do all of his shorthand and typing, his letters; Helen does the other shorthand and typing. I do the letters; she does his reports. It's a hectic day for both of us.

Q. What about some of the city councillors you've met?

They lived next door to each other. He's a wonderful person; he has worked very hard for Ward 2. And we all love him.

Joe LaRaia, I knew him when I was here before (pre-1965); he was a councillor then. The others I don't really know; they're all new since then.

Q. I guess I don't have to ask who your two favorite mayors are.

A. My favorite two mayors are Della Chiesa and James A. Sheets (smiles).

Q. I understand you've been named "Secretary of the Year" in the past by the South Shore Chapter of Professional Secretaries International.

A. I joined PSI in 1955, and was named "Secretary of the Year" in 1959, 1969 and 1974. And this is an honor bestowed on a member by their fellow chapter members. I was very thrilled, because I have worked hard for PSI. And in all of the years I have been a member, I always been an officer or on the board of directors.

Q. Aren't you also involved with St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point?

A. Not as much now, because I just don't have enough time. I (previously) always did the church bulletin, but now they have a full-time secretary. But I am active in other things, I belong to the Sodality and I attend all their functions.

Q. What else do you like to do in your leisure time?

A. I love to read and I love to knit, but I haven't really had time (lately). I'm going to change my way of living, and I'm going to start that now. As I get older, I'm getting more work, and the hours are getting more, so I'm going to start trying to do a little more and think of Grace.

Q. Do you think that we'll ever see a woman mayor in Quincy? And would you like to see that?

A. I would love to see a woman mayor, and I think we have a lot of people that would be eligible. I personally, honestly believe that women have this very strange envy of other women. I don't think women really like to see another woman go ahead. We had a wonderful city councillor when I was here before (pre-1965), Edna B. Austin; she was an attorney, a fantastic lady. We had Pat Toland. Those were the two that I knew (personally).

I think someday we will (have a woman mayor), if women will get on the ball and work with each other.

Q. Tell us honestly, Grace. Who's really in charge of the mayor's office, you or Mayor Sheets?

A. He's like to think he is, but sometimes I think I am (smiles). He really is, but I tend to be very strict with him on appointments and such, and he says I have the "iron fist" (laughs).

Who were some of the more memorable characters?

A. I would say Carl W. Anderson was one of the most memorable. He was a very high-strung man; he didn't care who he fought with. He could be very, very nasty at times, but he was a very kind person, really.

David "Tuck" McIntosh was a fantastic person; he lived on Whitwell Street, and his son still does. He was just a funny person.

I think in those days, because the councillors didn't have to do as much, as the councillors now do, they had an opportunity to be closer to the entire city.

Q. How about the councillors today? I know that you're very close with Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who is being hospitalized after a recent heart attack and stroke.

A. Ted I could almost call my adopted brother. Ted has known me since I was one year old. We al-

Health Dept. Begins Anti-Smoking Program

Riding the strength of a recent $125,000 from the state Department of Public Health, the Quincy Health Department has begun implementing an extensive anti-smoking program in the city.

Quincy Tobacco Control Program Director Robert Helfrich said the program was designed to inform city residents as to the dangers of both active and passive tobacco smoking. He added that the program is "primarily" directed at the city's high school students.

"If we can focus on our youth and prevent them from starting (to smoke) in high school, they probably won't do it in the future," he said.

Helfrich said major components of the program include community awareness education, development of prevention strategies and cessation-intervention programs, recommending policy for smoke-free workplaces, and recommending regulations and ordinances to city officials.

The importance of helping people to quit smoking and preventing others from starting is an issue that has gained the attention of government leaders, Helfrich noted, including President Clinton and Surgeon General Jocelyn Elders.

"It's become a target on a national basis," he said. Helfrich said the program is still in its early stages but plans are being made to make available "a number of sites designated for people who want to quit." The program was first launched in January after the department received the state grant last November, he said.

The City Council last month passed an ordinance designed to limit access to tobacco products by minors. The ordinance, which was subsequently signed by Mayor James Sheets and goes into effect Saturday, requires a license from the health department to sell tobacco products, adherence to the law prohibiting tobacco sales to those under age 18, and a restriction of access to tobacco products by minors. Vending machines are to be equipped with a lock-out device by Sept. 9.

Helfrich said the fines for non-compliance with the ordinance are as follows: $100 for first-time offenders who sell to minors, $200 for second-time offenders, and $300 for third-time offenders. Offenders who exceed that could lose their right to sell tobacco products, he said.

Statistics from the U.S. Department of Health and Services show that approximately 100 Massachusetts children start smoking every day and 60 percent of smokers start before age 14. It is also expected that 120,000 Massachusetts children alive today will die from cigarettes, according to the department.

A report from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health stated last year that cigarette smoking is the leading cause of preventable death and disease in Massachusetts and that an estimated 11,000 Massachusetts residents die from tobacco-related illnesses every year.

Siciliano Seeks Community Service Funding For City

Quincy Emergency Management Emergency Director Tony Siciliano said he thinks the city has a "good shot" at obtaining funds from the Massachusetts National and Community Service Commission.

Siciliano had asked Mayor James Sheets to schedule a meeting with city department heads and other officials for yesterday (Wednesday) at 10 a.m. at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave. South Quincy to discuss the possibility of Quincy's applying for the funds. Deadline for application is April 20, he said.

Among those Siciliano asked Sheets to invite are Police Chief Francis Mullen, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, DPW Commissioner David Colton, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane, Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, Planning Director Richard Meade, members of the City Council and School Committee and representatives from a number of city community centers and organizations.

Siciliano made his request after recently making a presentation to commission members on Quincy's behalf at Northeastern University in Boston. He said that about 400 people representing communities from across the state appeared before the commission.

The commission awards grants to communities whose students and non-profit organizations display a devotion to community service. Funds from the grants may be used by the communities for community service in the areas of education, environment, human needs and public safety.

Siciliano said the commission receives the federal funds through the National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993. On a national level, around $360 million in funds will be distributed, he said.

Siciliano said he feels the city's chances at obtaining funds are above average because Quincy's organizations and youth are actively in community service.

In particular, he praised the work of the Volunteer Emergency Services Team (VEST), which includes special needs, elementary, middle and high school students and is trained to handle emergency power and lighting outages as well as the AFJROTC students from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

"These kids have worked through hurricanes, severe snowstorms, severe coasting flooding and more," he said. "We owe it to them to go for every dollar we can get."

President Clinton recently wrote a letter to Siciliano praising the city for last summer's Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort. The letter reads, in part:

"In the great tradition of American volunteerism, Quincy residents took the lead of Mayor Sheets in undertaking the hard work of putting lives and families back together. Their dedicated efforts were instrumental in helping to ease the floods' devastating effects, and I commend all involved for their resourcefulness and generosity."

Quincy CTE Students In WD-40 Program

Home economics students at the Quincy Center for Technical Education are learning about product research in a program funded by the San Diego-based WD-40 Company.

Only 200 classes in the U.S. were selected to host the WD-40 School Research Program. Twenty-five students in George Kelley's classes at the Quincy CTE are participating.

The students will engage in a research activity for the chance to win money for classroom equipment. The program also provides teachers with materials and WD-40 products for student research. The products are used for such purposes as silencing squeaky hinges, cleaning cookie sheets and removing sticky labels.

Twenty-five classes will be selected to each receive checks for $200, a total of $5,000 for classroom equipment.

DRIVING EQUIPMENT FOR THE PHYSICALLY LIMITED

Quincy Hospital, Branch Clinic In Joint Provider Program

Quincy Hospital and the South Weymouth Branch Clinic announced a new, joint preferred provider collaboration.

South Suburban PHO, the physician hospital organization of Quincy Hospital, now has an agreement to provide health care services to active duty military personnel, military dependents, and retirees and their families at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. Over 3500 military personnel will be covered under the new plan.

A Preferred Provider program is a network of selected physicians, medical professionals, medical services and hospital(s) who contract with a group to provide medical services at an established reimbursement rate.

South Suburban PHO was selected as a Preferred Provider for the comprehensive, state of the art health care services it provides to the community. The South Weymouth Branch Clinic continues to provide medical services and assess patient conditions. When appropriate, patients will be referred to South Suburban PHO physicians or specialists or to Quincy Hospital for inpatient or outpatient services.

"The South Suburban PHO is committed to a total quality management approach which emphasizes continuous improvement and customer satisfaction. This was a critical element in selecting a health care plan for our military personnel," said Lt.

Richard Marion of the South Weymouth Branch Clinic.

Don't Make It Easy For Thieves To Steal Your Wheels

Jack's Father finally let him take the family's new car to school one beautiful spring day. Jack showed off to all his friends—and anyone who would listen—until classes started.

The keys were uncomfortable in his jeans, so he left them in his locker. When he went back after lunch, the keys were gone. So was the car.

Because her mother knew Lisa was a good driver, she let her pick up some friends and drive to the mall for a day of shopping. Lisa was so busy talking about last night's dance she forgot to lock all the car doors.

When she came back, several hours later, the car's tape deck and her friends' jackets (they didn't want to drag them around the mall) were gone.

Charlies usually hopped on his new motorcycle when school was out and rode to his part-time job at a fast food restaurant. One evening after work, some friends stopped by and asked him to go out with them.

So he left the bike at the restaurant, figuring he would pick it up first thing in the morning. His was bike was gone.

Jack, Lisa and Charlie all become victims of a crime that gets to be a bigger problem every year—vehicle theft.

FACTS:

- Over ONE MILLION cars, trucks, buses, motorcycles and trailers are stolen every year.
- There were over 1.2 MILLION thefts of contents and almost 1.3 MILLION thefts of accessories from motor vehicles in 1993.
- The recovery rate for stolen vehicles was down to 54% in the early 1980s, compared to 90% in the 1960s.

Take These Steps To Protect Your Vehicle:

1. Park in well-lighted areas. Avoid leaving your vehicle in unattended parking lots for long periods of time.
2. Keep everything of value in the trunk. If you do leave packages in the car, make sure they're out of sight.
3. Keep your keys in your pocket or purse, not in your school locker. Never put an identification tag on your key ring. If your keys are lost or stolen, it could help the thief locate your car and burglarize your car or your home.
4. Lock your vehicle and pocket the keys whether you leave for a minute or several hours. Make sure the windows are closed and the trunk is locked.
5. Don't leave important identification papers (like the registration) or credit cards in the glove compartment.
6. If you have to leave a key with a parking lot attendant, leave only the ignition key.

What To Do If It Happens To You:

If your vehicle is stolen or tampered with, report it to the police immediately. Stolen vehicles are often used in other crimes. Quick action can not only help recover your vehicle, but may also prevent its use for illegal purposes.

Residential Street Sweeping Program Starts April 11

The Quincy Department of Public Works, which now owns and manages the city street sweeping program, will begin its spring program Monday, April 11, announces DPW Commissioner David Colton.

In an effort to produce better results, the DPW has devised a residential street sweeping schedule. After it begins April 11, the program will run six weeks.

"The goal in announcing this schedule will be to provide advanced notice so that residents can remove parked cars from the roadway which will therefore improve the quality of sweeping," Colton said.

The schedule, by ward and precinct, accompanies this story. (See chart). Residents can tune to radio station WJDA between 7:30 and 8 a.m. daily for schedule information.

Anyone with questions regarding what ward or precinct they reside can call 376-1943 or 376-1142.

To produce the best results and cause the least confusion, the DPW recommends residents remove their cars from the street during the week a ward is swept.

"If the first recommend is not possible, residents should remove their car the day before their precinct is swept."

Saturdays April 16, 23, 30 and May 7, 14 and 21 will be used to maintain the schedule.

"This is the DPW's first attempt at notification for street sweeping and many factors govern the schedule such as amount of material, rainy days and equipment down time," Colton said.

"We have build in time in order that the schedule may be realized. If for some reason we cannot maintain it, a revised schedule will be published. "You can help clean-up by sweeping your sidewalk onto the gutter a few days before the sweeper is scheduled and especially by making an extra effort to keep your car off the street."

"Thank you for your time and cooperations during this most unusual spring clean-up," the commissioner added.

License Board Mulls Growing Number Of Downtown Restaurant Applications

By LISA CONNELL
Beijing Express, a proposed Chinese restaurant for downtown Quincy met with opposition from business abutters whose fears of competition for parking in the congested downtown area outweighed their concerns of economic competition from the restaurant itself.

License Board officials voted Tuesday to continue the restaurant's request for a common victualler license at 1622 Hancock St., next to the former Colman's Sporting Goods. They also plan to study the growing number of applications for common-victualler license applications throughout Quincy Center.

Quincy residents Gee Tso and his father, Soon, appeared before the Board. The Tso's have been in the restaurant business for many years. The elder Tso is currently executive chef of the China Blossom Restaurant in North Andover. The younger Tso presented the Board with a written plan of the eatery including a biography of the family and proposed menu.

Tso met earlier this year with the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien who did not oppose the proposal and left the final decision to the Board.

License Board Chairman and City Clerk Joseph Shea raised the issue of parking early in the presentation.

"I want to caution you—I can't speak for them (Blockbuster Video) but I can't imagine that they will let you park in their lot."

"If we go forward, this is going to be a problem," Shea said.

"That's why we're offering free delivery service to minimize parking," said Tso.

Tso stressed to Board members that free delivery service between 11 a.m. and the early evening would mitigate some potential parking problems and that most of their customers would walk to the site from their places of employment.

"Parking is a major problem as we don't allow double parking on Hancock St. I hope you've given a lot of thought to that," Police Chief Francis Mullen said.

Business abutters Bernie Reisberg of Bernie's Formal Shop, Taso Kapsakis of Taso's Pizza and Carl Johnson, counsel for Kapsakis, stated that although the area is a zoned business district, a severe parking problem exists.

"We don't appear in opposition (to Beijing Express) based on economic competition, but we do point out the suitability of the facility for a restaurant," Johnson said.

According to Johnson, a fire hydrant and loading zone reserved space in front of the proposed business plus the antiquity of the utility system to handle the amount of waste water generated from other nearby eateries including Taso's, Stooges and the Colonial, prevents the Beijing Express from co-existing with other nearby food establishments.

"If a delivery van goes in front (of the proposed site) it will make less parking available, Johnson said.

According to Johnson, a rear loading zone is not suitable at that site or several others nearby, further complicating area traffic problems.

Board members plan to conduct an on-site inspection of the front and rear of the premises.

"No one wants to see vacant buildings in a central business district but I think you should look at each situation," said Johnson.

Reisberg, who's Formal Shop at 1586 Hancock St. has outlasted many of his neighbors, said, "I want to see growth and all good things happen in Quincy Center but I also know it was a tough area due to gangs and parking problems and due to Chief Mullen the entire area has been turned around. I feel with the restaurant it brings in a questionable type of clientele and parking is tough here. I have 35 (parking) spaces behind my shop and sometimes I can't even get a spot."

There are 23 restaurants in the downtown Quincy area, according to Reisberg.

Addressing this issue, Shea said, "My first reaction when I hear from someone, 'I want to open a restaurant on Hancock St.', is that I want to give them a medal. I feel we do have a lot of restaurants and I wonder how some of them are making it. I hear from their landlord if they're having trouble," Shea said.

"Thank God for small favors we don't have to license hair salons," he said.

"I don't know whether it's the spring or the hard economy but everyone wants to come to Quincy and open a restaurant, and we've been criticized for giving out (licenses) too liberally," said Shea.

Mullen asked Tso if he had considered another location saying that his only concern with the proposal is parking.

Tso replied that he had not considered any other locations.

CDBG Funds, City Budget To Be Discussed At Public Hearing

For the first time in city history, the City Council will hold a public hearing on the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds Quincy receives.

The public will be allowed to speak on the FY95 CDBG funds at the same hearing when the city's FY95 municipal budget will be discussed. Last year, the council held a public hearing on the FY94 city budget, which was believed to be the first time in Quincy's history that public input on the budget was allowed.

No date for the hearing has been set.

The motion to include the block grant funds was made by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, who said the CDBG money should be "tied together" with the city budget for discussion.

Council President Michael Cheney disagreed, noting that the City Council has "no latitude" concerning the CDBG funds, which come from the federal government. He expressed concern that the public might be misled into thinking otherwise if the funds were discussed at the public hearing.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan agreed.

"I think they're two separate issues," said Phelan. "One (the city budget) is property tax money from the city, while the other is a federal pot of money."

Both Cheney and Phelan added that they are in favor of holding another public hearing on the municipal budget.

Chretien, however, said the public has a right to know whether certain projects will be paid for by CDBG money or taxpayer dollars.

The council decided by a 7-1 vote to include the CDBG funds as a topic for discussion at the public hearing, with Cheney being the lone dissenter.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro did not attend Monday night's meeting as he remains hospitalized after recently suffering a heart attack and stroke.

Embellish Fundraiser For Rosie's Place

Embellish Hair, Face & Body Centre of Quincy will sponsor a fund raising event on Sunday, April 10, to benefit "A Positive Step," an effort by Rosie's Place to house poor and homeless women with HIV.

The new residence on Mt. Vernon Street in Dorchester is scheduled to open this summer and is Rosie's first formal attempt to provide permanent shelter for women living with this disease.

"We're excited about sponsoring this event," said Karen Lungari of Embellish. "Although we've only had a short association with Rosie's Place, we have seen the positive impact an effort like this generates."

Lungari hopes to generate $5,000 for the new residence with all proceeds generated directly benefiting Rosie's

Place. All customers will be served on a walk-in basis from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the 10th and cash donations will be happily accepted.

Partnership and the Koch Club.

Past Flag Day parade grand marshals include Quincy natives Ken Coleman, former Red Sox broadcaster, and Ted Spencer, curator of the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Cashman is one of 15 U.S. Olympians to medal at the Winter Games in Lillehammer, and one of only three from Massachusetts. The Olympians won a combined 19 medals in 13 different events, the highest American medal total for any Winter Olympiad.

Cashman's selection as Flag Day parade grand marshal is the latest honor for the local hero. She will be recognized April 29, proclaimed "Karen Cashman Day" in Quincy by Mayor James Sheets, during a public ceremony at North Quincy High School.

The ceremony will be carried live on Quincy Continental Cablevision

Channel 3. Cable hookups are expected to be made at the city's other public schools to allow Quincy school children a chance to hear Cashman speak about her Olympic experience.

Additional details regarding Karen Cashman Day and the Quincy Flag Day parade will be announced in the near future.

Beside her Quincy appearances, Cashman is expected to visit President Clinton at the White House later this month.

Montello's To Be Site Of New Buddhist Temple

A Buddhist group that currently meets at a Wollaston home is expected to complete a deal next week to purchase the former Montello's hall on Massachusetts Avenue in Quincy Point.

Atty. Robert Fleming said last week the group, which has gathered regularly at 37 Buckingham Rd. since 1991, has entered an agreement to buy the function hall for the purpose of converting it into a temple. The site will be the only Buddhist temple south of Boston, he said.

The Buddhist group began looking for a new site three years after neighbors complained that the Wollaston location attracted noisy crowds and caused parking problems.

Sik Kuan Yen, a Buddhist nun representing the Hong Kong-based Budhi Siksa Society-- which has about 100 members--had planned to turn her Buckingham Road home into a temple but dropped the plan to appease neighbors. Since then, the house has been used as an informal shrine for Buddhists.

Kuan Yen plans for the new temple to be a center for teaching and meditation that will allow members to stop in anytime to study or meditate. It will serve Buddhists from throughout the South shore, the majority of which will be from Quincy, and she will live at the temple.

Residents of Quincy Point have expressed concern that the temple will bring traffic congestion to their neighborhood. Three weeks ago, about 30 residents met with Buddhist society representatives and city officials to discuss the issue.

The Buddhists agreed to set up a shuttle bus service from Quincy Center parking garages to prevent traffic gridlock during services.

City officials expressed support of the new temple. City Council President Michael Cheney, who organized the neighborhood meeting, said the temple will add to a diverse religious and ethnic mix in the Quincy Point neighborhood, which already has a mosque, synagogue and Catholic church.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said the new location is far safer and better suited for the temple than the Wollaston site.

Kuan Yen has not yet set a date for moving into the temple. The society is planning major renovations and the building may not be ready for several months.

The MWRA provides the presentations through its School Education Program, which also includes curriculum development and teacher training workshops.

The MWRA has an education partnership with the Lincoln-Hancock School, and has binded its commitment with a contract that outlines specific goals, objectives and activities.

More than 5,000 entrants entered last year's MWRA essay and poster contest which focused on why it is important to continue to conserve water and improve water quality. Students in Grades 4-12 impressed MWRA judges with their understanding of the environmental and economic necessity for completing the Boston Harbor Project.

In FY94, the MWRA plans to bring its School Education Program to 150 schools and 20 teachers through training workshops.

Home Opener Monday Vs. Plymouth Rebuilding Year For North Girls' Softball

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

With only one returning senior on the varsity roster, North Quincy High School softball second-year coach Carolyn Parsley has a major rebuilding task ahead of her.

The Red Raiders, coming off a 6-14 record last year, open their season next Monday at McCoy Field versus Plymouth. They travel to Falmouth Wednesday, April 13 and return home Friday, April 15 for a game against Barnstable.

This year's pitching staff will feature junior Kathy Hughes as a starter, junior Kim Healy will pitch in relief. Also due to see action on the mound will be junior Denise Anderson.

In the infield, look for sophomore Kelly Keegan to start at first base, junior Alyssa Cobban at second, junior co-captain Kristen Proude at shortstop, and junior co-captain Jennifer Teahan at third. The starting catchers will be junior Jen Doherty and freshman Kerry Ginty.

"Teahan has the potential to make All-Scholastic," said Parsley. "She has a very strong arm and if she can control it, she will do well."

Teahan returns to the team as the leading hitter from last season with a batting average over .300.

Infield reserve players include sophomores Annie Bergen and Kristen Kelley and juniors Jamie Monahan and Meghan Roche.

The outfield will consist of juniors Healy and Amy Riley as starters. Candidates for the third starting and backup positions include sophomore Kim Sadenfield and juniors Michelle Hamilton, Amber Mahar and Nancy Walker.

The Raiders have a very rough Old Colony League schedule this year that includes league favorites Barnstable, Falmouth and Taunton.

"I'm curious to see how well they do, because I have a very young team," said Parsley. "I'm looking forward to this season. They are a great group of kids who are willing to learn."

The team can certainly learn a lot from Parsley, one of the premiere high school and collegiate athletes on the South Shore.

A 1982 graduate of Braintree High School, Parsley was a three-sport star for the Wamps and a two-time state pentathlon champion.

As an undergraduate at Bridgewater State College, she set the school scoring record and was an All-American in track in the heptathlon.

Parsley is one of 17 former Braintree High athletes who will be inducted in the school's newly established Braintree Athletic Hall of Fame April 28.

Helping Parsley with the North Quincy softball program will be returning jayvee coach Bob Doyle and freshmen coach Bob Giordano. Bill Parsley and Chris Dolan will work as volunteer assistants.

Pee Wee C's Finish Season In Fine Form

In the last two scheduled games of the season the Quincy Youth Hockey PeeWee C championship team routed both opponents.

The PeeWees hammered South Boston, 14-1, in a game which featured ten different Quincy goal scorers. Joe Vallatini, Mike Hastings, Mike Carloni and Josh Silverman netted two goals each. Single tallies were recorded by Ryan Murray, Sean Fitzgerald, Mike D. Sullivan, T.J. Wilson, Chris Cullen and Shaun Cheney. Vallatini's goals gave him 50 on the season, while Silverman topped the 40-goal plateau. Murray, Silverman, Cullen, Sullivan, Cheney and Jamie Parisi dished out two assists each.

Assists were also made by Wilson, Carloni, Fitzgerald, Dave Noonan and Mike C. Sullivan.

Quincy went on to shut out Waltham, 4-0. Wilson, Noonan, Vallatini and John Bertucci were the Quincy goal scorers. Assisting were Chris Lumaghini, Mike C. Sullivan, Vallatini and Silverman.

Quincy To Field Young Softball Team

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy High School softball coach Bud Mosher will field a young squad with a number of quality athletes, but in a league where power pitchers can hurl the ball at 80-plus miles per hour, his team's task will not be an easy one.

The Presidents' starting team will feature a number of underclassmen, but leading the five returning seniors are battery mates Danielle Perry and Kristen Holliday.

"Perry is a fine control pitcher, she doesn't get in trouble but she won't overpower people either," said Mosher. "Because of her style she'll be able to pitch for us almost every day."

Holliday is expected to do a superb job catching for Perry.

Other returning seniors are outfielders Lauren Fallell and Laura Marsden and catcher/utility player Nicole Domina.

Mosher has several outstanding young athletes who will play pivotal roles for the Presidents. Katie Gallagher started every game last year as a freshman shortstop and is expected to do the same this year. Kerri Connolly, a star on Quincy's girls basketball team, is another sophomore infielder. She will divide her time between second and third base.

"We'll be counting heavily on Kerri. She'll bat in the middle of the order and she is a good fielder," said Mosher.

Junior Jen Heaney will also see time at second base. It will be the lefty hitter's first year on the varsity squad. Rounding out the infield will be sophomore Mary Kelly at first base. Kelly will share the position with Perry when the senior is not pitching.

Other players who will be pitching for the Presidents are junior Josie Ruuska and freshman Angela Hogrell.

"This is Ruuska's first year coming out of the softball team," said Mosher. "She has some good talent but is still developing as a pitcher." She will spend most of her time pitching at the j.v. level or playing in the varsity outfield.

Hogrell showed potential when she picked up a win in a scrimmage against Harwich High. It was her first outing ever as a pitcher. Hogrell will also see action in the Quincy outfield.

The other outfielders are junior Caitlin O'Connor, who saw a lot of playing time last year, and

"Howard will split her time between the outfield and the infield. We want to utilize her speed. She plays soccer and is probably the fastest runner in the school," said her coach. Howard played shortstop on last year's j.v. squad.

Rounding out the roster is sophomore Nicole Linscott and freshman Alisha Ford.

"Linscott is our backup catcher and will do some infield utility work. Ford will see time at third. She looks really good defensively and can hit well, too," said Mosher.

"We have some very good athletes but some of the teams we face have girls who have been playing together since the third grade. Taunton should be particularly tough, they are always one of the best teams in the league and they have a pitcher who can throw the ball 83 m.p.h."

The Quincy girls open their season Monday, April 11 at Taunton. Their first home game is the following Wednesday, April 13, versus Weymouth.

Mosher will be assisted this year by Bob Keuther and Sonya Herring.

Mite A's Sweep Cape Cod Tourney For Second Crown

The Quincy Youth Hockey Mite A travel team, sponsored by Northland Seafood, cruised to a four win sweep of the American Legion Post #188 Tournament at the Gallo Arena on Cape Cod.

Quincy captured the tournament title by virtue of wins of 4-3 over Canton, 7-3 against South Windsor, Conn., 7-1 versus Belmont and 6-2 over the Northern Rhode Island Vikings in the championship game.

The Quincy Mite A's now have two tournament crowns to their credit this season, in December they won the Santa Claus Tournament at Pilgrim Rink in Hingham. They also came in second at the Quincy Kiwanis Tournament in February. Quincy finished the 1993-94 season with a fine record of 32 wins, seven losses and four ties.

The scoring for the Mite A's in the American Legion Tournament was recorded by: Billy McKeon, four goals, five assists, nine points; Brian O'Hanley, 5-3-8; Ryan Donahue, 1-7-8; Bryan Cooper, 3-2-5; Andrew Ross, 2-3-5; Matthew Germain, 3-1-4; Billy Ryan, 2-2-4; Miah Hasson, 1-2-3; Jamie Chiochio, 1-2-3; Jon Chevalier, 0-2-2; Stephen Kelley, 0-2-2; Kevin Richardson, 0-1-1.

Bruce Maggio did a stellar job in goal, recording a 2.25 goals against average in the tourney. Part of his success was due to the strong defensive work of Sean Moriarty, Matthew Lavery and Timothy Duggan.

Head Coach Bill Richardson and assistants Jim Conso who coached the forwards and Bruce Maggio who worked with the defensemen and goalenders, did great jobs in leading the Mite A squad to such a successful season.

QUINCY YOUTH HOCKEY Pee Wees Mike Sullivan, left, and Mike Powers, members of the Boston Junior Bruins, represented the Boston Bruins in the 35th Hockey Tournament International held recently in Quebec, Canada. The tournament is the oldest and largest Pee Wee tournament in the world. Sullivan and Powers each scored hat tricks and were voted most valuable players in one of the tournament's games. They received their trophies from a tournament official.

Successful Season For Girls'-Womens' Hockey

The Quincy Youth Hockey Girls'/Womens' Division is winding down another successful season.

The girls' Squirt team, coached by present and former players Jean Gill, Jill Rennie and Lisa Bent, started slow but finished strong in the state's first year of formal round robin play for girls' Squirt teams.

The QYH girls played approximately seventeen games against teams from South Boston, Needham, Westwood and Concord. They also participated in the Rhode Island Panthers annual Thanksgiving Tournament. The team had a good mixture of beginners and advanced players ranging in ages from eight to 12. The team hopes to continue next season with a strong core from the present team and with welcome additions.

The Quincy Youth Hockey senior womens' team played in the South Shore Womens' League in Canton. The team was atop the Silver Division after the first round of play. The team took the opportunity to move to the second round and participate in the Gold Division. Quincy did not win any games in this round but was pleased with the level of competition.

In the third round they moved back to the Silver Division and again finished in first place. The Senior Women will complete their season with the league playoffs and the Annual Brampton Canadettes Girls' Tournament in Brampton, Ontario during the first weekend in April.

They just missed representing Massachusetts in the National Tournament in Michigan when they lost 3-1 to Springfield during the Senior "B" Womens' State Tournament. This tourney was held during the weekend of March 4 through March 6.

Ally Sleiman Wrestling At Kansas Community College

By TERRILYN WARNER

Quincy Point resident Ally Sleiman is wrestling and attending Colby Community College in Colby, Kansas.

Sleiman attended Quincy High School and went to Northeastern Oklahoma A&M in Miami, Okla., last year.

In his senior year at Quincy High he was the state champion at 145 pounds with a record of 50-2, including a perfect 25-0 dual record. He had a career record of 117-19. He won the state title by defeating Darby McGlaughlin of Springfield Central by a score of 1-0. Sleiman names that win as his biggest accomplishment in wrestling. McGlaughlin had won 86 straight matches until the defeat to Sleiman.

His first year at NEO, Sleiman recorded 24 wins and eight losses. He was an Academic All-American and place fourth at the regional tournament. Unfortunately for Sleiman, NEO was placed on probation by the NJCAA for rule violations. As a result they were not able to wrestle duals or compete in regional and national competition. Sleiman chose to transfer.

"When I found out that NEO was on probation, my whole world came crashing down around me," Sleiman said. "I loved NEO and Miami. I really didn't want to leave, but I had no other choice."

Sleiman decided to transfer to CCC where he recently concluded his first season under head coach Steve Lampe, a former two time All-American at Iowa State University.

"I didn't know where I was going to go to school until one week before classes started," he said. "I'm happy I came to Colby. The wrestling program and Coach Lampe are great, and I have no regrets."

Sleiman placed fourth in regional competition this year. CCC placed second in the West-Central Zone Regional tournament and finished 12th overall at the National Tournament.

Sleiman wrestled at 150 pounds for the Trojans and compiled a season record of 14-12. He placed first at a dual with Labette, Kan., third at the Worthington Tournament in Worthington, Minn., and fourth in regional competition for the second year in a row. Sleiman had a good season at CCC, but was disappointed when he fell short of his goal of being an All-American. He was, however, named an Academic All-American for the second year in a row with a 3.35 GPA.

After he graduates from Colby this year, Sleiman is considering Cornell, the University of Virginia, Boston University, William and Mary, the University of Oklahoma and Northwestern University.

Sleiman enjoys wrestling because of the challenge involved and the dedication that it takes. He began wrestling seriously when he was a sophomore in high school.

"I thought it was a lot like fighting," he said, "and I like physical sports. It didn't take long, though, to figure out otherwise. It's a lot harder than it seems."

He admires his mother because of the role that she has had in his life.

"My mother has always been a positive influence on me," he said. "And she's always been there to inspire me to do better."

After graduating from college with a major in Criminal Justice/Education, Sleiman would like to become a teacher and coach.

Colby is located 54 miles east of the Colorado border in the northwest corner of Kansas.

Kiwanis Club Bicycle Rodeo Set For May 7

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will sponsor a Bicycle Rodeo Saturday, May 7 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Quincy Center for Technical Education (CTE) parking lot.

The event is part of the New England-wide Kiwanis Family Safety Day. Over 85 Kiwanis Clubs in the six New England states will sponsor Bicycle Rodeos in their communities in an effort to teach children and their parents bicycle safety skills in a fun family setting.

"The Kiwanis Club of Quincy is committed to preventing accidental injury in children and will be offering approved bicycle helmets at the rodeo as well as running several bicycle stations where riders can learn bicycle safety skills and practice them in a safe setting," said chairman Donald McCarthy.

Each year, approximately 400 children age 14 and younger are killed in bicycle crashes and thousands more are treated for bicycle-related injuries. While statistics show that helmets can reduce the risk of injury by 85 percent, only five percent of all children cyclists nationwide use bicycle helmets.

WORN BALL JOINTS

The first step that car owners should take to correct a front-end shimmy is to have the front wheels balanced. If this does not cure the problem, the auto technician may want to check for worn ball joints. These are the parts that connect the lower control arm of the front suspension to the steering knuckle. If a ball joint displays up-and-down (axial) free play or side-to-side (radial) free play, it probably requires replacement. However, if the car needs a new ball joint on one side, it does not necessarily follow that the ball joint on the other side also needs to be replaced. This is also true of cars with both upper and lower ball joints. They need not necessarily be replaced in pairs.

HINT: A loud front-end clunk heard upon applying brakes may also be an indication of a badly worn ball joint.
Rely on our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO to check out a front-end shimmy or any other problem you are having. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the finest service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). We are a Mass. Inspection Station. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Housing Authority Begins Deleading Of Apartments

The Quincy Housing Authority has begun to remove lead paint from its Snug Harbor apartments under a court order.

The QHA began deleading the Germantown apartments last week and will provide temporary local units for families who must leave their apartments during the process.

Lead paint was first discovered last May on windowsills and doors and in closets in the apartments.

Three weeks ago, tenants of the Snug Harbor apartments filed a lawsuit in Norfolk Superior Court asking that thousands of dollars in rent payments be removed immediately. The QHA has subsequently signed a consent order to remove the lead paint.

Lisa Mollicone, a lawyer representing the tenants, said the agreement will not stop her clients from moving forward with the class action lawsuit, but added that the QHA's agreement to start deleading takes care of some of her clients' grievances.

Martin Rooney, attorney for the QHA, said the deleading was scheduled to begin shortly anyway, regardless of the court order.

The consent order, filed last week, says the QHA does not admit liability for the lead paint and does not recognize the class-action suit.

Rooney said the QHA maintains that the lawsuit is groundless, and that tenants do not have the legal right to rent rebates.

The QHA has received $180,000 from the state to delead 60 apartments at the Germantown complex. It plans to have all family apartments deleading in the coming year, and remaining units as they are vacated.

City officials have endorsed a home-rule petition that would allow Quincy College to establish a special account for the purpose of using rental money to fund city public school programs.

The petition would give the college the authority to place the $217,000 in annual rent money it pays the School Committee for the use of three properties, including Coddington Hall and two administration buildings at 50 and 58 Saville Ave., directly into a new account known as the "Quincy Public School Department Income Fund."

Programs that would be funded by the new account include middle school athletics, middle school foreign language programs, and computer education. Currently, the rent money for the three properties can only be used for maintenance purposes at the college.

The home-rule petition was designed by a Conference Committee composed of City Council President Michael Cheney, Ward 5 Councilor Charles Phelan, chairman of the City Council Education Committee; School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond; and School Committee member Ronald Mariano, who also serves as state representative. With the City Council's unanimous approval Monday night, the petition must now be signed by Mayor James Sheets and sent to the state Legislature for approval.

Sheets said Tuesday that he had not yet seen the petition, but added that assuming he and City Solicitor Stephen McGrath find nothing objectionable in its language, he will be pleased to sign it and get the rental issue resolved.

"It's important to have money for those (school) programs," said the mayor.

Mariano said he is "extremely thrilled" the City Council passed the petition and said he will try to quickly move it through the Legislature along with the Quincy College governance petition that was passed last month so that both will be passed before the beginning of the new fiscal year in July.

"Obviously, the (new) home-rule petition and the governance change go hand in hand," said Mariano. "Our goal is to have it done by sometime in June."

Raymond said he also is happy the school programs will be properly funded, adding that the completion of the new home-rule petition is a tribute to the teamwork of the four-man Conference Committee.

"I'm very pleased with the final result," said Raymond. "It's indicative of what elected officials can accomplish if we continue to work together."

The Conference Committee was formed after the City Council deleted an amendment to Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a new, independent board of trustees as the governing body over Quincy College, which is currently governed by the School Committee. The amendment, taken from an earlier college governance petition proposed by Raymond, would have allowed a revolving account to be set up so that the college rent money could be used to fund the school programs.

After the amendment was deleted, Sheets expressed concern to The Quincy Sun that if the School Committee could not use the rent money to fund the school programs, it would have no "incentive" to continue to use the three properties for college purposes and could eventually decide to take the buildings over for public school use. That, Sheets said, would mean the college could be forced to move to another community.

Members of the City Council responded to Sheets' comments the following week, saying that they would never do anything to harm the college or the public schools and noting that the college would not have to leave the city because the passage of the mayor's home-rule petition would make it stronger than ever.

Cheney said the petition for the new account has "much stronger language" than the amendment deleted from the mayor's petition. He said it allows for more accountability about how the funds are used by requiring the city's school superintendent, on behalf of the School Committee, to prepare a detailed budget to be submitted to the City Council for approval at the same time as the annual school department budget.

Expenditures from the account will be made by the superintendent, and if any money is left unspent at the end of a fiscal year, it would remain in the account, Cheney said. He added that in the unlikely event the City Council disapproved of any items in the School Committee's budget, that money also would remain in the account until either the budget was resubmitted or after the Conference Committee reconvened to discuss the issues involved.

Phelan agreed with Cheney's description of the new account, saying that the language in the college governance petition was "very vague."

"I felt very strongly about the (public) school programs, but I couldn't support the original language," said Phelan. "This (new account) will allow the college a way to return something to the community."

The formation of the Conference Committee was the first time members of the School Committee and City Council ever joined together in a joint body other than to fill a vacant seat on the School Committee.

will move through the Legislature much more quickly than I anticipated."

The City Council approved the petition at its March 7 meeting. The New England Association of Schools and Colleges has ruled that Quincy College, which is currently governed by the School Committee, must change its governance system or risk losing its accreditation.

Sheets' petition calls for the establishment of a 13-member independent board of trustees to run the college. It is similar to an earlier petition proposed by a mayoral task force led by School Committee woman Linda Stice, although the mayor has said his petition has stronger language regarding college employees' rights.

In the meantime, Young has been meeting with NEASC officials to ensure that the school is not placed on probation, something that would have a detrimental effect on college enrollment. NEASC officials recently told Young they would delay any decisions regarding probation until the home-rule petition has had time to move through the Legislature.

City May Take Over Parking Sites

on the ground level of the Ross garage.

The mayor said the reason for the free parking is to offer shoppers an extra incentive to come to Quincy Center and to create a quicker turnover of vehicles at the site. He also said that while free parking is currently not planned for the Hancock lot, any decisions made concerning the Ross garage will affect the other lot in some way.

Sheets said Tuesday that Quincy developer Mark Dickinson is currently working on a plan for future development at the Hancock lot.

According to Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Metropolitan Parking currently pays the city $125,000 to manage both the Ross Parking Garage and Hancock Parking Lot. In addition, the company pays Quincy a percentage of its annual gross revenue determined by total of the revenue.

Sheets has said any financial loss Quincy would suffer from the reduced amount of paid parking should be offset by additional shoppers and other aspects of the city's downtown revitalization.

Quincy Receives Another $100,000 For First Time Homebuyers Program

Mayor James Sheets announces that Secretary Mary Padula of the State's Executive Office of Communities and Development has approved another $100,000 of grant funds in addition to the $100,000 awarded last year to the City of Quincy for its First Time Home Buyer's Soft Second Program.

The program is being administered through its Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD) and the Quincy Housing Partnership. The program represents the State and City's commitment towards providing affordable housing and helping people achieve their dream of homeownership.

The program consists of two parts; assistance for downpayment and closing costs provided by the City's Federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG); and mortgage subsidy funded through the Massachusetts Housing Partnership (MHP)/Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) Soft Second Program. The Quincy Savings Bank and the Co-operative Bank have been selected through a formal solicitation process as the lending banks for the first mortgage.

The City's CDBG fund provides up to three percent of the purchase price of the home. Of this up to two percent may be used as part of the homeowner's five percent down payment. Up to one percent may be credited towards closing costs.

The second program component is the MHP/EOCD Soft Second Loan. To make mortgage payments affordable, with the homebuyer putting down five percent of the purchase price, the mortgage is broken into a 75 percent conventional first mortgage and 20 percent second mortgage. The Soft Second component subsidized the interests on the second mortgage for 10 years. The subsidy is highest for the first five years and decreases from year six through 10. From year 11 to 30, the homeowner pays the entire principal and interest for both first and second mortgages.

Other key features of the Soft Second Program are:

- Five percent down
- No points
- No private mortgage insurance

In order to be eligible, the applicant must be a first-time homebuyer, meet the HUD low-mod income limits, have good credit and take a First Time Homebuyer Course. There is no residency requirement. The property must be located in Quincy. Other restrictions may apply.

The process is as follows:

The applicant submits an application form and copies of financial documents to PCD. The PCD reviews the application, verifies the information and determines eligibility. A credit report is obtained and reviewed. The PCD and the QHP conduct preliminary screening and determine the level of subsidy. Eligible applications are forwarded to the bank. The bank holds a pre-qualification meeting with the applicant and obtains from EOCD A temporary 90-day set-aside on the Soft Second funds. The applicant finds a home, signs a purchase and sale agreement and submits a mortgage application and support documents. The bank makes final loan decisions. The bank confirms with the City on the downpayment/closing costs assistance and with MHP/EOCD on the Soft Second mortgage subsidy. The bank conducts loan closing and the clients take possession of their new home.

This program combining CDBG and MHP/EOCD Soft Second Funds was implemented by the PCD for the first time in FY 1991-92. The City utilized all of its $100,000 of MHP/EOCD funds and $37,762 of CDBG funds to assist a total of 13 first-time homebuyers. The Co-operative Bank, the Quincy Savings Bank and the Bank of Boston participated in this program.

In late 1993, the City received another $100,000 of the State's Soft Second funds which the city combines with $50,000 of its Federal Home funds to assist first-time home buyers. To date, all soft second funds have been committed for reserved for some 15 households.

In early 1993, the PCD also implemented a different type of first-time homebuyers' program involving about $200,000 of Federal Home funds. Assistance was in the form of assistance on the downpayment and closing costs. Thirteen households benefitted from this program.

The City is being asked by EOCD to commit all of the new grant by June 30, 1994. The PCD therefore will receive new applications and process them as quickly as possible on a first come, first served basis.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

We like this quotation by Robert South - "If there be any true measure of a man then by what he doeth, it must be by what he gives."

BE GENEROUS - SHARE YOUR LIFE

Do I always think in terms of money when I think of being generous?

If I think about being generous with the richness that is always a part of my life, I like the limitations I have set upon myself and always have plenty with which to be generous. I can be generous with words of praise and encouragement.

I can be generous with my smile.
I can be generous with my time.
I can be generous with my friendship.
I can be generous with my talents and skills.
I can be generous with my prayer.
I can be generous with my word of appreciation.
I can be generous with my example of a faith-filled God-directed life. Yes, I can be generous with the richness of my life. - Unknown Author

Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we're constructing a 1,645-square-foot addition to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it will mean a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

Kennedy Confident Health Care Will Become Law

(Cont'd from Page 1) we've done that in a number of communities, we're talking four or five or six of any other them, and that's true across the state. This is something we continue to be interested in."

Kennedy also commented on several other issues, including escalating sewer rates, economy, interest rates, turnover in the Congress and his re-election campaign.

The senator said he is hopeful the federal government will provide greater assistance for the Boston Harbor cleanup. He noted President Clinton has supported multi-year funding for the cleanup, which commits federal dollars from his administration throughout his term.

"He (Clinton) also changed in terms of the revolving fund to have grants as well as loans and we've also changed the formula in the revolving fund to enhance the resources on the basis of need and Massachusetts gets of the states the second highest increase."

"It's still not as much as any of us think is necessary but at least we're building that into that whole process."

Regarding interest rates, Kennedy said he is frustrated by the Federal Reserve Board's decision to hike interest rates.

"I've spoken to the President and to (Treasury Secretary Lloyd) Bensen and Alan Greenspan (chairman of the Federal Reserve Board). They have responsibilities in terms of the country and also the international trade market."

"We're just beginning to get sort of moving in New England and those interest rates are absolutely devastating."

There are different situations in parts of the country but I have yet to hear from someone in Massachusetts in the last year saying they're concerned about inflation.

"It has an enormous impact in terms of getting a lift on not only stimulating the economy but dealing with some of the social issues as well in terms of jobs, people working but some other kinds of factors as well."

"I find it very, very difficult to try to follow the rationale."

On the increasing incidence of turnover in Congress, Kennedy said:

"I think part of the frustration is the failure of the institutions to try and deal with people's problems. They're saying your not dealing with the problems, (like) the harbor, the schools, crime is going up, we've lost our jobs, and the deficit is going up. There is a lot of very legitimate frustration."

"The Founding Fathers were so scared about the concentrations of power that they diffused the power. There's so many checks and balances on everything so they wouldn't have this concentration of power."

"So many of these issues are so complex and have an enormous impact in terms of large financial and economic interests, that it's not hard to slow things down or divert it or from really trying to come to grips with these issues, not like we've got all the answers."

"We ought to try to deal with some of the other issues. On the health care I've been on 11 different bills. I want to see something that is practical and works."

"It's very, very difficult to get serious address to serious issues and therefore people rely sort of on gimmicks to try and sort of do this... like there's a silver bullet in this and there aren't. And when you see that sort of moving in that direction, then I think it increases the level of frustration of people as well as the political leaders."

Kennedy said he thinks does not support a balanced budget amendment, a proposal he considers a "gimmick."

With a balanced budget amendment, Kennedy said the federal courts would decide what programs would be cut if the federal budget is in deficit. "I wouldn't want any of them making the decision about what taxes they're going to increase and what programs they're going to decrease."

A revised amendment would allow the courts to rule the budget in deficit and Congress would have to correct it. "We've already got that right, we've already got the power to do that today but idea that that will be in the political dialogue about who is fiscally responsible and who isn't (is) a gimmick."

Kennedy, who has served in the Senate since 1962, is eager to campaign for reelection.

"I've always run for the office and not against my opponent and I've always look at this campaigns as educational experiences."

both for me and for the people. I think they get an heightened interest in the campaign and political process."

If elected to a seventh term, Kennedy said his goal would be solving long-term health care problem.

"I think there's a deficiency in this program because we're not dealing with long term care needs and I think we have a very small allocation in terms of home care and prescription drugs for the elderly. The real support for home care, long term care, is going to be a high priority of mine."

Besides health care, Kennedy said the economy and jobs is of paramount concern. "It's there water rates making it difficult to make ends meet, it's the future of their employment, whether they're going to be able to get good jobs, whether their children will be able to get jobs, whether they're going to be able to get sufficient jobs."

"The economy is the key issue and that is translated into jobs. If the economy is wrong, nothing else is right."

Kennedy also praised the Chamber for its involvement and activism.

"Your chamber is so involved and so active, I get a chance to see them all and I think your's is clearly on the cutting edge on so many of the different kinds of issues and questions, so I take my hat off to all of those that have been leaders today and in the past. Well done and I look forward to working with you."

QUINCY RESIDENTS!

The Mayor, the City Council, the Recycling Committee and BFI wish to extend to the residents of Quincy a sincere congratulations to everyone who contributed to help make the Recycling Program such a tremendous success in 1993.

During the year, Quincy residents recycled 4331 tons of paper, 1574 tons of glass, 556 tons of plastic and 196 tons of tin/steel cans. Along with recycling, we also composted approximately 2000 tons of leaves.

The total material recycled or composted was 8657 tons which saved the City $411,207.50 in avoided disposal fees. Again, congratulations!

We recycled or composted 20.7% of our residential waste stream in 1993 and have set our 1994 goal at 25% recycled or composted.

With everyone's help, we will meet and hopefully surpass our 1994 25% goal.

Thank you for a tremendous effort!

Sincerely,

The Mayor
The City Council
The Recycling Committee

JUST A REMINDER!

DO'S

NEWSPAPER: Recycle all newspapers, cereal boxes, phone books, magazines, white office paper, junk mail and envelopes. Place in brown paper bags or bundle (not in plastic bags.)

GLASS: Recycle clear, green or brown glass food and beverage containers ONLY. Wash, remove caps and neck rings.

PLASTIC: Recycle plastic drinking bottles and other plastic containers marked with a ♻ or ♻ usually on the bottom of the container.

ALUMINUM AND METAL CANS: Recycle all aluminum and metal food and beverage cans. Please rinse thoroughly. Empty aerosol cans have been added to our list. You do not have to remove paper labels.

DON'TS

DO NOT recycle pizza boxes, waxed cardboard or tissue paper.

DO NOT recycle light bulbs, plate glass, drinking glasses, auto glass, mirrors, ceramics or any glass that is not a container. Please, no broken glass.

DO NOT recycle plastic wrap, plastic bags or plastic bottles for motor oil, anti-freeze or other hazardous materials. Do not recycle PVC pipe, foam cups or foam packing material.

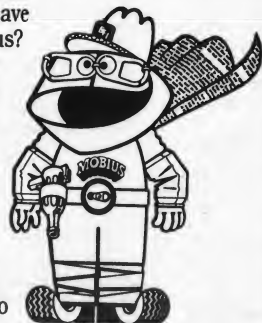

DO NOT recycle scrap metal, paint cans, automotive product cans, aluminum pie plates or foil.

DID YOU KNOW?

- By recycling one ton of daily newspapers, we will save 3.3 cubic yards of landfill space.
- Every ton of paper recycled saves 17 trees.
- The average American uses the equivalent of 7 trees every year. That's 1 1/2 billion trees used annually.
- Americans throw away enough aluminum cans every three months to rebuild our entire air fleet.
- Recycling glass saves 25-32% of the energy used to make glass.
- For every four tons recycled, enough energy is saved to heat an average sized house in New England for a year.

Speaking of recycling, have you ever heard of Mobius?

He may not be stronger than a steel can or able to leap piles of newspapers in a single bound, but Mobius is BFI official recycling mascot. His name comes from the 18th century mathematician, Augustus F. Mobius who developed a continuous loop with only one side. The recycling industry's familiar "arrows" logo was derived from this design. The Mobius character is easily recognizable. His feet are made of tire remnants, arms are aluminum cans, his hat is part of a water bottle, eyeglasses are can flip tabs and his cape is recycled newspaper.

Building Dept. Needs More Staff, Says Mulvey

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey is planning to submit a request for four additional employees in his department to Mayor James Sheets because of an increase in zoning permit requests and a number of additional duties.

The total cost to add the four to the city payroll would be approximately $120,000, the building inspector said Tuesday. The department's FY94 budget is $433,624.

Mulvey said the building department currently employs 11 people and is being stretched to the limit by a growing number of permit requests as well as daily safety inspections, office paperwork and other work.

"We are just buried," he said.

Mulvey said the department has already issued 1,000 building permits, the receipts of which have totaled $543,545, through the first nine months of FY94. In FY93, 1,450 permits totaling $408,404 were issued, and in FY92, the totals were 1,534 for $729,149.50.

Mulvey said the FY92 figures should "easily" be surpassed by the end of this fiscal year (June 30). The increase in requests can be attributed to lower mortgage rates and a tendency today among homeowners to build additions to their homes instead of moving to other communities, he said.

He added that it is often "physically impossible" for his department to perform all of the safety inspections that are scheduled on a daily basis.

Mulvey said he plans to ask Sheets for the following additional staff: another assistant building inspector; another public safety inspector; a building inspector to do primarily zoning enforcement, and a clerk to assist in departmental office duties. He estimated that it would cost about $120,000 to put all four on the city payroll.

Currently, the department employs three assistant building inspectors and two clerks, Mulvey said. The public safety inspector's position has been vacant for some time because the last person to hold it had to go on workman's compensation, he noted, and he said he would not only like to make sure that position is filled but also have a second inspector.

While Mulvey said his primary concern about lack of manpower at the department is public safety and keeping city buildings in the best possible condition, he noted that there is another factor to be considered. Building Officials and Code Administrators (BOCA) International, a worldwide entity, is currently re-

Starting At Parker School

Ayers Seeks Safety Measures At School Zones

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers is hoping to make traffic and safety improvements at city school zones beginning with the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy.

Ayers was scheduled to hold a meeting last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. at the school in conjunction with the Parker PTO.

Ayers said he has been working on the issue with City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon who was scheduled to make a presentation at last night's meeting.

"I've been going through the entire area, and I'd like to put a couple of safeguards on the school zones, starting with Parker," said Ayers. "I'd like to see more signage—maybe more 'do not enter' signs—and whatever else the traffic engineer thinks is necessary."

Ayers said the main reason for his actions is the safety and well-being of the school's pupils.

"My primary concern is the safety of the children," he said. "It's a very congested area."

Gillon said at press time that his studies were not yet complete, but added that he is looking into the possibility of prohibiting traffic on Faxon Road during certain hours to allow school buses to pass through with more ease. He added that he may also suggest setting up a bus layover point on Glover Avenue to help alleviate the problem.

"The traffic is kind of messy there, and the crossing guards have had some problems," said Gillon. "It's a real tough situation."

Gillon also noted that he has discussed the problem with Sgt. Hugo Cardarelli of the Quincy Police Department whom he credited with bringing the matter to his attention.

The meeting at the Parker School was scheduled to be open to the public.

Traffic, Other Concerns At Franklin St. Corner

By LISA CONNELL

When brothers Hesham and Khaled Kenawy applied for a self-service gasoline station and a change of operators and managers at the Franklin Street Getty, 60-70 Franklin St., they opened a Pandora's box.

Opposition to the station from residential abutters, a surveyor's map that doesn't clearly delineate property lines between the Getty station and the 7-11 store next door and the heavily vehicular-trafficked intersection of Franklin and Water Sts.; all of these factors entered into the License Board's decision Tuesday to continue the Kenawy's request for another week.

"It's not all your fault," said License Board Chairman and City Clerk Joseph Shea to the Kenawys. "Some of these problems would exist regardless of who owned the station."

Building Inspector and Board Vice-Chair Matthias Mulvey did not recommend that the Board move forward on a change of management until past issues left by previous management were acted upon.

Getty representative Mark Smith and Project Engineer James Gianrusso III of Bayside Associates in Somerville also appeared before the Board.

The Board told the Kenawys to meet with city Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon and the Zoning Board of Appeals as part of the resolution process.

Pneumatic Scale Site Public Hearing Postponed Until May 16

A public hearing on the rezoning of the land in North Quincy which includes Pneumatic Scale has been postponed until Monday, May 16.

The hearing will be held at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Originally set for Tuesday, April 19, the hearing had to be rescheduled for various reasons, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The hearing had been scheduled by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, who has suggested rezoning the land from Industrial "B" to Planned Unit Development.

PUD allows for more community input by making the City Council the special permit granting authority over the site. The council, under PUD, would have the final say on any business that moves to the site.

Pneumatic Scale has contracted to sell its building on Newport Avenue and may soon need another facility.

First Hiring In Five Years 18 New Firefighters Join Department

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Eighteen new firefighters were sworn in last Friday during a ceremony in the City Council Chamber, the first new hiring in the fire department in five years.

The new firefighters fill 18 of 20 vacancies created by retirements since 1989. The hiring brings the department's manning level to 154, said Chief Thomas Gorman.

Fourteen of the 18 new firefighters are from Quincy. The others are from Pembroke (2), Milton and Stoughton.

They new firefighters, in the order of their appointments, are:

John P. Gillan, age 28, of 230 Billings St., Quincy; Russell Nord, 32, of 122 Elm St., Quincy; Paul O'Grady, 26, of 47 Sachem St., Quincy; James McCluskey, 24, of 8 Piper St., Quincy; Steven Baylis, 29, of 108 Lenox St., Quincy; Michael Worley, 23, of 15 Dundee Rd., Quincy; Roger Kineavy, 33, of 11 Church St., Milton; James A. Bailey, 37, of 29 Macy St., Quincy; Paul F. Halloran, Jr., 28, of 29 Lionel Ln., Pembroke; Neil Leonard, 29, of 165 Smith Ave., Stoughton; Michael Flynn, 27, of 185 Taffrail Rd., Quincy; Christopher Condon, 26, of 55 Elm St., Quincy; Stephen Mitchell, 35, of 52 Robertson St., Quincy; Paul Campbell, 29, of 76 Commonwealth Ave., Quincy; Stephen Wells, 31, of 72 Bigelow St., Quincy; Stephen Grazioso, 28, of 38 Center St., Pembroke; Peter DiBona, 37, of 9 Viden Rd., Quincy; and John McCarthy, 28, of 47 Merrymount Rd., Quincy.

The firefighters will earn a starting salary of $25,304. The annual pay increases to $32,068 after one year.

The hiring process for this group of recruits began in earnest last October when a hiring lottery was conducted.

From thousands of applicants who took the Civil Service test, a list of 46 potential candidates was compiled. Most of the 46 were veterans or had perfect scores on the Civil Service test.

The list of 46 was then pared down after interviews, background checks, physical and psychological tests, said Tom Koch, executive secretary for Mayor James Sheets. "Everybody on the list was touched," Koch said, meaning all 46 potential hires underwent the pre-requisite background checks, tests and interviews.

Because of a backlog at the state Fire Academy, the 18 selected individuals were trained in-house by Quincy Fire Captain Frank Sullivan, the city's training officer. The in-house training saved the city $100,000, and avoided a two-year training delay at the state Fire Academy.

"If these men had been trained at the state Fire Academy, they wouldn't have been ready until 1996," Gorman said. "The city is proud to have 18 well-trained firefighters which are ready to go and serve," the chief said.

Gorman also thanked Sheets and the City Council for budgeting and appropriating the "money possible to put these men on."

Sheets congratulated the new firefighters. "I wish you well in your career as a firefighter in the city of Quincy."

The mayor said the hiring was made possible because the department's finances have improved since he first took office in 1989. Four years ago, there was talk of closing a fire station to cut costs. Because of layoffs and reduced manpower, rotating a fire apparatus became standard procedure.

However, despite dwindling resources, Sheets insisted on keeping all fire stations open.

"I made a decision not to close any fire station," Sheets said, eliciting strong applause from the 100 family and friends attending the ceremony.

"None of them have been closed because they are critical to residents on peninsulas," the mayor said, adding fire trucks are a reliable source of emergency transportation through flooded streets.

Four years later, Sheets has pledged to beef up the city's public safety effort with personnel hiring and capital improvements to the police and fire

WJDA To Begin 24-Hour Broadcasts April 18

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Radio station WJDA (1300 AM), which has served Quincy and the rest of the South Shore for nearly 47 years, will begin broadcasting 24 hours a day beginning Monday, April 18.

Station Manager John Nicolson said the reason for the increased hours is a simple one.

"It's about time we did it," he said. "With the things are (technologically) available to us today, it's just something we should do."

"And we're really looking forward to it. It will give us the opportunity to better serve the South Shore as its local station."

The new programming will mainly consist of the station's satellite-provided music and Associated Press news at the top of every hour, Nicolson added.

The station, located at 29 Brackett St. in Quincy, was founded by the late James D. Asher and first went on the air Sept. 13, 1947. Currently, it is owned by his son, James D. ("Jay") Asher Jr. At press time Asher could not be reached for comment.

Nicolson noted that went WJDA first went on the air, it was a true "daylight station," and its nightly sign-off time depended on the time of the year. In the summertime, the station would occasionally sign off as late as 8 p.m., but in November and December, it sometimes stopped broadcasting as early as 4:15 p.m., he said.

In 1987, in conjunction with its 40th birthday, the station received Federal Communications Commission (FCC) permission to increase its hours at a reduced amount of power, Nicolson said. Currently, WJDA is on the air Mondays through Saturdays from 5 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sundays from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The only additional cost to the station for the increased hours will be for the power it uses, which Nicolson indicated is a minimal expense. Current staff people will man the station for the remaining hours of the day, he said.

"I don't know exactly how it's going to shake down, but we're not planning on hiring anyone," he said.

Nicolson added that he thinks the station's listeners will be pleased with the added programming.

"Now you won't have any reason to go anywhere," he said with a laugh, "because there will be WJDA, 24 hours a day!"

Residents Can Exclude Property From Pesticide Applications

Residents requesting to exclude their property from pesticide applications must file with the city clerk by certified mail, announces Quincy Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

Filings must include residents' name and address; telephone number; names of all abutters; and list of programs from which exclusion is requested.

Those filing for exclusion must post their property at least every 50 feet with markings made known to those making the applications. For more information concerning mosquito control exclusions call the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at 762-3681.

The project will begin larval control program on or about April 11. The program will be a continuation of the procedures which have been used in past years from April through September, Gallahue said.

The mosquito control project will conduct larval control applications in low lying swampy areas where mosquito breed throughout the season.

The project will issue an additional notice in May before early morning residential fogging applications commence, the commissioner said.

FIREFIGHTERS BATTLE BLAZE in the marsh near Broad Meadows Middle School. The fire spread quickly because of high winds and took about two hours to be put out completely.

Firefighters Keep Blaze Away From Middle School

Quincy firefighters prevented a quickly-spreading marsh fire from reaching Broad Meadows Middle School over the weekend.

The fire began Saturday around 6 p.m. and came within 75 feet of the school, according to City Council President Michael Cheney who witnessed the blaze. Although firefighters had the fire under control within a half-hour, it took them about two hours to put it out completely, he added.

"Several acres were burnt," said Cheney. "The fire spread very quickly because of the high winds."

Cheney and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson praised the firefighters for their quick response and efficient work in keeping the blaze away from the school. The fact that the school and the marsh are separated by a parking lot also helped prevent any damage, they added.

Cheney said the fire grew to such an extent that it could even be seen from the City of Boston. He added that such fires are far too common.

"Marsh fires are common and unfortunately, they've become too common," he said. "They're frequently set by mischievous youths. When kids light marsh fires, they don't understand the dangers they pose to the many residential dwellings that are close to the marsh area."

"A fire like this could quickly turn into a disaster."

Prices are moving up.

Politics And Grass Roots

Smart politicians—especially incumbents—don't take anything for granted in an election year.
They run scared.

And, unless they have a valid reason, they don't pass up a grass-roots political get-together.

A number of the smart ones turned up at the Quincy Democratic City Committee meeting Saturday at the Fore River Clubhouse in Quincy Point.

Senator Edward Kennedy didn't make it personally.
But he did the next best thing. He sent his campaign right arm.

His nephew, Michael Kennedy, who is running his uncle's re-election campaign this year was there and quite visible.

The son of the late Robert Kennedy, he made it a point to thank the Democratic City Committee and local officials for the support given to his uncles, John and Ted Kennedy, through the years.

"We are taking it very seriously," he said, of the later's bid for another term.

Ted Kennedy who was first elected three decades ago, has at least three Republicans on his tail: Mitt Romney, John Lakain and Janet Jagelian. And others are thinking of jumping in.

Michael Kennedy indicated the Clinton Health Care Plan will be a prominent theme of his uncle's re-election bid along with his seniority and clout in Washington.

State Rep. William Galvin of Brighton was there Saturday drumming up support for his Secretary of State campaign.

Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti and Ron Mariano, all up for re-election were there. (Rep. Steve Tobin wasn't because of the funeral of a close family friend.)

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt of Quincy and Register of Deeds Barry Hannon of Braintree, were there. Both are up for re-election.

Quincy School Committee Vice Chairman Dan
Raymond and former Senator Paul Harold who aren't running for anything this year, made it a point to be there. (Both are considered possible future mayoral candidates).

Braintree Selectmen Tom Reynolds, running for Norfolk County Commissioner, was there.

So was former Dist. Atty. George Burke who has no political plans, but was there for old times sake.

The Democratic City Committee decided to stay with its cast of officers. Re-elected were:

Neal Sullivan, chairman; Alicia Coletti and Stephen Doherty, vice chairmen; Dale Musgrave, recording secretary; Josephine Shea, corresponding secretary, Joann Condon Walsh, treasurer and Barbara Morris, Affirmative Action Committee chairman.

Incumbent Democratic candidates—the smart ones—this year aren't forgetting the state election of four years ago when incumbents—especially Democrats—got caught in a political backlash which saw a number of them ousted. Mainly for being an incumbent and a Democrat

TOGETHERNESS: Charles McIntyre and his wife, Sheila, will both graduate from Suffolk Law School in June. And both will take the Massachusetts Bar Exam in July. The two met at Suffolk.

MCINTYRE

McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, made an impressive debut in politics last year as a city councillor at-large candidate. He finished fourth in the three-seat field, runner-up to City Council President Michael Cheney.

Will he be back as a candidate in next year's city election? "I really don't know," he says. "It all depends."

tries to sell you a raffle ticket, buy it!
Or two! Or three! Curry was a member of the Beechwood Community Life Center fundraiser committee that raised $3,500 for the center at a dinner last week at Amelia's, Marina Bay.

There were four prizes: $100, $50, $1,000 and $2,500.

Curry sold the winning $500 ticket to Peter O'Connell and the $2,500 winner to Kathleen and Bob Burnstein of Fabricated Steel in North Quincy.

During the night while the drawings were still going on and about five tickets left in the running for the two top prizes, Curry showed his midas touch once again.

Larry DeNardo put his ticket up for sale at $400.
Curry and his tablemates—Tom Galvin, Ed Keohane, Jerry Dacey, Don Uvanitte, Steve Marini and John and Paul Graham—pooled $50 each to buy it. It won the $1,000 prize for a return of $125 each.

He already has requests for next year's tickets.

4 Fire Dept. Members Commended

Four members of the Quincy Fire Department received commendations from the City Council last week.

Two commendations went to men that Ward 6

Councillor Bruce Ayers called "a couple of heroic firefighters." Daniel Sullivan was honored for attempting to rescue a man whose car plunged into the Neponset River March 12, while Kevin Donelin was honored for trying to put out a fire while off duty in Jamaica Plain on Oct. 12 of last year.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said two people would have died if not for Donelin's actions. He also praised both firefighters for their courage.

"I'm proud of them, and I think the city's proud of them," he said.

In addition, two fire department mechanics were commended for saving the city $160,000 by rebuilding an aerial ladder truck. Council President Michael Cheney said that Sonny Lewis, who was unable to attend the City Council meeting, and Earl McNamara are just two of many "unsung heroes" who work hard to save Quincy taxpayers' dollars.

Death Benefit Bill Passed For Public Safety Officers

State Senator Michael Morrissey announces the Legislature has given final approval to a bill which will provide a $100,000 death benefit to the survivors of a police officer, fire fighter or corrections officer killed in the line of duty.

Morrissey, a primary sponsor of the measure, said the passage of this legislation demonstrates that, "We recognize that these public servants put their lives on the line and face danger everyday. Although we can not bring back those who have given their lives to protect us, the passage of this bill will provide them with a sense of security as they will know that their families will be taken care of in the event of a tragic accident."

"Twenty-six fire fighters have been killed in the line of duty since 1976, while the escalating violence on our streets puts police officers and corrections officers in an increasingly dangerous situation. These men and women have given the final measure of devotion for our safety and well being, this is the least we can do for them."

The bill will go to Governor Weld for his signature. The Governor has stated that he supports the measure and is expected to approve it.

FR Tanker Loss Blamed On Democrats

An official of the North American Shipping and Trading Co. said the Fore River Shipyard probably lost $33 million in contracts to build three more 45,000-ton tankers because the Truman administration harassed Stavros Niarchos, owner of World Tankers, Inc.

April 14-20, 1953
41 Years Ago

Edward Ferris spoke at a reception in the Neighborhood Club following the laying of the keel of the first 45,000-ton tanker at the yard. A Fore River spokesman said the ways were prepared for a second tanker but the option was cancelled.

Due to the harassment of Mr. Niarchos, the second 45,000-ton tanker will not be built by Quincy," said administration, we are not now laying the keel for the largest cargo vessel ever conceived under the American flag."

Ferris said Niarchos had no official connection with the North American Shipping and Trading Co., which had been under investigation for alleged irregularities in the purchases of ships five years before.

WHITE HOUSE VISIT

A delegation from the Quincy Shipbuilding Committee, headed by Chairman George A. Daley, Jr., visited the White House with a plea for more support for the nation's merchant marine and more contracts for Fore River, where 1,600 workers faced loss of jobs.

Max Rabb of Brookline, a member of President Eisenhower's staff, explained to the delegation that many businesses were exerting pressure on the administration and that such decisions would be made "on the basis of essentiality."

The President was golfing in Augusta, Ga., at the time.

WORST STORM

Quincy escaped with little more than three to five inches as the worst mid-April snow storm in 35 years brought plows and sanders out of storage. There was a brief power outage in Houghs Neck and Germantown and WJDA was off the air for 2 1/2 minutes.

CRIME PREVENTION BUREAU

Police Chief William Ferrazzi announced creation of a new crime prevention bureau to specialize in juvenile problems. It was to be composed of Juvenile Officer James Ford and Patrolmen William Spencer and Edward Kusser.

Holocaust Victim Speaks At Woodward Luncheon

By BEVERLY ZIMMERMAN

The Woodward School held the last in a series of Community Luncheons last Thursday, a day that marked Yom HaShoah, the Hebrew Day of Remembrance for the Holocaust.

Guest speaker at the event was Esther Gens, a "hidden child" during the period of Nazi persecution of Jews.

Gens wove a dramatic and affecting story of her misfortune and survival. She was only 7 years old when the Nazis occupied her village in Poland. She and her 15-year-old brother were left in the care of a farmer, while her parents were transported to a ghetto for confinement.

The farmer revealed the identities of the children and Gens witnessed the Nazis' killing of her two brothers. Gens said she survived for the next four years by pretending to be Christian, comparing herself to a "chameleon."

At age 11, Gens was able to rejoin her mother, with whom she lived in a resettlement camp from 1945 to 1949. In 1949, she and her mother immigrated to Boston. She remembers that it was Washington's Birthday and she thought the band playing in the parade was celebrating her arrival in the United States.

Gens later attended high school, college and graduate school, married and raised three children.

In 1984, she and her husband visited the Auschwitz concentration camp as part of what she called a "healing process."

A non-profit, Brookline-based educational foundation, Facing History and Ourselves, helped Gens to "face her own history" and to talk about her painful experiences. A national and international organization, it seeks to educate teachers and students about the Holocaust as a means of combating anti-Semitism, violence, hatred, prejudice, racism, and indifference.

After completing the course, Gens began speaking to groups of people, including clergy and students. She said she prefers talking to children because hers is a "child's story," and added that she hopes her adversity "may help young people face their own adversities" and "stand up for what they believe in. She also noted that she feels very fortunate herself and wishes to turn her tragic experience into positive ones which will help people.

Following her talk, Gens entered into a half-hour question-and-answer dialogue, covering topics related to her story. Afterwards, she requested that students pen letters to her. One young woman wrote, "You touched the hearts of each and every girl. You are a perfect role model. Thank...you for sharing something so personal with us."

Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer Bob Hanna Community Policing Can Make A Difference

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. What exactly does it mean to be the city's Crime Prevention Officer? Most people would say that all police officers are supposed to fight crime.

A. That's correct. All police officers are charged with the duty of preventing crime, but my specific duties are to go out into the neighborhoods and talk to groups, senior citizens and other organizations and give them ideas about how they can better protect themselves and their property. We want people to see the police officer before the crime occurs.

Q. Do you have others who work with you in Crime Prevention?

A. No, it's a one-man band, so to speak.

Q. What are some of the issues you discuss with those you talk to?

A. Well, we always tell people they should pay attention to what they're doing, and who's around them, and what's going on, and they have to be a little more cautious about how they do things today than they did in the past.

Q. You're known by many Quincy Sun readers for your "Crime Watch" column. How did that first start?

A. It started in about 1986; it was a suggestion of (Sun Publisher) Henry Bosworth's that the police department print something in your paper. He presented that to (former) Chief (Francis) Finn at the time, and Chief Finn thought it was a great idea, and the three of us got together and worked out the details. It's done very well; we're very pleased about the response we've had.

Q. How about your career before you became Crime Prevention Officer? What was the most dangerous situation you've ever been in?

A. For the first 10 years of my career, I was assigned to the police wagon and the ambulance. The ambulance job was a very rewarding job, because you could help people in a number of different ways. For the next six years I was assigned to the motorcycles, to the special operations unit, and that was quite an interesting job.

Probably the most harrowing experience we had was back quite a few years ago when a Vietnam veteran was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. It was about three o'clock in the morning, and he fired a couple of shots into the police station from the cemetery across the street, and myself and three other officers went over to investigate. He stepped out from behind some bushes with a shotgun leveled at us and wanted us to kill him. It took us well over an hour to convince him that we were there to help him. And through this time, he was firing shotgun blasts into the air. In the end, we were able to apprehend him and get him off to a hospital for the help he needed.

Q. Let's talk about crime prevention tools. What do you think is the importance of neighborhood watch programs?

A. Well, the basis of those programs is that people become the eyes and ears of the police department. At one point in time, everybody knew everyone in the neighborhood. Today, we're a very transient society; people move in and move out and we very frequently don't even know who our next door neighbors are, other than to come out and wave to them as we're going to work in the morning.

So we try to get the neighbors together to get to know each other, and kind of watch out for each other and get to know each other's habits. And in that way, if there were

TWO OF THE key figures in the city's community policing and crime prevention efforts, Officer Bob Hanna and McGruff the Crime Dog, stand outside the Quincy Police Station.

FULL NAME: Robert Charles Hanna
AGE: 51
ADDRESS: Weymouth; born and raised in Quincy
OCCUPATION: Crime Prevention Officer of the Quincy Police Department since 1985; overall, has been with the department for 25 years
EDUCATION: graduated from Quincy High School, 1961; received associate's degree in law enforcement from Northeastern University, 1979; received bachelor's degree in law enforcement from New Hampshire College, 1985
FAMILY: married to the former Nancy Moulton. They have two children: Barbara, 25 and Robert Jr., 23 someone suspicious in the neighborhood, they'd pick up the phone and call the police and we'd come down and investigate it.

Q. I understand there's a push nowadays for more "community policing," i.e., the cop walking the neighborhood beat. What do you think of that?

A. That's an excellent idea. In Quincy, we have a form of neighborhood policing in the Germantown area through some local grants. We have two officers who walk through that area every evening; they attend crime watch meetings, they get to know the neighbors on a first-name basis and it's worked very well. The crime in the area has dropped significantly because of that.

Q. What about some of the other tools the department uses, such as the recently-reinstated K-9 Unit, mountain bicycles and the motorcycles that you mentioned before?

A. All of those are important additions to the police department. The three K-9 dogs that we have, have been instrumental in tracking down one individual and bringing up some other groups of people that were kind of rowdy.

The mountain bikes, it's an excellent concept; other large communities throughout the country have been using it for years. It's a very quick way and a very silent way for an officer to respond to a problem. People don't expect to see us arriving on a mountain bike, so consequently we've been able to make some apprehensions there.

The motorcycles work very well in moving groups of people, groups of kids that congregate in areas that cars can't get into such as playgrounds, golf courses, and parks.

And we're also talking about getting some horses; I believe probably in the next year we will see them.

Q. Has the crime rate in the city pretty much stayed level in recent years, or has it gone up or down in some areas?

A. It's pretty much stayed level; there has been certainly some increase, but it's been a minor increase compared to what other communities our size are having across the state. I think we can probably attribute that to the fact that people are calling the police to report suspicious situations.

Q. One area where Quincy has been praised nationally is for its domestic violence program. What role does the police department play in that?

A. We started the domestic violence program about 15 or 16 years ago as a pilot project through District Attorney (William) Delahunt's office. He provided all the training for us; we've worked very closely with the courts, and it's been an excellent tool. The teamwork together has really been excellent.

At one point in time, I can recall that we'd go to someone's house three or four times a week because the husband was beating the wife. And there wasn't really much you could do; all you could really do was ask them to leave for the night or something like that. And now with this domestic violence law on the books, the police officer is mandated to arrest the abuser, and in 99 percent of the times it's the male. So I think that we're seeing less abuse than we have in the past because of that, and I think it's worked out very, very well.

Q. What's the most common crime people are arrested for here in the city? I imagine drunk driving is up there.

A. Drunk driving is up there, although I don't think it's as bad as it once was; some people, I think, are getting the message. But probably the domestic violence is the one where more arrests are being made than any other.

Q. If you could offer one bit of advice to help people avoid being victims of a crime, what would it be?

A. We'd ask them to continue to work with the police and not be afraid to call the police. Too frequently, after a crime is committed, our detectives will talk to people in the neighborhood and they'll say, "Well, I did see something suspicious but I really didn't think anything of it" or "I didn't want to bother the police." That's what our job is; we're there 24 hours a day and contrary to public belief, we don't spend all of our time in Dunkin' Donuts.

If something looks suspicious, please call us. Let us come down, let us investigate it. It may be nothing. And people have to understand that they don't have to give us their name. We respond to any anonymous call just as well as if you'd given us your name, address and telephone number. The only thing we ask if you call anonymously, is if something changes before the police arrive, such as the individual leaves the area, if you could call us back and let us know the direction he went in, or the type of vehicle he or she may have gotten into.

But it's very important, and this is all part of that community policing effort, for the public to work with the police. In this country, we only have 22 police officers for every 10,000 people, and it's very important for people to take steps to protect their own property, and make sure they do call us when anything looks suspicious.

Recreation Department's Ceramics In Sun Window

The annual display of ceramic projects made by participants in the Quincy Recreation Department's program is in the window of The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St.

The projects were made by participants age eight through middle school who attended the program once each week sponsored by the Recreation Department.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch thanked Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth for allowing the window to be a show case for the artistic talents of the youth involved in this activity.

"Although our sports programs are highly publicized it is equally important to give recognition to the creative talents and effort put into these works. The children should be proud of their accomplishment," Welch said.

Participants with items on display are:

Julian Baker, Tama Baker, Maura Blaney, Elizabeth Caliri, Marcia Graceffa, Cassis Hurd, Christine Kirby, Lauren Krueger, Colleen Lahar, Kelly Maginnis, Alex Miranda, Stefan Miranda, Kristin Paluzzi, George Phipps and Tara Ridge.

Welch credited instructors Bill Santry, Pam Walsh, Margie Swanton and Bettyann McSweeney for sharing their ceramic skills with each individual participant. Supervisor of the ceramic program is Nancy Joyce.

Morrissey To Host Fund-Raiser For Irish Wheelchair Athlete

State Sen. Michael Morrissey will host a fund-raising reception for Derry Durand of Boerterstown, County Dublin, Ireland who will be racing in next week's Boston Marathon.

The fund-raiser will be held Saturday from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Norfolk County Recreational Facility, President's Golf Course, West Squantum Street, Quincy. It will be co-hosted by Rep. Michael Bellotti, former Sen. Paul Harold and South Boston businessman and running enthusiast Peter O'Malley.

A cash bar will be provided and refreshments will be served. A donation is requested.

Durand will be the first Irish wheelchair athlete to do the Boston Marathon. He is coming to Boston to raise funds and promote awareness for the Irish Wheelchair Association (IWA), a non-profit group that promotes independence for people with physical disabilities. The sport section of the IWA is a national voluntary sports body that provides opportunities for disabled Irish people who wish to participate in sport, from the recreational level to the International and Paralympic status.

The aim of the association is the fullest possible integration of athletes with disabilities within the sports world. Due to the fact that disabled sport is still developing, athletes must travel abroad from Ireland for top class competition, which makes it an expensive undertaking.

"I am happy to join with Mike Bellotti, Paul Harold and Peter O'Malley in hosting this fundraising event," said Morrissey. "This is a chance for people to help disabled Irish athletes compete worldwide while helping Derry defray the costs of his momentous journey to Boston for the marathon."

"I am especially pleased to host this reception for Derry who is originally from Dungarvan, County Waterford which is the ancestral home of the Morrissey family. It is nice to be able to help out someone from the old country on a visit to Boston."

Those wishing to make a donation who are unable to attend the fund-raiser may send checks made payable to New England Wheelchair Fund/IWA to: Irish Wheelchair Association-Sport, c/o Green Lane, Lexington, MA 02173.

"A block of Red Sox tickets for a game at Fenway Park will be made available at 1 p.m."

"The Centennial Gala Dinner in The Great Hall at Faneuil Hall will begin with cocktails at 7 p.m. followed by dinner at 8 p.m."

Only One Traffic Lane

Town Brook Project Ahead Of Schedule

The Town Brook Project currently under construction on Southern Artery is ahead of schedule, according to the Quincy Department of Public Works.

However, DPW officials have announced that due to the construction process, the roadway will have only one lane in each direction as it is returned to its original condition. The two-lane roadway with one operating lane in each direction is in effect from today (Thursday) through Friday, April 22 to coincide with school vacation week.

The DPW has suggested the Washington Street may be a preferable alternative route for some motorists during the nine-day construction period.

For more information, call the Army Corp of Engineers at 770-3819.

City Should Take Over Point Parking Lot, LaRaia Says

Councillor Joseph LaRaia has proposed that the city assume control of a Quincy Point parking lot by eminent domain.

The City Council recently passed a resolution in favor of LaRaia's proposal.

The parking lot is located diagonally across the street from the former Montello's function hall on Mass. Avenue. A Buddhist group that currently meets at a residential home in Wollaston is in the process of purchasing the Montello's building, a deal that was expected to be completed this week.

LaRaia said that the Buddhists cannot afford to purchase the parking lot, which is owned by the current Montello's owner, and added that it would be beneficial to neighbors and "in the city's best interest" to take the lot over by eminent domain.

"If it's sold for commercial purposes, it could aggravate parking problems in the area," he said.

LaRaia said the lot measures approximately 10,000 square feet and guessed that taking it over by eminent domain would cost the city between $50,000 and $75,000.

Concerns At Franklin St. Corner

Shea called for the need to refigure the whole intersection of the area.

Christine Graham, who has lived in the area for nearly 42 years, told Board members that, "it's not just the traffic, or self-service (proposal) but the people who work for Getty. They dispose of their product and they leave...Mr. Getty is out to pursue his gasoline product, I'm out for my own peace of mind and happiness."

Graham, who is also skeptical of the safety around a self-service station, frequently must drive out of her way to reverse direction to enter traffic flow.

"I can only speak for myself," said Shea, "but it is safe to say there is not much sentiment here for granting a self-service license."

Events on Saturday will include:

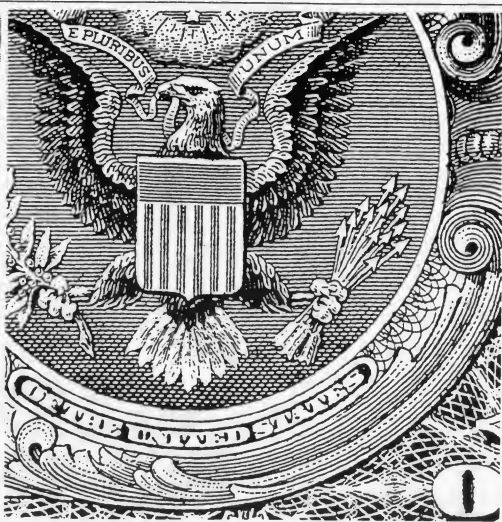

"Groundbreaking ceremonies for The Centennial Commons, at new feature at the school, from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m."

"The annual Alumnae Reunion Brunch will be held immediately following the groundbreaking. The two designated student Poet Laureates will read their award-

'Family Fun Festival' Planned For Shipyard Site

By LISA CONNELL

The spirit and fun of Quincy First Night will carry over into warmer weather as a "Family Fun Festival" is scheduled for April 26 through May 1 at the Fore River Shipyard.

If the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) gives the go ahead to First Night organizers, pending the outcome of ground tests, this will also indicate possible future uses of the once bustling Quincy shipyard for community activities.

The festival will be jointly sponsored by Quincy First Night and Fiesta Shows of Salisbury Beach, N.H.

No stranger to Quincy, Fiesta Shows has sponsored previous festivals at Marina Bay.

Eugene Dean of Fiesta Shows and City Council President and Quincy First Night Chairman Michael Cheney will be the primary organizers for the event.

The festival will take place inside the shipyard itself, with parking also inside this fenced-in area.

Fiesta Festivals has a good track record of working with the communities they enter to hold festivals. This is apparent by the high number of repeat sites chosen for festivals, Cheney said.

"We only wanted the best," said Cheney of Dean's management of Fiesta Shows.

The site of the festival, is as important a factor to the city, Cheney feels, as the management team behind the event.

"This will be a good way to utilize space that is otherwise non-productive," he said Tuesday of the shipyard itself.

Before any business activities are allowed to take place on shipyard property, the soil must be tested for possible contamination by the MWRA, according to Cheney.

Necessity being the mother of invention, this requirement is being met as the MWRA is scheduled to conduct soil tests within the next several days on the area slated for festival use, Cheney noted.

The MWRA has final approval of the site. There are no alternate sites planned for the event.

"People in the immediate proximity (to the festival site) will be issued passes so they can enjoy the event," Cheney said.

The festival will close at 10:30 p.m. each night.

HARD LESSONS

Some people put off routine automobile maintenance because they think it is too inconvenient to give up the use of their cars for the day. Others skip scheduled maintenance because they do not want to spend money on their cars if nothing is obviously wrong. The thinking of this former group of procrastinators usually changes when a worn radiator hose leaves them stranded at night on an interstate highway. Now, that is an inconvenience! As for the spendthrifts, they may reassess their values when failure to check the engine's oil level leads to a costly engine overhaul. The sad truth is that our highways are dotted with cars pulled over to the breakdown lane, and repair shops are filled with neglected cars. This is a hard way to learn that preventive auto maintenance helps avert big problems.

HINT: Statistics show that nine cars in ten have low fluid levels or are in need of a repair or adjustment.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO invites your inquiries about most anything concerning with the care of your car. Our technicians are highly skilled, so they can do everything necessary to keep your car in excellent condition, whether you are having a problem with a rough idle or surging during cruising. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550), we invite you to take advantage of our ALL-DATA computer system that gives us updates on all the latest manufacturer changes. departments. He noted the West Quincy fire station now has a new $206,000 engine.

"We are increasing the number of men in the department and we've made a number of promotions and we're working diligently to make sure we no longer have to rotate a piece of equipment.

"I believe that day will come soon," Sheets said, adding he will promote deserving firefighters and ranking officers and increase the number of firefighters in the near future.

"Firefighting has changed. So many of our calls are EMT calls. It's so good for people to know the department can respond in this way."

The mayor recalled a story of an elderly woman from Squantum who had fallen in her home. From the floor, she managed to dial 911. "Because we have the Squantum Fire Station, within two minutes that unit was there" and she was saved, he said.

"It's important we have these stations here so that we can respond with people who are adequately trained," the mayor said, noting all Quincy firefighters will undergo hazardous materials handling training.

City Council President Michael Cheney also offered congratulations. "These 18 individuals were selected from thousands of potential candidates who took the Civil Service list and from that list went into a lottery. We have selected the very cream of the crop. We're very proud of you."

Other officials attending the ceremony included Rep. Michael Bellotti, City Councilors Tim Cabill, Joseph LaRaia, Bruce Ayers, Peter Kolson, City Clerk Joseph Shea, Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger, and Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Walsh.

Malvesti Strong On Mound, At Plate Biagini's Clutch Hit Gives Quincy Opening Day Win Over Taunton

By KERRY BYRNE

Sophomore Joe Biagini did what many players dream of doing: he came up with an Opening Day game winning extra-inning hit as the Quincy Presidents knocked off the Taunton Tigers Monday at Adams Field, 5-4.

Biagini's hit - which knocked in Chris Cotter from third - capped a comeback that featured a key Steve Barrett run in the bottom of the seventh which tied the game for Quincy and sent it into the extra session. The hit also marked a milestone for the Presidents - it was the first time Quincy has beaten the Tigers since joining the Old Colony League in 1991.

Coach Bob Sylvia was extremely pleased with his team's performance. "This was a big win for the kids. They were into it from the beginning and did the right things when they had to. These are the types of games that hurt twice as much if you lose. So it's great to win."

Pitcher Tom Malvesti backedbone the victory with strong performances on the mound and at the plate. The senior pitched a complete game, striking out seven (including all three outs in the third), walking only three and giving up six hits.

Malvesti was rattled in the third inning when Taunton racked up three of their four runs, four of their hits and two of their walks. But like a seasoned veteran, he fought back and proved too much for the Tigers to handle. Malvesti held Taunton hitless in five of the eight innings.

"When Tom is pitching we can play with anyone. He's very serious out there. He plays other sports but baseball is his game," said Sylvia.

With bat in hand Malvesti opened with a double, walked in the third and hit a long fly ball in the fifth that was caught by the left fielder but would have been off the wall for a double at Fenway.

His biggest play came in the bottom of the seventh. Facing a full count with two outs, Malvesti ripped off the single that sent Barrett home for the equalizer.

Malvesti was not alone. The Presidents got big plays by everyone when they needed them. With the game tied 3-3 in the fifth, shortstop Steve Miller fired a laser to first baseman Pat Donovan from deep in the infield dirt for the putout. The next batter fired a shot that looked like it would roll into right field for a single, but second baseman Cotter made a beautiful stab while running backwards and to his left before throwing the ball to Donovan for the out. Donovan played error free ball while making eight putouts.

Key plays were made by the Quincy batters as well as every man in the lineup reached base at least once. Catcher Jon Gangi cracked the biggest wallop of the game - a fourth inning rocket that flew 350-feet before being run down by the center fielder for the out. His key contribution, though, was an eighth inning single which moved Cotter from first to third, putting him in position to score off Biagini's hit.

Other important contributions were made by third baseman Mike Caporale, who drew a walk in the seventh that moved Barrett into scoring position, and center fielder Tim Messing, who drove in Gangi during Quincy's two-run second inning burst that gave them a 3-0 lead.

"This was a great way to win," said Sylvia, "and a great first game to watch."

Steve Miller took the mound Wednesday when the Presidents travelled to Weymouth. Quincy will host Bridgewater-Raynham on Friday and Boston Latin on Saturday. Cotter is likely get the nod against B-R.

"These games on Wednesday and Friday are going to give us a better idea of how the league is going to look. On Opening Day everyone has their ace pitching, so we'll get to see more depth later this week," said the coach.

Pineo, a sophomore shot-putter, was one of North Quincy's outstanding athletes during the winter track season, and if she continues to throw like she did against Plymouth (31'9", first place) she'll be very tough to beat this season as well. Wingsze Yuen finished in second place with a heave of 25'9". The Red Raider shot putters should be a force to reckon with in the Old Colony League this season.

Senior Erin Duggan was North's other first place finisher, capturing the mile with a time of 5:58.1.

Other solid efforts were made by Amalia Solano, who captured second place finishes in the 400 and triple jump; Mel Gaziano who race to the third spot in the 800; and Ng who finished 300 hurdles in a time of 56.3 seconds.

The Red Raiders nabbed points in the javelin as Heather Simmons and Erica Crawford finished two and three, respectively. Simmons threw the stick 81'11", just one inch shy of the winning effort. Crawford made a throw of 61'10".

North Quincy was scheduled to travel to Falmouth Tuesday, April 12. They will host Barnstable on Thursday.

Over 80 Boys And Girls Participate Beechwood Knoll Wins Recreation Department Basketball Jamboree

The Quincy Recreation Department recently conducted its annual end of season Basketball Clinic and Jamboree for participants in its city-wide elementary after school and Saturday recreation programs.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said more than 80 boys and girls participated in this activity designed to instruct elementary age participants in the skills of basketball under game conditions. Participation, not competition, is emphasized throughout the program.

Before playing a series of round robin mini-games, the participants took part in a clinic conducted by Brian Buckley, head basketball coach of Boston College High School and a long-time leader in the Quincy Recreation program. Buckley emphasized drills that each youngster could practice on their own and would be fun as they learned new skills.

After a series of 11 round robin games, Beechwood Knoll captured the Jamboree Cup with a win over a combined Atlantic-Merrymount team.

In first round mini game action, first year entry Bernazzani A team opened with a win over Snug Harbor, 32-6. Colleen Kelly had 4 and Frank Kelly 2 points for Snug Harbor, while Andrew Mannix, Jen Djerf and Mike Haines all contributed to the Bernazzani win.

Beechwood started its championship run with a 24-2 win over a young Squantum team. Chris Lockhead's 7 points led all scorers. Pat Foley had 2 and Joe Sudak had 4 for Beechwood. Chris Selter, Wayne Moynihan and Todd White played well for Squantum, while Pat Feeney had 2 points.

Montclair jumped to an early lead then held on to beat Atlantic-Merrymount 14-8. Coach Dean Zoia, Sr. saw Dean Zoia, Jr., lead all his Montclair teammates with 10 first half points, John Naughton had two, Christian Donovan 4, Leo Ahern 2, Steve Barbuto 2.

Atlantic-Merrymount's Sean McLaughlin had 6, Dave Buckley 4, and Greg Shields 2. Wollaston opened the tournament with a 23-4 win over the Bernazzani "B" team. Kevin Weeks and Matt Mooney each had eight points despite the swarming defense of Nicole Worley, Kelly Linnane, Dan Spillane and Patrick LeLual.

Beechwood Knoll rolled to a 16-10 victory over a strong Bernazzani "A" team. Charlie Acton with 8 points led Beechwood followed by Joe Halloran with 4 points for the Joe Mulvey coached Beechwood squad. For the Bernazzani "A" team coached by Brian Buckley, Andrew Mannix and Pat Bregoli led the Bears.

Wollaston edged out a tough Montclair team by the score of 18-14. Kevin Weeks, the game's leading scorer, led Wollaston with 12 points followed by Matt Mooney's 6. Wollaston coach Joe Murphy praised teammates Alex Liang, Sean O'Keefe, Stephen King, Pat McGovern and Mike Ryan for their defensive contributions. Reid Donovan, Dean Zoia, Jr., and Steve Barbuto contributed to Montclair's 14 points with 4 points each. John Naughton added 2 points.

Snug Harbor squeaked by Squantum, 10-8. Colleen Kelly led Snug Harbor with 6 points followed by Frank Kelly and Dine Morgan with 2 each. Jay Chase and Eddie Farrell showed great hustle for Mike Norton coached Snug Harbor team. Squantum, coached by Sean Dolbear, received balanced scoring from Chris Selter, Brian Thornton, Todd White and Mike Feeham with 2 points apiece.

Coach Stacey Welch's club bounced back from its first round loss to defeat a tough Bernazzani "B" team, 12-6. David Buckley had 6 points while Greg Shields, Pat O'Brien and Sean McLaughlin each scored a basket. Steve Graham and Lee Sheehan played outstanding defense for Coach Welch.

Coach Buckley saw Dan Spillane toss in 4 and Nicole Worley 2 for the hustling Bernazzani "B" squad. Although exiting early, the first year teams for Bernazzani led the Jamboree in enthusiasm.

In semi-final action, Beechwood Knoll eliminated Wollaston, 22-7. Chris Lockhead scored 8 points and Matt Joyce contributed 4 to lead Beechwood to the championship round. Kevin Weeks scored 4 and Alex King 2 for the strong Wollaston team.

In its bid to play in the tournament championship game, Snug Harbor dropped an 18-8 heartbreaker as David Buckley sank 12 points for an Atlantic-Merrymount win. Colleen Kelly and Eddie Farrell led Snug Harbor with 4 points each. Coach Mike Norton praised Franky Kelly for outstanding defense.

In the championship game, Pat Foley came up strong with 10 points and Matt Joyce added six as Beechwood Knoll rolled past Atlantic-Merrymount to win the tourney. Greg Shields and Pat O'Brien led the Atlantic-Merrymount scorers. Eight players scored for the deep Beechwood team.

Welch presented all participants a water bottle courtesy of C.V.S. stores. The Jamboree Trophy was presented to Beechwood Knoll for display at their program.

Giordani's Three Goals Pace Granite Rail Pizza

Josh Giordani's three goals topped the Granite Rail Pizza attack as they beat Purdy's Ice Cream, 9-2, in Mite House League season ending jamboree.

Following Giordani were Paul Lennon, Billy McKeon and Mike Donelin with two goals each for Granite Rail. Bruce Maggio was the game's top playmaker, dishing out three assists. Also assisting were Mike Griffith, Steve O'Neill, Andy Patten, Mike Ogilvie, Mark Lewis and McKeon.

Tim Duggan scored both goals for Purdy's Ice Cream. One was unassisted and the other came off the stick of Ryan Donahue.

Brian Lynch, Steve O'Brien and Rob Mooney netted one goal each to lead Lydon Russell to a 3-2 victory over Paul Harold Club in the week's most exciting affair.

Matt O'Leary, Tim

Gleason and Tony Benigni were the playmakers for Lydon Russell. An outstanding save by goalie Miah Hasson in the game's final seconds preserved the win.

Bryan Cooper and Andy McDonough were the Harold Club goal scorers. Liam Powers made one assist.

Four goals by Steve Segalla was the week's best as he led Skatesmith to a 5-4 overtime win against Campbell's Auto Service.

John Segalla netted the other Skatesmith goal and also set up three of Steve's tallies. George Snowling added a single assist.

Brian O'Hanley paced Campbell's with two goals. Steve Crispo and Bill Jones scored one goal each. Tim Watson, Steve Summering and Taylor Reinhardt set up the scores.

The contest ended in a 3-3 tie, so each coach brought out the big guns for the overtime shootout. Steve Segalla went to bat first for Skatesmith and found a way to beat the goalie. The Flying Irishman scored for Campbell's to knot the game at 4-4. On the next exchange, John Segalla scored to give Skatesmith the dramatic 5-4 win.

In the jamboree's final game, Barry's Deli bested Samoset Pharmacy, 8-3.

Justin Swierk and Mike Delahoyde netted two goals each for the winning squad. Also scoring were Andy Ross, Dan Coughlin, Ryan Tobin and Jeff Hunt. Hunt also dished out two assists for Barry's Deli. Dan Sullivan, Matt Germain, Brendan Linnane, Ryan McFarland, Steve Price, Swierk and Coughlin were the other playmakers.

Freshman Ginty Shines In Debut But North Girls Drop Opener To Plymouth

By DAVID SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High School girls' softball team began its rebuilding process on Monday with a 12-5 Opening Day defeat at the hands of the Plymouth High Blue Eagles.

The Red Raiders tried to rebound Wednesday at Falmouth. North will then face Barnstable on Friday (3:30 p.m. at Mitchell McCoy Field) and travel to Silver Lake next Monday.

Against Plymouth, North received an outstanding performance by freshman catcher Kerry Ginty. Ginty, in her varsity debut, went 2-for-3 with a single, double, a run scored and two RBI in what everyone hopes will be the first of many more exciting performances during her career.

"She's just a great athlete," said head coach Carolyn Parsley. "She has a lot of great skills and that's what I love to see is kids coming up that already have skills that we don't have to work on."

Trailing 1-0 in the first, North tied the score with Ginty, who walked to open the inning, scoring from third on a wild pitch. Ginty traveled around the bases courtesy of groundouts by senior first baseman Mary Jane Bergeron and junior shortstop Kristen Proude.

After Plymouth scored nine runs in the home half of the third and fourth innings to take a 10-1 lead, the Raider offense went to work in the sixth. Junior third baseman Jen Teahan (2-for-4) opened the inning with a single to right, but was caught stealing second.

Junior designated hitter Kerry Monahan (2-for-3) then singled and stole second, junior center fielder Amey Riley reached on an error, scoring Monahan to make the score 10-2. After an Alyssa Cobban groundout, junior Kelly Keegan singled, then junior pitcher Kathy Hughes walked to load the bases. Ginty followed with her second hit of the day, a double knocking in Keegan and Hughes to make the score 10-5 Plymouth after six innings.

Plymouth scored two more runs in the seventh on three consecutive triples to round out the scoring. North tried another comeback in their half of the inning, but stranded two runners on base to end the game.

"The kids were very nervous today," Parsley said. "The nerves got to them because this was their first varsity action for most of them."

North had a total of seven hits and three stolen bases in the game.

RED RAIDERS Kathy Hughes huris one in as first baseman Mary Jane Bergeron stands ready in North's seasoner opener at Mitchell McCoy field. The Raiders bowed, 12-5.

Gott To Lead North Boys' Track

Speedy Jeremy Gott will lead the North Quincy boys' spring track team this season.

Gott advanced to the New England's last spring in the 800-meter race, and this past winter in the 600-yard event. Eighth year coach Peter Chrisom hopes Gott can do the same again this season.

The senior will also compete in the long jump and triple jump and will anchor the 4x400 relay team.

Other important seniors returning this year are long distance man Eric Torvi, and big man Kevin Ross (discus, shot put).

The Red Raiders also have several younger players who should play a key role in the success of the team: juniors Shawn Nee (100, long jump, 4x100 relay), Glenn Peterson (200, 4x100), Chris Geary, 200, 400, both relays), Eric Zimmerman (400, high jump, 4x400), Toby Odom (sprints, hurdles, jumps, relays) and Derrick Epps (hurdles, jumps); and sophomore Steve Cannon (mile, high jump).

"We have need some depth behind this up-front talent," said coach Chrisom. "So the development of our new people will be a key."

There are several promising newcomers on Chrisom's squad. Beefy Brian Rafferty, who will be attending Rutgers on a football scholarship this fall, will test his mettle in the throwing events. Senior football and hockey star Dave Pacino will also try the discus and shot put. Hurdler Brian Whelan is another senior going out for the track team for the first time.

Sophomores Shawn Johnson (sprints), Greg Conway (sprints) and Chris Ritchie (javelin), and freshmen Greg Burke (distance) and Jim Finn (sprints, hurdles, javelin) are all newcomers who show great potential for the Red Raiders.

With only a few senior veterans on the squad, inexperience could be a minus for North Quincy.

"My areas of concern are the javelin, the 300-meter hurdles and our long distance depth," said coach Chrisom.

Chrisom will be assisted by Julie Stockless. It will be her first year as assistant track coach.

The Red Raiders race into action this Thursday, April 7, at Plymouth.

Quincy Girls' Win Opening Track Meet

The Quincy High School girls' track team got off to a great start by defeating host Taunton, 69-67, on Monday.

Led by senior co-captain Michelle Civitarese, dual winner in the 300-meter hurdles, 100 hurdles and high jump, the entire Quincy team performed well.

Senior Jaime Graham captured first place in the javelin and 800-meters, and finished second in the triple jump. Three super sophomores grabbed first place finishes as well: Liz Sawan (mile), Maryann Ashworth (two mile) and sophomores who had outstanding days included Kasey McNaught who finished second in the long jump, 100 and 200; Kerri Connolly, second in the shot put; Amy Nicklas, third in the two mile; and Andrea Quigley, third in the 100. The McNaught and Connolly efforts qualified them for the 1994 state meet.

Suzanne Civitarese (triple jump). Other

Kristen Priscella captured third in the javelin and freshman Angela Hogrell took third in the shot put. Jennifer Light, Dana Batista, Marina Cramer, Margaret Kolson, Teuta Hajrizai and Regina Tran all had strong performances.

Senior co-captain Lauralee Summer led the winning mile relay team. She was joined by Kolson, Quigley and Batista.

Quincy travels to Bridgewater-Raynham Friday, April 15.

Coach John Franceschini and assistant Ray Papile are very encouraged by the teams' dedication to practice and the day to day improvement they have been showing.

Pee Wee Cs State Champs Commended By City Council

Members of the Quincy Pee Wee Cs hockey team was honored by the City Council at its meeting last week.

The team won five straight games in the Massachusetts State Tournament to capture the state championship last month.

Council President Michael Cheney handed out commendations to the coaching staff of John Nee, Peter Carloni and Mike Murray and goalie Matt Gregory. Cheney said Gregory had accidentally been overlooked at a ceremony when Mayor James Sheets and Cheney presented other team players with commendations.

Cheney said the team deserved to be recognized for its accomplishments.

"Quincy Youth Hockey is one of the best programs this city has to offer," he said.

Other members of the team include: Josh Silverman, Mike Hastings, Dave Noonan, Shaun Cheney, Joe Vallatini, Chris Lumaghini, T.J. Wilson, Mike C. Sullivan, Mike Carloni, Mike D. Sullivan, John Bertucci, Sean Fitzgerald, Ryan Murray, Jamie Parisi, Chris Cullen and Nick Pizzifemi.

St. Moritz Devils Complete Season

The St. Moritz Devils Squirt Minor hockey team completed their season with a record of 12 wins, 15 losses (seven by one goal) and six ties in the Metropolitan Boston Hockey League (MBHL). The season was highlighted by a Silver Medal win in Lake Placid, N.Y.

"Our record this year was a good improvement over last season," said head coach Paul Cameron. "The MBHL may be the most competitive youth hockey league in the country, and it takes a few years to develop a good team."

When asked about next year's team, Cameron said: "I'm predicting continued improvement next year and a playoff berth. We're recruiting additional talented players and plan to get more ice time for practice. We lost several one goal games and had an even record with the league champions, the Springfield Junior Olympics. More ice time would have made a difference, and next year should give us the edge needed to build a winning season. This team is clearly on the upswing to a playoff position."

Coach Cameron's ambitions belie his easy-going manner with the kids. "Sometimes I wish Paul would be a little more of a disciplinarian," said assistant coach Jim Byrd. "But it is true that our goals not only include skill development, but also a fun recreational experience. Our kids really have a good time while developing excellent skills."

The team just completed participation in the Minutemen Flames' Invitational Spring

Tournament for AAA hockey. Over 20 teams from New England, New York, Indiana, Washington D.C. and Canada participated in the tournament. The Devils played excellent hockey against the Worcester Crusaders, B.C. Eagles, South Shore Kings and the North Shore Raiders. These tournament games were the last games of the season for the Devils and as one team member said: "I can't wait for the next season to start!"

St. Moritz has players from all over Greater Boston. Skaters this year were from Quincy, South Boston, Milton, Braintree, Sharon, Hanover, Marshfield, Hyde Park and Newton.

Tryouts for next year's team will be at Quincy Youth Arena from April 23-28. Please call 471-0999 or 479-3684 for specific times.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Morrisette Post held a banquet Saturday night celebrating 50 years of Morrisette baseball. The host of that event, coach Dave Perdisio, was effusive in his praise of Morrisette's home park, Adams Field. And with good reason. Ray Cattaneo and George Page do a great job of keeping the field in tip top shape despite its constant use throughout the summer.

One of the most interesting aspects of Adams Field is its design. Built in the 1930s as a project of the Works Progress Administration, it was modeled after the old Braves Field, formerly on the site of BU's Nickerson Field.

If you're looking to attend a game at a big league-sized ballpark, you're better off going to Adams than to Fenway. In terms of feet from home plate - going from left field to right field - Adams runs 356-387-408-387-356. Fenway is only 315-379-390-380-302, just a baby compared to Adams Field. Fenway's center field bulge opens that distance up from 390 to 420, but look at any other area of the field and Adams is the king!

One of the men honored at the Morrisette banquet was team patriarch Nick Malvesti. Malvesti showed a lot of poise as he withstood a barrage of good natured razzing from his cronies when he tried to speak. Known for his ability to make a short story long, Malvesti was the focus of a chorus of groans when he stood up to speak, stack of note cards in hand, and said "let me start with the early days..."

Some of his closest friends kept up the attack throughout his speech; snoring sounds could be heard from time to time.

But the final stab came as fellow honoree Ray Cattaneo was thanking people for attending. Cattaneo was calling out the name of Randolph Legion coach John Marini. As Cattaneo continued to call out his name (he was unaware, at this point, that Marini had to leave early) someone among the crowd of 200 yelled out "Shh! He fell asleep during Nicky's speech!"

By the way, a round-up of the banquet will appear in next week's issue of the Sun.

The Koch Club of Quincy Youth Baseball Program will open its 46th season on Monday, May 2. Registration will be held April 20, 25 and 27 at 6 p.m., at Cavanaugh Field in North Quincy.

Boys and girls ages 5-10 are eligible to join. Every boy and girl will play, there are no tryouts and games are informal.

Registration fee is $12. The fee covers the cost of equipment and hats and T-shirts for all participants. All games are played on Mondays and Wednesdays. The season ends June 29.

The success of the program is dependent on volunteers. If you can help or have a question, call 472-2089.

The City of Quincy and the Beechwood Community Life Center will be hosting the 12th Annual Senior Olympic Games from May 9-14.

The Senior Olympics are for folks 55-years-young or over. Registration deadline is May 3. For a brochure or for further information call 471-5712, 376-1242 or 376-1386.

Events at the Senior Olympics are golf, bowling, bocce, billiards, track & field, softball, volleyball, walking and swimming.

If you're looking to take your kids somewhere to watch a baseball game this summer, here are the Top 10 reasons why Adams Field is a better place to watch a game than Fenway Park:

10. No need to experience the camaraderie one feels as they are jammed into one of the overstuffed green sardine cans the MBTA calls a trolley.

9. You don't have to pay $12 for the privilege of wedging your car into a dark, ominous lot in which it will soon get buried by the cars of 20 strangers who just happen to stay for all 16 innings when you have to work the next morning.

8. No need to lose a week's pay in order to take your two kids to a ballpark that reminds you of the "good old days."

7. No sweaty drunks in the bleachers teaching your kids about good sportsmanship.

6. It doesn't have the same pleasant aroma as the well maintained Fenway bathrooms.

5. No obstructed views!

4. Your kids won't be shunned by big leaguers who don't make enough money to sign autographs.

3. At Adams Field you won't hear the same creative uses of the English language every time the ump makes a questionable call.

2. The food from the Frosty Clown ice cream truck is better than soggy hot dogs and warm beer.

1. Adams field is the only one with big league dimensions!

viewing building departments across the country in such areas as competency and proper staff levels, he said.

Mulvey said BOCA International can penalize departments that fail its inspections by making them pay higher insurance premiums, which will impact taxpayer dollars. He added that while the Quincy Building Department is widely respected in the area and would have no problem passing the competency requirement—since all of its inspectors are certified by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts—it could be penalized for being understaffed.

Despite the department's problems, however, Mulvey stressed that he understands the city, like the rest of the state and the country, has undergone tight financial times in the past few years. He noted that all city departments have been ordered to submit level-funded budgets and he does not plan to disobey that order. His request for additional personnel will go directly to the mayor as a separate item, probably sometime next week, he said.

The economy is also a primary reason why his department is in such dire straits today, Mulvey noted. When he first became the city's building inspector in 1987, he was budgeted for six public safety inspectors, as opposed to one today, he said.

Mulvey said one way to fund the four new positions would be to "take a look at the fees that are charged" by the building department. As an example, Mulvey noted that a water heater permit from the department currently only costs $4.

"It should be more than that," said Mulvey. "We at least have to make the service pay for itself."

In addition to the request for the four new staff people, Mulvey said he is also considering the possibility of asking Sheets to grant him the title of zoning administrator. Mulvey said he would use the position primarily to save people who are seeking special permits variances from the Zoning Board of Appeals for one and two-family houses the trouble of going through the entire zoning board process. Currently the process takes three to four months, Mulvey said, and he hopes to cut about 90 days off that time.

"It's just an idea," he said.

Both Sheets and the City Council would have to approve any additions to the building department or changes in Mulvey's title. The Zoning Board of Appeals would have the final say on exactly how much authority he would be allowed as zoning administrator, Mulvey said.

At press time, Sheets could not be reached for comment.

Board Gives Thrift Center Go Ahead For NQ Flea Market Site

By LISA CONNELL

The Family Thrift Store, located at 2 Hancock St., and known formerly as the Neponset Flea Market, won approval by the city Licensing Board Tuesday for a second-hand and common-victualer license.

Both licenses were approved unanimously by the Board following a two week continuance. Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers requested the continuance to meet with neighborhood constituents and city Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon.

Ayers requested, as a condition of the licenses, that Gillon approve the final traffic plan and that the property be fully maintained. Property maintenance will include adequate exterior parking signage and striping in the parking lot.

Building Inspector and License Board Vice-Chair Matthias Mulvey requested that Sullivan submit a floor plan of the aisles to be sure clear exits are present.

Quincy attorney Dennis Harrington appeared with Sullivan before the Board.

Sullivan expects to officially open mid-April.

He plans to retain the flavor of the flea market while providing a clean, comfortable, well-lit building for families to shop in. His goal is to strike a comfortable mesh between the flea market and the store.

The store will operate from Tuesday through Sunday and the Flea Market will maintain its current Saturday and Sunday schedule.

The store will operate like a Goodwill Thrift Store or Morgan Memorial Shop.

A unique feature of the Family Thrift Store is that profits from the store are returned to a national Vietnam veteran clearinghouse, "Vietnam Veterans of America" in Washington, D.C.

Vietnam veterans solicit donations of clothing and household goods in a large part of Boston. They pick up the items and I have a contract to bid on what they have collected, Sullivan said.

Modeled after 50 similar stores nationwide, the store will sell clothing and household items donated by private citizens and gathered and sorted by Vietnam veterans. The veterans' group derives nearly 40% of their operating budget from store profits, according to Sullivan.

Structural changes and renovations to the property included construction of a required firewall. Total renovation expenses may reach $100,000 according to Sullivan.

"A major part of the rehabilitation of the building involves making the building itself operate efficiently to keep customers' comfortable,"

The store will be privately owned, and as such, tax paying.

He expects to employ at least 25 local residents.

A veteran of the Korean War, Sullivan became interested in helping out veteran's organizations when he did some pro bono legal work for Vietnam veterans.

On this Patriot's Day we pause to honor our armed forces... present and past... whose dedication and perseverance endure to ensure our precious freedom.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Mark Twain once confessed that he could live for three weeks on a compliment, and Twain was not an exceptionally vain man. He was just admitting openly what most of us feel privately.

One might say there is good flattery and bad flattery. Bad flattery is the kind which the flatterer engages in because it will "pay" him. He might get something out of it. No person of sense or sensibility can help but see through it and despise it.

The other sort of flattery - the good flattery - is not extended because it gives profit to the donor but because it gives pleasure to the recipient. And most of us need this sort of life from time to time.

When most of us pay a compliment, we generally pay it to the person's strongest, and most obvious, point. But to do the greatest good a compliment should be directed to the person's weakest point - or what he thinks is his weakest point.

Twain could not be elated because somebody came up and told him what a fine writer he was; the whole world accepted that fact. But he was radiant if someone complimented him on an invention he had helped develop...

Oscar Wilde once said - "An acquaintance that begins with a compliment is sure to develop into a real friendship."

Plans Continue For Gun Buyback Program

The city is continuing to formulate plans for a gun buyback program that will pay $50 in cash or $75 worth of food for each weapon that is turned in to the Quincy Police Department.

About $10,000 has been pledged by area businesses to help start the program.

Mayor James Sheets and Police Chief Francis Mullen met two weeks ago with representatives of Hibernia Savings Bank and Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance to start planning the program. Officials hope to have it running by June.

Those who turn in a gun at the Quincy Police Station will be able to choose from either a $50 voucher redeemable for cash at the Hibernia bank or a $75 voucher for food from Shaw's Supermarket. The Quincy program is modeled after a 90-day program Norfolk-Bristol started last week in Brockton.

Although officials said they believe most of the guns will come from the South Shore area, residents of any community in the state will be welcome. No one will be prosecuted for having an unlicensed gun and all weapons will be destroyed.

Mullen said Quincy tried a voluntary gun return program with no reward a few years ago offered, but there were no takers. Sheets said if response to the new money is poor, the money could be put toward attracting knives or other weapons.

Mark Osborne, president of Hibernia Savings Bank, took the idea to Sheets in February after learning of the success of Buyback Boston, which netted more than 1,300 weapons last summer alone.

Sheets said Hibernia pledged $5,000 to the Quincy program. Ambulance Systems of America, the parent company of Norfolk-Bristol, offered $2,500, and Shaw's told the ambulance company it also will contribute $2,500, according to the mayor.

Organizers said they do not expect the program to have much of an impact on curbing violent crime, but they do hope it will prevent accidents in the home and decrease the chances of people being killed in acts of domestic violence.

DEBRIS RESTS ON the sidewalk in front of Wollaston Chambers on Newport Avenue after 12 tons of concrete fell from the building. No one was hurt in the incident.

Building Dept. Working To Prevent Another Falling Concrete Accident

The city's building department is working with the owners of a Wollaston apartment building that toppled 12 tons of concrete onto the sidewalk last week to ensure such an accident won't happen again.

A concrete cornice fell off the four-story, 24-unit Wollaston Chambers on Newport Avenue last week. Public safety officials said age and an icy winter combined to push the concrete loose from the building.

No one was hurt in the incident.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said the owners of the building, Richard and Lucinda Morrissey of Wollaston—who also own Dee Dee's Lounge, located near the building—have been "extremely cooperative" in working with him in taking the right steps to prevent another accident.

"It (the building) needs a lot of masonry work," said Mulvey. "As soon as the owners get their paperwork in, I'll issue them a building permit and they can get the repair work done."

Mulvey said building department and other public safety officials cleared the sidewalks of debris, removed loose stones from parapets on the building, and set up staging to prevent anyone from being hurt before the owners hire someone to begin repair work at the site. He stressed that although city officials pitched in to help clean up the situation, the future work done there is solely the responsible of the owners.

"But I'm not worried,"

No Hiring Because Of Fiscal Picture Freeze Seen On New City Jobs

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's fiscal situation will make it virtually impossible to add personnel to city departments in the coming fiscal year, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said Tuesday that as he continues to work on the municipal budget for FY95, which begins July 1, it is apparent that Quincy is still not in the financial position to add employees to the city payroll.

"It's not about what we want to do, but what we have the money to do," said Sheets, adding that the budget will be completed in the next couple of weeks. Sheets noted that one exception may be Quincy's parks department. There might be some additions there because he feels that it is absolutely necessary to maintain the city's parks, he said.

Otherwise, no new hires are planned, the mayor said. He noted that he has received requests from a number of departments, including the building department, for more personnel. However, he said the city will not be able to fund any of those positions.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey told The Quincy Sun last week that he would like as many as four new staff people added to his department, which currently has 11 employees. He added that he would understand if the city did not have the finances to fund the positions and said he would seek other ways of doing so, including the possibility of increasing fees charged by the building department.

Sheets said if possible, he would like to fund any vacancies on the city's police and fire departments, but stressed that he does not intend to add new personnel to those departments either.

Last year, Sheets submitted an FY94 budget of $128,689,981 to the City Council. The council cut $329,066 from the proposed budget, making the final FY94 budget $128,360,915.

City Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger said since the beginning of FY94, the city has hired 80 people, including 17 firefighters, nine heavy equipment operators, seven police officers, six traffic supervisors and four highway maintenance workers.

"The others would be only one or two (employees) in each case," she said.

Yaeger stressed, however, that the majority of those 80 employees were hired to fill vacant positions, rather than as additions to city departments. She added that the personnel department has no record of hires at Quincy Hospital, Quincy College and the city's public schools since those are not included as regular city departments.

Hospital Begins Search For New Director

Officials at Quincy Hospital have begun the search for a new director.

Ellen Zane, the hospital's current director, announced last week that she will leave the hospital on May 6 to join a new Boston health care network.

Daniel Dunn, chairman of the hospital's board of directors, said Tuesday he would like to hire a replacement within the new 30 to 45 days but said that the process may take longer than that.

"It's a fairly grueling interview process," he said. "Over 100 people expressed interest in the position the last time it was available, and we only interviewed six."

"We want to find someone that we're comfortable with, someone with consistent depth across the board. We'd like to find a person with the same strong interpersonal skills that Ellen has."

Agreed board member Trudy Buckley, "We want to find someone as soon as possible, but we also want to find someone who will fit in nicely."

Dunn said "seven or eight people" outside of the hospital have already expressed interest in the position, adding that it will be another "week or week-and-a-half" before a "solid" list of candidates is completed.

He noted that insiders at the hospital have shied away from applying for the position because they are happy with their current jobs. However, he said that does not necessarily mean an outsider will be hired.

"We haven't eliminated anyone yet," he said. "Ellen had initially expressed reluctance at taking the position, and she was an insider."

Zane first came to Quincy Hospital in 1987 and became director in 1990.

Dunn said he did not know the starting salary for the director's position, but

Vacates Without Notice

Kelly's Disappears From The Square

By LISA CONNELL

By virtue of his own actions, Peter Kelly, owner of Kelly's In The Square, 19 Cottage Ave., has put himself out of business.

"He vacated the premises; we didn't throw him out," said Licensing Board Chairman and City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Sometime before last weekend, Kelly, without informing his landlord, K & O Enterprises, public utility representatives or anyone from the city Licensing Board, unofficially vacated his premises, Shea said.

Based on a tip passed along anonymously to Shea, Shea and a Quincy police officer went down to the restaurant and lounge to discover that all doors leading to the building, including the kitchen, were unlocked. The electricity and gas heating units had been left on as well, Shea said.

A police summons was issued for Alice Buckley, whose name appeared on a contact card of personnel to notify in case of emergency. The building keys were obtained from Buckley and handed over to Shea.

Shea and Lt. Casey of the police department physically removed Kelly's liquor license from the wall under the city's secession of business clause.

Because Kelly vacated the premises without proper notification, the board is obligated to remove his license, Shea said.

The board is legally required to give Kelly seven days notice that they are in the process of revoking his license due to his sudden departure. Shea said that the board is in

First Interment Of A Civil War Veteran In Quincy In 56 Years

Proper, Public Burial Planned For Unknown Civil War Soldier

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The circumstances surrounding the identity and death of a recently discovered unknown Civil War soldier may forever be a mystery but his burial will be one of the most public interments in Quincy history.

Officials at the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum are planning a proper, 1860s-style burial for the soldier who was recently discovered at the Massachusetts Military Archives in Natick. The burial will be part of a massive dawn-to-dusk encampment planned for Faxon Field on Saturday, May 28, the start of the Memorial Day weekend.

"It's a dedication of a grave and that's what Memorial Day is all about," said William MacMullen, executive director of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

The encampment and burial could attract 500 or more Civil War reenactors, city officials and private citizens. Dozens of Civil War groups as far away as Virginia have called museum officials to express interest in participating in the event, said Don Timmins, operations coordinator for the museum.

The burial and encampment will feature officials dressed in authentic garb of the Civil War period as well as food and music of the mid-19th century era.

The interment in the Civil War section of Mount Wollaston Cemetery will mark the first burial of a veteran from that war in Quincy in 56 years, said Hank Bradley, the city's veterans services agent.

According to records in the Veterans Services Department, the last Civil War veteran buried at Mount Wollaston Cemetery was Frederick H. Bishop who was 89 years old when he was laid to rest March 3, 1938. Bishop, enlisted into the militia six weeks shy of his 16th birthday on Feb. 11, 1864, served with the 14th Infantry Band. He was discharged three years later.

Bishop Field in North Quincy was named in honor of Quincy's last surviving Civil War veteran, who lived on Summit Ave., in Wollaston.

The partial skeletal remains of the Civil War soldier were found several weeks ago in a cardboard box in a warehouse of old state military archives by workers at the Massachusetts Military Research Center in Natick., according to William MacMullen, executive director of the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy.

The box was part of a shipment of records that were moved to the museum.

MacMullen said the unmarked box was sent to Natick decades ago as part of a shipment from the Grand Army of the Republic Hall in Gloucester. The GAR, the official Union Army veterans' organization, was disbanded in 1956

UNKNOWN CIVIL WAR soldier will be buried with Quincy's Union dead in the section that surrounds the Civil War monument in Mount Wollaston Cemetery Saturday, May 28. The body will be escorted to the cemetery by Civil War re-enactors as part of an all-day Civil War encampment planned by officials at the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

after the last Civil War veteran died.

Since the discovery of the unknown Civil War veteran, archivists and Quincy officials have been trying to solve the mystery surrounding the soldier's identity and circumstances

Replacing Zane Won't Be Easy

Quincy Hospital officials know that it's not going to be easy to replace Ellen Zane.

The 41-year-old Hingham resident, who has served as director of the hospital since 1990, helped turn a facility that suffered a $3.2 million deficit in FY89 to one that is currently looking at a $2.2 million profit.

Zane announced last week that she will leave Quincy Hospital May 6 to join a new Boston health care network being formed as part of the merger between Brigham and Women's and Massachusetts General Hospitals. The company will develop and manage a health care network that includes the two Boston hospitals, an unspecified number of community hospitals and physician group practices.

In addition, she will be a vice president of Partners Healthcare System, the parent company of the network.

Mayor James Sheets expressed confidence that the hospital will remain strong, but called Zane's departure "a tremendous loss."

"I congratulate Massachusetts General and Brigham and Women's for recruiting absolutely the best," he said.

Quincy Hospital is managed by Quorum Health Resources, a private firm located in Waltham. Zane came to the hospital in 1987 and began heading the five-member Quorum management team three years later.

Hospital officials hope to have a replacement for Zane by June, although the search may take longer. Hospital Chief Operating Officer Neil Stroman will be in charge in the interim, sources said.

Members of the hospital's board of managers said whomever they hire to replace Zane will have a high standard to live up to. Daniel Dunn, the board chairman, said Zane's communications skills and ability to adapt to change in the medical industry are among her many fine qualities.

"She's a very articulate person who was able to relate at all levels with a personal touch," said Dunn. "She'd always go that extra step in order to achieve a goal. Our expectations (in hiring Zane) have been more than met, and she certainly will be a tough act to follow."

Dunn said Zane did a particularly good job in recruiting employees, working with union representatives, and boosting staff morale. He also praised Zane and Quincy Hospital Chief Financial Officer Asber Kramer for refinancing a bond issue last year that helped move up the timetable for freeing the city of its obligation to pay $2.2 million a year in hospital pension expenses.

"The hospital seemed to get stronger and stronger with each passing month (Zane was in charge)," said Dunn. "We're really going to miss her."

Board member Trudy Buckley said Zane's presence helped bring about great change both in the hospital and the morale of its staff.

"She has been a delight to work with," said Buckley, chairman of the board of managers from 1988-90. "She has been a favorite of everyone she has come into contact with. She brought the hospital from the red to the black almost immediately."

"Ellen had a wonderful rapport with all of the hospital's employees. After she came to the hospital,

Leave Your Social Security Card At Home

By CAROL BOYLE
Leave home without it!
You may need to carry your driver's license and credit card with you, but you can leave your Social Security card at home except when you'll need it for a specific reason, such as applying for a job or opening a bank account.
It might be advisable to keep the card where you put your birth certificate, insurance policies and other important documents. This precaution could prevent your card from being lost or stolen. And it is important to protect both your card and your number.
We use the number to record your earnings and, because your future benefits are based on those earnings, you should make sure your record is accurate. You can check your record by calling 1-800-772-1213 and asking for a Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement.

If your card is lost or stolen, you can get a replacement by calling or visiting a Social Security office. You'll need to file an application and submit evidence of your identity. You also may need to prove your U.S. citizenship or lawful alien status.

Also, if your card is lost or stolen, someone else may use your number—and that could cause you problems in the future. If you have evidence that someone else is using your Social Security number, contact us right away.

NEW HOPE FOR EPILEPSY

When a new drug or treatment is proven to be effective against an old health villain, there is certainly reason to cheer. Such is the case in the battle against epilepsy, a brain disorder marked by seizures. Some 2.5 million Americans have epilepsy, and only about half of them have previously found relief through medications. A new drug approved by the Food and Drug Administration, called felbamate, may help improve those statistics. Not only has felbamate been shown effective in stopping seizures in adult patients, it is giving hope to families of children suffering from a severe form of epilepsy known as Lennox-Gastaut syndrome, in which seizures sometimes occur as often as 200 times an hour.

P.S. Felbamate is the first epilepsy drug approved by the FDA in the past 15 years.

The FDA approval of felbamate is bound to be cheering news for sufferers of epilepsy and their families. For more information on this, or on any aspect of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. An Early Night For Joe?

Looks like City Clerk Joseph Shea should get home early election night.

The state primary Sept. 20 is shaping up as a quiet night locally.

Few challengers have stepped forward thus far to take on incumbents.

And with the filing deadline for nomination papers May 3—just 12 days away—there is no hint of any surprise candidates waiting in the wings to jump out at the last minute.

"It's pretty quiet," says Shea. "Haven't seen it like this for a while."

On the local front, Senator Michael Morrissey, and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin, all Democrats, are up for re-election.

No Democrats—so far—are challenging them and aren't expected to.

Only two Republican challengers have taken out nomination papers.

One of them, Charles Debrezeni of Adams St. has two sets of papers in circulation: one for state senator and the other for state representative.

He can't run for both. If he files the senate papers he will be after Morrissey's seat. If he files for state representative, it would be for the Second Norfolk District seat held by Tobin.

The other Republican, Steve Williams of Ryden St., Houghton Neck, has papers out for state representative in Tobin's district. He's 24 and will be graduating from U/Mass. Boston in June.

Other than that, there isn't too much excitement locally although there are other Quincy candidates.

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt of Quincy is up for re-election.

Denis Tardo, a Republican, is a candidate for Secretary of State.

Matt Mulvey who is a Weymouth resident, but Quincy's Building Inspector, is running for Norfolk County Commissioner. Mulvey, a Democrat, seeks the seat now held by Republican Bruce Olson of Stoughton.

20 Atlantic Students' Photographs On Display At Wang Center

Twenty Atlantic Middle School sixth graders will have their photographs on display as part of the "Young Art Arts" Program at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts.

The exhibits will take place at Atlantic Middle School Tuesday, April 26, from 7 to 9 p.m. and also at the Wang Center Grand Lobby for the month of May.

The theme of the project was "Family Life: Ties That Bind". The students were given cameras to take pictures depicting everyday life in America. Counterparts in Amsterdam were given the same task. As pictures were developed, students discussed each one in terms of technique, composition and theme.

On May 26, beginning at 10 a.m., the Wang Center will hold an opening May ceremony and telecommunications conference with Amsterdam students. Awards will then be given to the students by Vicki Barrett, Young Art Arts Director, and Josiah A. Spaulding Jr., president and general manager of Wang.

Wang Center photographer Roger Farrington, Ellen Lebovitz and Madeline Clarke, teacher at Atlantic, worked with the students throughout the project.

Books will be published displaying the Boston-Amsterdam photographs along with the students' stories about the pictures.

Long-time Quincy resident Nicholas Barbadoro, now living in Braintree, is seeking re-election as Clerk of Courts.

Unless the few candidates generate some voter interest, with issues, Shea could be home and in his slippers shortly after 9 p.m. Sept. 20.

GREAT NEWS: City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro is making rapid progress to full recovery from the stroke he suffered March 1.

TED

Jeanne Reardon, City Council Clerk of Committees, visited him over the weekend at Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital, and reports he is up and walking and is scheduled to be released April 28.

While hospitalized, he has been keeping tabs on his Ward 2 and calling the council office two or three times a week.

His grandchildren made a large calendar for him, which he has hanging on his room door and crosses out each day on his way to April 28.

He looks well," says Jeanne. "He's looking forward to getting home and back to work."

Ted, they can't keep a good Quincy Point boy down.

BRYANT CARTER, SR., past commander of the Wollaston Legion Post, is reported "a little improved" by his son, Bryant, Jr. after suffering a stroke a little over a week ago.

Carter is at Quincy Hospital (Room 667) and may be transferred to a rehabilitation hospital in a few days.

You might want to drop him a card. CARTER
Your Senior Strollers are rooting for you, Bryant.

QUINCY RUNNER Bob Seamans had to pass up this year's Boston Marathon because of a groin pull, but was out there with his wife, June, in Wellesley as a spectator.

Seamans, who does a nice PR job for South Boston Savings, has run in more than 100 marathons—25 of them, the Boston.

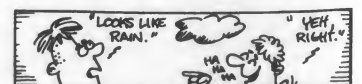

He hopes to be back in action for the Ocean State Marathon in Rhode Island and the Green State Marathon in Connecticut later this year. He holds a record for finishing 15 out of 16 Ocean State Marathons.

MIKE BELLOTTI will host a campaign re-election kickoff party Friday, April 29 from 7-10 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quarry St. Bellotti is seeking his second term as state representative from Quincy's First Norfolk District.

Tickets for the party are $10 and can be obtained by calling 479-0111. They'll also be available at the door.

A Leper Colony Mentality For The Homeless?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently, the City of Boston gave an old Long Island Hospital building to the Pine Street Inn, a private, not-for-profit outfit that runs several homeless shelters in Boston, including their main site, a 300-bed shelter off Harrison Ave. in Boston's South End.

Pine Street Inn just lost the Rapids Service Press Building on the Broadway Bridge in Southie which is slated to be demolished in May for construction of the Third Harbor Tunnel. Pine Street Inn began busing approximately 250 homeless folks a day March 30 to the new Long Island site.

So let's see now. The City of Boston has operated a 300-bed Long Island Shelter for nearly 10 years. Pine Street Inn now operates a 250-bed shelter. Also, there is the Bay View Inn with between 35 and 50 shelter beds and Andrew Detox, both operated by the Vinfen Corporation of Allston. What are we creating out there, a leper colony mentality for the homeless? Out of sight and out of mind? Are any of us really helping the homeless by lumping them altogether on Long Island? Isolating them from everyone else? They call the shelter beds temporary but I see nothing temporary with the homeless population growing constantly.

America is treating the homeless as a race of sub-humans, and aren't we isolating the problem? Homeless people are being treated as if they had a contagious disease, social leprosy if you like. We create shelter beds and little more. It has become a growth industry. Beds seem to constantly increase rather than decrease. The needs of the homeless get worse, not better. Boston's Emergency Shelter Commission says the new Pine Street shelter on Long Island should be there for no more than two or three years but I don't believe that. Shelters has become the strategy of dealing with chronic homelessness and sheltered are really only just the visible symptoms of a nation-wide issue that needs action and not political rhetoric.

Republicans like to downplay the actual numbers of homeless and would have us believe that homelessness is the result of drugs, alcohol or mental illness. As a career employee of the State Department of Mental Health, I don't deny that many of the homeless fit into those categories but there are also too many others—young families, elderly, men and women—who hope for the day when they will have real housing again. Many find themselves among the ranks of the dispossessed simply through poverty or budget cuts. According to Henry Cisneros, secretary of housing and urban development, "Homelessness has become a structural problem in America; chronic, continuous, large scale (and) complex."

Cities like Boston and Quincy are trying to help with shelters for the homeless but the answer isn't creating more and more shelters, the answer is finding solutions to the lack of affordable housing, the lack of education, the lack of jobs and job training and the lack of responsibility on the part of government for refusing to recognize that reforms such as de-institutionalization of our mental health system certainly hurt many folks who went from state hospitals to state, city or private shelters. One large step for government reformers, one small step for afflicted folks needing more than the freedom of the streets.

I long for the day when the Long Island Shelter, the Pine Street Inn and the Bay View Inn on Long Island close up shop due to a lack of need. That day could come when we work as hard in finding solutions for homelessness as we do in finding shelter beds.

'Pressure' Charged As Tax Talks Are Cancelled

Two scheduled speakers cancelled talks on tax abatement procedures before the Quincy Taxpayers Association and Executive Secretary William M. Edmonston charged that Mayor Thomas S. Burgin and city assessors were behind the move.

First to cancel his appearance at the Central Junior High School meeting was John D. Wright of Newton, a member of the State Tax appellate Board, who said it would be "improper and injudicious" for him to speak on such a subject.

Edmonston declined to reveal the name of Wright's replacement for fear that "pressure against his appearance might be exercised by Mayor Burgin and the assessors who are apparently opposed to the meeting."

The mystery speaker turned out to be Atty. Thomas Joyce of Boston, a member of the legal department of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations and its lobbyist on Beacon Hill who also backed out at the last moment.

Finally, the talk was delivered by Atty. Faneuil Adams of Boston, who practices before the Tax Appellate Board, who explained to small homeowners in Quincy how they could use the Board to reduce high assessments on their property.

LIQUOR BAN BEATEN

The State Senate, by a tie vote of 18-18, killed a bill that would have permitted Quincy voters to ban the sale of liquor on Wollaston Boulevard and the vote touched off a hot dispute between two Quincy legislators.

Sen. John D. Mackay charged that Rep. Charles W. Hedges, who filed a bill at the behest of the Wollaston Improvement Association and City Councillor Avery Gilkenson, has secretly lobbied behind the scenes for its defeat.

"What are we coming to if we can't do business in God's sunlight," said Mackay.

"I do not only deny the senator's charges," said Hedges, "but I will go further and brand them as false."

CITED FOR HEROISM

Mayor Burgin said he plans to write to the Carnegie Foundation with a recommendation that a medal for heroism be given to Jean Allen, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Allen of Adams Shore, for her rescue of three boys who were drifting out to sea in a row boat.

Jean, a student at Central Junior High School, swam fully clothed to the boat, rescued one of the boys who had fallen overboard, then went back and brought the others to shore in the boat.

QUINCY-ISMS

The Quincy tax rate for 1938 was set at $32.80, down 60 cents from the previous year, and the total value of real estate and personal property in the city was set at $122.4 million. William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston announced that the Rev. Aloysius R. Finn of Somerville would be pastor of a new Roman Catholic parish in Quincy covering Merrymount, Adams Shore and part of Houghs Neck. Mrs. Norman L. Marden was nominated for president of the Wollaston Garden Club. Two-year-old rye whiskey was selling for $1.25 a quart at the Beverage Supply Co., 1625 Hancock St. State Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever spoke at the Quincy Knights of Columbus Council breakfast. School Committeeman L. Paul Marini said he planned to continue to fight against employment of married teachers in the Quincy school system "if they have husbands who are able to support them."

The new wallpaper department opened at the Lincoln Stores, 1431 Hancock St. E. J. McEwan, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke on "What Helps Business Helps You" at a banquet of the Granite City Ice Co. at the Neighborhood Club. Extra large oranges were two dozen for 45 cents at the Tampa Fruit Co., 67 Hancock St., near the Neponset Bridge. George McKenna of Quincy was elected commander of the 104th Infantry Veterans Association at its 19th annual reunion in Springfield. Quincy Police Lt. William Ferrazzi rushed to the aid of Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing when he was attacked by a man in his private office in the Dedham courthouse.

Raspberry Mousse

Picture a cozy fire in the living room to warm our hearts and a New England boiled dinner bubbling away in the kitchen.

This was the setting for an evening at the home of our friends Barb and Chap. Barbara had called earlier to seek if my husband and I wanted to "escape" for a night at their home in Hanson while we had the chance.

When it comes to dessert, I usually take a bite or two and that's about it. But this night Barbara made a light raspberry mousse and I finished the whole thing!

Raspberry Mousse

- 2 (10 ounce) packages of frozen red raspberries (in syrup)
- 2 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 (14 ounce) can condensed milk (not evaporated milk)
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice from concentrate

2 cups (1 pint) whipping cream, stiffly whipped (Barbara used cool whip from the freezer and it was just as good)

In a saucepan, combine 1 package of the undrained raspberries and cornstarch. Cook and stir until thickened and clear. Chill thoroughly. This is the raspberry sauce.

In blender, combine the remaining drained raspberries, the condensed milk, the lemon, and blend until smooth.

Place in a large bowl. Fold in the cream. This is the mousse part. Spoon half the mousse mixture into dessert dishes, top with two equal amounts of raspberry sauce then the remaining mixture. Chill thoroughly and garnish as desired. It was an elegant as well as a light dessert.

(Note: Barbara suggests buying the raspberries in the syrup as the ones without require too much sugar.)

Central Middle School Guidance Counselor Mary Catherine Iannoni A Quincy Educational Institution

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. You've been head guidance counselor at Central for 33 years. What has kept you at one school for so long?

A. I think perhaps the people, primarily. I love the kids that the Quincy people have sent to this school, and my colleagues, bar none, have been simply wonderful to me. Why would I pass up an opportunity to work in such a kind, caring setting?

And I like what I do. I think that I am in a position as head counselor to do a lot of things for people, particularly kids, that the teacher in the classroom cannot. And for that reason, I feel it's a unique opportunity for me to be of service to children.

Q. What do you see as being the primary role of educators, and of counselors in particular?

A. Well, I think first of all I'd like to see each youngster as a full-blown person who has some interests, who has some abilities, and to help him make some good decisions that would impact on his future. Now, to be sure, a sixth grader isn't going to be thinking of terms of "well, I'm going to be a Harvard graduate," but instead to see to it that this youngster is giving at least a best shot of whatever his tasks are here as a student.

I'd like to think that when the youngster left here at the end of the eighth grade, he was a better person than he was when he crossed the threshold the September that he was a sixth grader.

Q. What kinds of problems do the students come to you with?

A. I think some of the parents would be alarmed if they knew some of the things that kids will tell you about home situations. At this point in my life, I can't be surprised about things. I may feel very sad about situations the school can't deal with. Maybe I'm helpful in helping the youngster help himself or herself to deal with the problem or the issue.

Primarily, of course, academic problems are the ones that we handle most of the time. What other kinds? Personal problems, health problems; some of the problems have become much more acute in recent years. As a matter of fact, we've had problems this year that we've never had before. And I would say that's because there's probably more single-parent families with a lot more problems of their own. They have to surface at the school.

Q. What's your opinion of some of the newer programs that are coming out today, such as AIDS education?

A. I think it's absolutely necessary. Our kids have to be familiar with what promiscuity would eventually become for them. I think that it's a health issue that has to be addressed. Now, as far as our taking on the responsibility of issuing condoms, I don't think that's in our book. It's got to be related to the health department. It has to come out of the School Committee, and I don't think that at this age—we'd be telling kids, in essence, it's A-OK, as long as you have one of these (condoms) it's all right to be as promiscuous as you wish.

Q. Central celebrated its 100th anniversary last week. That must have taken a lot of work and preparation.

A. Well, it was a great celebration as far as many of the youngsters were concerned, because their teachers entered into the spirit of, "let's celebrate, we have a task to perform, we're going to showcase certain rooms." And the teams rose to the occasion, and it became more fun than work in some instances.

As chairperson of the celebration, I would have to tell

FULL NAME: Mary Catherine Iannoni
AGE: "39 and holding"
ADDRESS: lifelong resident of Brockton
OCCUPATION: head guidance counselor at Central Middle (formerly Junior High) School since 1961. From 1951-54, she taught English full-time at the school; from 1954-57, she was a part-time guidance counselor and full-time English teacher at Central; she then worked briefly at Broad Meadows Junior High (now Middle) School as a full-time guidance counselor from 1957-61 before returning to Central EDUCATION: graduate of St. Patrick's Classical High School in Brockton, received B.S. and M.S. degrees in education from Bridgewater State College, did subsequent graduate work at Boston University and Harvard University you that there were so many different portions of the program to pull through. It was great to have a lot of the teachers on a Steering Committee, people who could remember staff that should have been invited. There's no way we could have invited everyone through the mail, so we depended a great deal on Continental Cablevision, The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger and WJDA. And as far as the kids and the teachers who participated in getting ready for that one big night, it's been a wonderful experience.

Q. How many people helped prepare for the event?
A. I'd say over half of the entire school population. At least 250 people were involved.

Q. That must have been hard to organize.

A. No, you have some nice people who know how to work, and where to put their best effort. And when some have such creativity, along with the children, you've got it made.

Q. Tell me about your role in the "Step Into Society Week" program here at the school.

A. "Step Into Society" began about 28 years ago when a group of students came to me and complained that they never got to go on field trips. Now, as the head counselor, it's not within my jurisdiction to order a teacher to take the kids out on a field trip. So I decided that maybe we ought to reverse it, and have people that the students would normally visit to come here and talk.

So the possibility arose of inviting the people in instead of either demonstrate or exhibit, or just plain share their career choices with the youngsters. So the youngsters would find out a great deal more than they would from just too many people. So I sold (the idea) to Mr. (Vincent) Moscardelli (principal from 1971 to 1982) that we bring one grade. And it seemed to us, after a little experience, that, number one, seventh graders are the best campers, and, number two, Camp Wing was better for us than our first choice, mainly because of proximity.

Q. In 1981, you were inducted into the Academy of Distinguished Educators at the University of Denver. I'm told only two other people in city history have achieved that distinction.

A. Well, I probably am the proudest of that because all of the people who were inducted that year had tremendous titles. And here I was, just a lowly head counselor being inducted.

The first year that I went and was inducted, it was fantastic. There were three sessions every day, and you were working with top educators in the country. And some of it was fascinating. I went back the second year as a catalyst. I'm asked to go back every year, but I really can't see the actual good for me. If I were younger, I'd probably, say yes.

Q. Who are the other two from Quincy who have been inducted?

A. Dr. Richard Crystal, who was an assistant superintendent of schools here, and William Phinney, also an assistant superintendent.

Q. Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth described you as an "institution" at Central and said that on the day you retire, he wouldn't want to be standing inside the building. How do you respond to that?

A. (Laughs). I'd say he's vastly overrating my presence in the building, and my departure really and truly will be very quiet (laughs). I don't think anything, except perhaps all the trash that has to be accumulated and brought out to the dumpster before I leave. That'll be the only big thing when I leave.

Q. You must be proud of your career, though.

A. Well, I'm happy that a lot of kids, nice people who have been successful, remember me. And I'm proud of them; I'm proud of everybody. They have been very loyal to Central, and I think it's because they remember their teachers and me.

I still say, the parents who send their children to Central, I'm thanking them because they have wonderful kids who come from great stock, and we have a wonderful faculty here and I'm very proud of them. I think that in no small way have they contributed to what has happened in this school over a long period of time.

Boston Chicken Expected To Open At Grossman's

By LISA CONNELL

A Boston Chicken restaurant is expected to open for business at Grossman's Plaza, 100 Granite St., by the fall, as the city Licensing Board approved a common victualer license for a local franchise of the popular poultry restaurant chain.

Quincy attorney Robert Fleming, who represented the franchise owners, Carole, Marci and David Houston of Milton before the Board, said the restaurant will occupy about 4200 square feet of space and seat 66.

Nearly 50 employees will staff the restaurant over a period of two shifts.

Hours of operation will be 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 11 p.m. Sunday. At Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien's request, the franchise received permission to open for business early in the morning.

Negotiations with the Grossman family, ongoing for the past year, according to Fleming, were finalized recently.

Building renovations are expected to be completed in September or October as there will be a blending of changes in the main Grossman's store, the Boston Chicken site and the rehabilitation of the building, Fleming said.

The restaurant will occupy the part of the building near Morton's Liquors.

City Moving Closer To Decelle Deal

The question of whether Decelle will become the new tenant at the site of the former Child World in Quincy Center is no longer one of "if," but of "when," Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

The mayor said two weeks ago that Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning organization, was continuing to negotiate a lease between Decelle, a division of Burlington Coat Factory, and Walcott Corp., the owner of the site. Sheets also said at the time that negotiations had been going on for about two months and could have been completed by as early as last week.

Asked about the situation Tuesday, Sheets said he is confident the deal will be made, adding that he thinks it could be by the end of this week.

"Is it going to happen? Yes. By the end of this week? I hope so," said Sheets.

Sheets said a number of issues have caused the completion of the deal to be delayed. Among them, he said, is the fact that Decelle's real estate representative is based in Cleveland, Ohio, which makes the process slower than it could be.

The mayor said another key factor is that it has been discovered that an additional 8,000 square feet of retail marketable space has been discovered at the Hancock Street site, which includes the basement, ground level and second floors of both Child World and the former Cummings store next door. That brings the original total of 35,000 square feet at the site up to 43,000, he said.

WRING OUT THE SPONGE

If a driver finds that the brake pedal feels spongy upon braking, it may be an indication of air in the hydraulic system. Repeated pumping of the brake pedal producing significantly higher pedal positions may serve to confirm this suspicion. If so, the problem can be rectified by having the auto technician "bleed" the system of air. On rare occasions, a spongy brake pedal may result from brake fluid vapor lock. This occurs due to localized boiling of the brake fluid which, in turn, results from the heat generated by forceful braking and moisture in the brake fluid. Moisture lowers the boiling point of brake fluid, which readily attracts water. Therefore, brake fluid should be replaced periodically to rid the system of moisture.

HINT: Brake fluid may absorb water that gets past the lip seals in the wheel cylinders and the calipers.

Tobin Appointed To House Ways And Means Committee

State Rep. Stephen Tobin has been appointed to the Massachusetts House Ways and Means Committee.

The appointment was announced recently by House Speaker Charles Flaherty (D-Cambridge).

Tobin said he was happy to accept the appointment.

"I'm pleased to be chosen to serve on this important committee," he said. "I see it as an opportunity to be even more influential on MWRRA issues and budget items affecting my district."

"I'm looking forward to crafting the new state budget. My goal, as always, will be to fund necessary services without raising taxes."

Tobin noted that since

he began his career in public office, the state Legislature has passed five consecutive state budgets without adding any new taxes.

"And I want us to make that six," he said.

Rep. Thomas Finneran (D-Mattapan), chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said he was proud to have Tobin as a member.

"I think Steve's constituents will be well-served by his appointment to Ways and Means," he said. "Steve is an experienced legislator who understands the budget process and the value of committee work, and I'm happy to have him aboard."

Tobin, who has served as a state representative since January 1989, also serves on the Criminal Justice and Judiciary Committees. He has also served on the Counties Committee, although he noted he will sacrifice that position in order to serve on Ways and Means.

"That way I'll remain on a total of three committees," he said. "It will be a busy schedule, but I'm looking forward to it."

At Central 100 Years: A Proud Milestone

By MARY LOU FISHMAN

Central Middle School, located at 1012 Hancock Street, Quincy, is a building with a long past. The three story school, now considered rather outdated, was actually a magnificent modern school in its day.

Its long past started in 1893, when it became apparent that a new high school was needed in Quincy. The old school, located on High School Avenue near Quincy Avenue, was built in 1852. It was overcrowded and inadequate. Therefore, when a new building was proposed, chairman of the school committee, Emery Crane, readily accepted the idea. The committee appropriated $62,000 for construction, and $50,000 for contractor Henry Mellen of Worcester. The architect was E.G. Thayer and the superintendent of the project was John M. Byron.

Work was quickly started and by summer 1894, Quincy had a new high school. At the dedication on Sept. 12, Frederick Allison Tupper, the chosen master received the keys to the building.

The structure which was 112 feet long and 74 feet wide, was made of brick with granite trimming. On the inside, it was extremely modern with items that were considered luxuries at that time. It was piped for gas, wired for electricity, and equipped with fire apparatus on each floor. There were six steam boilers and a ventilating system.

On the first floor there were five main rooms: a large study room 50x70, two smaller rooms 25x28, and a master room 17x20. All rooms were completely furnished with desks. The masters room contained equipment with speaking tubes by which communication could be made to all rooms. Two iron stairways at both ends of the school led to the second and third floors.

The second floor consisted of four study rooms, a teachers room and a recitation room. These four rooms were for geography and history classes. There were lights and running water on this floor.

On the third were two laboratories, 25x50, and two drawing rooms of the same size. There was also a library and storage rooms. Also at this time the cafeteria was located on the third floor. All rooms were furnished and gas supplied in the labs.

The whole building was distinctively set off by a tower in the front of the building. In the tower, a set of circular stairs connected the floors. Although it was moved in 1906, it remained the nickname of the school.

The capacity of the school was 411, and a faculty of 10 was employed. However, only 276 attended classes by 1895. Still, the high school was well worth the investment.

Originally, Central had been built to take care of the overcrowding in the former four room high school. At the time it was built, Central was capable of holding slightly under five hundred students. However, with the rapid expansion of Quincy's population and the growing need for higher education, the school population more than doubled in ten years.

By 1905, it became apparent that a new school or an addition was needed. The school committee voted for the latter. It was decided that twelve rooms and a gymnasium would be added.

The school was not ready in the fall and the students were forced to go to the old school, the Woodward Institute, and some parts of the new high school that were complete. In November, the new addition was complete, and the students returned to their new high school with a capacity of one thousand and ten (599 more than before).

CENTENNIAL BANNER proclaiming Central Middle School's 100th anniversary was hung in front of the school last week. The banner, which was made by Signature Signs of Quincy for a price of $250, will remain in the spot for the remainder of the year.

In the 1920's the population surged with a high school attendance of one thousand five hundred, which put a terrific strain on Central again.

The year 1924 probably brought the biggest change in Central's history. The thirty year old school faced the possibility of being vacated. A new high school, referred to as the "million dollar school" was under construction. Although in good condition, there was no need for Central to continue to be a high school. It was therefore decided that a new school system would be adopted.

Previously, a student was required to attend eight years of grammar school and four years of high school. With this new plan, there would be six elementary grades, three junior high grades, and three senior high school grades.

However, when Central was first a junior high school, it was made up of only eighth and ninth grade - the ninth grade from the entire city, the eighth grade from the overcrowded schools. In 1927, when North Junior (presently part of NQHS) was completed, Central took on grades seven, eight, and nine from the southern and central part of the city.

There were physical changes to the school which included the library moving to its present location in room 13. At this time Central's library was considered one of the best school libraries under college level.

In the early 1930's the gym was renovated and a new unit of showers and lockers for both the boys and girls were added. In 1930 the heating system was improved and fire alarm and hot water systems were added.

In 1935, Central Junior High School faced many problems that a 40 year old building faces. There was a wall that almost collapsed and there were problems with the boilers that created inadequate heat for the students and teachers. In addition to the wall and heat repairs, the playground was resurfaced and the building was painted inside and out.

Finally, in 1940, Central felt the effects of old age. The north end of the center gable collapsed under the weight of ice and snow. A 500 pound granite slab and dozens of bricks fell causing damage to Room 37.

The early 1950's brought considerable changes to Central and to other schools in Quincy. An overall renovation program and construction plan was changing each school one by one. However, in 1952, the plans for Central created conflict. Some wanted changes and slight enlargement and others wanted an all new building. In 1953, the decision was for complete

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

April 13, 1994

Dear Friends,

It is a sincere pleasure for me to write a letter for this special edition of The Quincy Sun in honor of Central Middle School.

Central has had a long and distinguished career as a school building, serving as what was once called the new Quincy High School, then becoming a junior high school and finally, today, a middle school.

In the past one hundred years, there has always been a Central spirit. It is more than brick and mortar, it is an atmosphere that permeates the building. Graduates proudly proclaim their affiliation with Central.

As a child growing up in Quincy, I have fond memories of my mother and father, who graduated from Central, then Quincy High School, telling us many stories of the wonderful school life that went on in Quincy High School in their day. There is probably no other school building in the City of Quincy that is so steeped in the heritage of the Quincy Public Schools as Central.

As Superintendent of Schools, I am delighted to have this opportunity to say happy 100th birthday Central and ad multos annos.

Sincerely yours,

Eugene W. Creedon

CENTRAL MIDDLE SCHOOL

QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
EUGENE W. CREEDON, Superintendent

March 25, 1994

The city of Quincy is a special place to me. I grew up in Quincy, attended the Quincy Public Schools and have spent almost my entire professional career here. Yes, Quincy is a special place to me. As we celebrate the centennial year of Central Middle School, I cannot help but reflect on this truly magical place. I didn't have the opportunity to graduate from Central Middle School, as so many have over the past century, but I have come to appreciate the "mystique" of Central as principal for the past eleven years. It is special!

People make places. We have been and are among the best of people: teachers, students, parents, and community who have supported and contributed to this rich tradition of Central Middle School.

I am sure that those graduates who have walked through the wide corridors of this old but historic edifice would want to shout in one big chorus, Happy 100th Birthday, Central!

Back Then You Really Did Your Home Work

There wasn't any fooling around when it came to home work for students at the new Quincy High School in 1894.

Headmaster Frederic Allison Tupper had this message for parents when the school opened:

"As the daily session of the High School closes before 1:30 p.m., it is evident that no pupil of the school can do work satisfactory to himself, his parents or his teachers, unless he has at home regular study hours that shall be observed as carefully and conscientiously as the study hours under the direct supervision of his teachers.

"To great extent, promotion will depend on this home work. The parents must demand it, if they expect to get proper returns for the time spent in school.

"If any pupil says that he has nothing to do at home, something is wrong, and the matter should be investigated."

And, just to be sure students did their home work, parents were asked to fill out and sign a slip certifying that their son or daughter "has a regular time each day for study at home and is required to give strict attention to this work at such time."

That Famed 1914 'Worst Class'

The Quincy High School Class of 1914 was dubbed the school's "worst class" back then.

Teachers and others pinned that dubious distinction on class members because no one made the honor roll when they graduated that year from what is now Central Middle School.

They doubted if any of them would ever amount to much.

But the joke was on them.

Out of that class came some of Quincy's most famous sons and daughters.

Among them was award-winning stage-movie-television actress Ruth Gordon who was born and grew up in Wollaston as Ruth Gordon Jones.

Also in that class were Rear Admiral Giles Chester Stedman, Andrew Deane, vice president of the U.S. Steel Co.; Professor Ernest Gellotte of MIT, Navy Captain John Dingwell, Dr. Leon White, Dr. Fred (Ted) Rollins, Harry Burr, vice president of the Wollaston Savings and Loan; Francis Duggan, co-owner of Duggan Brothers auto agency and Arthur MacFarland, owner of a hardware store.

They and other class members made marks for themselves in the professional, business, military and other fields.

Harry Burr, who was the class president, mused: "I guess we were having too much fun to bother with studying."

You might say this so-called "worst class" had a lesson for their early critics: Give youth a chance to find itself.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

OFFICE OF ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY

March 30, 1994

Henry Bosworth
Publisher
The Quincy Sun
Quincy, Massachusetts 02169

Dear Mr. Bosworth:

It is a privilege to be able to write a letter acknowledging the 100th anniversary of Central. I completed the sixth grade at Wollaston Elementary School in June, 1952 and entered Central in September. I remember both the excitement of getting ready for junior high school and the trepidation of dealing with those "big" kids.

More than forty years have passed as I write this letter from Washington, DC, on a rainy Sunday afternoon. The week just completed has been extraordinary for education and the children and youth of America.

In the wee hours of Saturday morning, I sat with Secretary of Education, Richard Riley, in the gallery of the U.S. Senate and watched the Senate invoke cloture to end a filibuster by North Carolina Senator Jesse Helms and clear the way for a 63-22 vote to pass President Clinton's Goals 2000: Educate America Act.

Goals 2000 is landmark legislation which includes the national education goals and establishes a new Federal partnership with States, local school districts, and schools to improve teaching and learning for all students in America. It is all about higher academic standards, safer schools, better teachers, using new technology to improve learning, and making parents equal partners in the process of education.

"Cloture" was a word I first learned in Mr. Young's eighth grade Civics class at Central. The year was 1951-52. It was an historic year with the Supreme Court's decision that spring in Brown v. Board of Education which changed forever the standards of access and educational opportunity for minority children in America.

As a 13 year old I had no idea that my life would be so profoundly influenced by the instruction I received at Central in history, government, writing, speaking, and leadership. I learned about the work ethic through my duties in Central's lunchroom.

Henry Bosworth

March 30, 1994

I learned to respect diversity as I shared classes and extra-curricular activities with students of various ethnic backgrounds from all parts of the city. The attitude that I could be whatever I wanted to be if I worked hard and made the commitment to excellence was instilled by marvelous teachers like Mary Catherine Iannoni.

In 1954 I was not thinking about how old Central was. Sixty years seemed like an eternity to me then. My appreciation of history came later with a college major in that subject and my desire to teach American and World History to another generation of students. Today as I reflect on my work as a teacher and school administrator, I marvel at the extraordinary opportunities that I have had during my career in public education. That opportunity began for me in Quincy's public schools.

Without strong public schools in America, none of us can be sure that universal literacy will be attained, our democracy will remain vibrant, our economy will continue to lead the world, and the quality of life in our communities will improve for everyone. It is a time to celebrate the incredible successes of our public schools, to acknowledge that educators, parents, and community members must form new partnerships to meet the new challenges facing our schools and that an investment in public schools is the responsibility of everyone. Indeed, strong public schools are in the interest of us all.

As Central celebrates its 100th anniversary, it is appropriate to celebrate all those who have labored there to make a positive difference in the lives of thousands of young people.

May the celebration of Central's accomplishments during the past hundred years cause all citizens of Quincy to renew their faith in public education and reconfirm their commitment to provide the support that is necessary to ensure that future generations of Quincy students lead us through the twenty-first century to a bicentennial celebration that would make us all proud.

Sincerely,

Thomas W. Payzant

Ruth Gordon Never Forgot Her Quincy, Central Roots

Famed actress Ruth Gordon never forgot her Quincy or Central roots.

As Wollaston-born Ruth Gordon Jones, she graduated from Quincy High School in 1914 when what is Central Middle School today was the high school.

She often returned to Quincy for class reunions and usually visited Central while here, walking through the corridors, reminiscing.

Mary Catherine Iannoni, head counselor at Central, and Miss Gordon became good friends after discovering they had the same ophthalmologist, Dr. Trygve Gundersen in Boston.

Often after keeping an appointment with Dr. Gundersen, Miss Gordon would come out to Quincy.

And, as Miss Iannoni recalls:

"Her chauffeur would drive her to the front door nearest Butler Road. She would mount the steps to the third floor, walk across, pecking into doorways with no conversations. (She hated small talk)."

"Then she would pro-

ceed across the second floor corridor the the auditorium, inspect that, and on to the first floor to meet the chauffeur at the other front door.

"Since she and I both had the same Dr. Gundersen whom we both loved dearly, she would condescend to say hello and now and then drop off a single rose.

"She never forgot her roots. Central was special to her and she mentioned that to Dr. Gundersen. Joe Ryan (former guidance counselor) received a nod of recognition and chatted with her driver.

"She loved the reunions and stated that fact in a letter to me.

"She never forgot Central and Central will never forget Ruth Gordon."

'My Quincy By The Sea'

The lyrics to "My Quincy By The Sea" were written by Frederick Allison Tupper, headmaster of Quincy High School in 1894 and are sung to the music of "America."

The song was originally sung at the dedication of the then new Quincy High School, now Central Middle School, Sept. 11, 1894 at a 3 p.m. ceremony.

The then new school replaced the small Quincy High School which was located on High School Ave. behind the new Central Fire Station.

At last week's ceremonies marking the 100th anniversary of Central as a high school, junior high school and middle school, students sang "My Quincy By The Sea" as their predecessors did a century ago.

My Quincy by the Sea,
Founded by patriots free,
Thy praise is great:
Kindled fair Freedom's fires,
Whose glory ne'er expires,
Guarded by Fate.

My native Quincy dear,
City without a peer,
I love thee well;
I love thy ledges bold
That granite stores en-fold,

A mine of wealth untold,
No tongue can tell.

Who hath the power to count
The charms of Merry
Mount
Or Fair Blue Hills?
Stand on the ledges high,
And feast the enraptured eye,
Till Heaven itself seems nigh,—
Gone all life's ills.

My father's God, I pray,
Keep Quincy safe away
Beneath Thy care.
Bless Thou her Public School,
Let truth and beauty rule,
As by Siloam's pool
Bloom lilies fair.

Dear Ms. Iannoni,

Unfortunately, I will be unable to attend the 100th Anniversary celebration to honor the century of service by the faculty and staff of Central Middle School -- in my memory Central Junior High School. My wife and I are both graduates as are her sisters and my sister. So we have been touched in significant ways by the people who gave of themselves to teach us and help us grow. We both send our best regards and hearty congratulations.

I remember my days at Central with fondness and, in particular, time on the football field under the watchful eye of Coach Finnigan. While my academic record pales in comparison to others, in particular, my wife Gay, I did begin to learn the meaning of self-development and discipline at the hands of Ms. Gizzarelli, Ms. Murphy, and Mr. Young.

The countless teachers and staff people who have worked tirelessly to improve the lives of the young people of Quincy are to be thanked and honored at this centennial milestone. It is they through their selfless service who made Central an important piece of Quincy and in turn our Nation. The skills they taught and the windows they opened made life better for many and strengthened America.

Best wishes to all involved in the celebration. We are better because of you.

Sincerely,

100 Years: A Proud Milestone

renovation, costing considerably less than a new building.

Four rooms were added, stairways were narrowed and the basement was redone. New ceilings and lighting apparatus were added and new lockers were installed on each floor. Laboratories were added or remodeled. Also the gym roof which was glass was covered except in the locker room area. The cafeteria was moved from the third floor to the basement. Plumbing, electrical, and the general structure were updated.

In 1966, the Little Company evaluation stated that Central was too small, the lack of play space severely handicapped the physical education, and the proximity of the parking lot was potentially dangerous. The building was in good condition, but many of the classrooms were too small. The gym and the library were inadequate for 800 students.

When Central first became a Junior High School, there were many rooms for specialized education such as shops and home economics. In the 60's there were special programs for remedial reading and advanced reading. The ninth grade had foreign language and the advanced placement program had extensive programs. Arts and Humanities education had many progressive courses.

In September of 1971 a new staff organizational pattern of interdisciplinary teams was established. Team teaching recognizes and encourages individual differences in teachers as well as in students. This team approach continues to be an education strength at Central.

During the 70's, Project SHARE (Student Helpers Actualizing Relevant Experiences), Project SCORE (Student Committee on Reclaiming the Environment) and Q-VOICE (Quincy Vocationally Oriented Individualized Career Experiences) were programs that expanded beyond the classrooms for the ninth grade students. Students involved with Project SHARE assisted in the feeder elementary schools, the YMCA Tiny Tot Program, the QPS Swim Program and the Special Olympics. They became actively involved at the community level.

Project SCORE was a spin-off of Project BURP (Butler Urban Recovery Program) which established a consciousness for Central's immediate environment. With SCORE, students surveyed, reported and promoted clean-up in areas of Quincy as well as an ambitious focus upon the noise pollution created by air traffic from Logan Airfield.

Q-VOICE was a spring program designed for twenty-four students interested in exploring the agri-business offerings at Norfolk Agricultural High School in Walpole. They were bused each day for two weeks. There they participated in hands-on experiences in animal science, plant science, forestry and conservation. For some it resulted in decisions to attend that high school.

THE MORNING CHORUS, under the direction of Mrs. Marion Clancy (right) sang carols to patients at Quincy City Hospital at Christmas, 1981.

All three programs dissipated with Proposition 2 1/2 and the change from junior high school to middle school.

Another program which was initiated during the 70's and has survived is the Camp program. This activity focuses upon environmental studies, problem solving, and group dynamics. Originally Camp Bourdale was the site and currently Camp Wing in Duxbury is where approximately one hundred fifty seventh graders live and learn for a week.

In October, 1988, a structural problem surfaced to become known as the "Year of the Beam." While contractors made Central safe once more, they added two classrooms, removed the balcony and enlarged the stage—all in the Learning Center. While Grade 6 spent five and one half months at the Squantum School, Grade 7 attended Broad Meadows and Grade 8 was housed at North Quincy High School.

Central has continued to develop programs that have offered opportunities to help students keep pace with the demands and the realities of the world of work and the expectations of the 21st century—Step into Society Week, Global Lab, Odyssey of the Mind, Junior Achievement, Science Fair, VAMP (Velocity Acceleration Momentum Project), and special programs sponsored by Central's partnership with Mass. Electric.

In one hundred years Central has educated millions of young people. In some families there have been third and fourth generations who have attended.

With this continuity the consensus has evolved as a reality—there is no place but Central.

'A Long Time Ago But I Remember...'

I was in the class that graduated from "Central Junior High," as it was then known, in 1929. If I remember correctly, we were the first class there beginning with the eighth grade. The following year, there were seventh, eighth and ninth grades. I attended the Coddington School through Grade 7. Up until that time the elementary schools included Grades 1-8. High school grades were 9-12.

It was a long time ago, but I remember that at Christmas each year, we had an assembly and the principal, David H. Goodspeed, would read aloud Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." We called him "Swift" behind his back!

Before graduating, our class put on a "revue" and one of the football "heroes" sang "You're the Cream in My Coffee." I now hear this song early in the morning on the radio station WJDA, and "remember when."

Miss Cole, our English teacher, was loved by all, and we were very much impressed with Mr. Lynch, our science teacher.

I remember working in the cafeteria, enjoying sports, music, and the drama club.

We made new friends from the other Quincy Elementary Schools, going on to become the Quincy High School Class of June 1932. In September of 1992, we had our 60th reunion with about 70 classmates attending.

It was a Monday. The bells rang in mid-class and the students were told to got to the auditorium. I remember exactly where I sat. On the left side, second row in the balcony. Principal David Goodspeed appeared on the stage where a radio had been placed.

We sat in confused silence and heard President Franklin D. Roosevelt declare war. That was December 8, 1941. I was in the 9th grade.

In total there have been five family members that spent their three years at Central Junior. My husband, Thomas F. Wiggin, Jr., our sons, Alan and Brian, and my brother-in-law, Bruce B., and yours truly, Barbara Schaltenöand Wiggin.

I Have Many Memories...

I have many memories of Central Junior High:

Sewing an apron with Mrs. Holt

Learning Latin with Miss Greene

Science with Mr. Lewis- why did he ask me to leave the room that day?

Gym classes with Mrs. Gould- those royal blue uniforms that she inspected weekly. Climbing the ropes, the president's physical fitness test.

Modern Math, were we the first to learn it, with Mrs. Moran?

But the Algebra with Miss Taylor- nothing was more difficult

Geography with Mr. Hintl- I can find the United States on the globe

Mr. Flores, Science, the colors of the rainbow- Roy

A Favorite Memory

My favorite Central memory would have to be the week I spent at Camp Wing during the 7th grade.

It was a great memory because I got to spend time away from Central with my closest friends doing things that didn't always happen in day-to-day life at Central.

G. Biv!

Mr. Young, the principal- he was so tall!!

That third floor art room- so big and tall!! Miss Heikkela taught us to draw and write, Zanner Blosser penmanship

Chorus and music with Miss Goodhue- she laughed like Santa Claus

I think we took our oral polio vaccine in the lunch rooms at Central

I learned of the death of President Kennedy during a health class

Was Carmen a student when I was there?

My favorite memory?

Outdoor lunch!!! But Mr. Murphy, do we have to go outside??? Lunch time was where friends met, where friendships were made. And it is those friendships that I remember and cherish the most. Many of those friends I still see and I will never forget. We were the students of each other; we shared a part of ourselves with each other and we learned the meaning of the word "friend."

Put Our Money Where Mandates Are

By CONGRESSMAN GERRY STUDDS

The steamroller of "unfunded mandates" is revving up, poised to flatten Congressional reauthorization of the federal Clean Water Act. It doesn't have to happen.

We can maintain high federal standards for clean water without digging deeper into the federal treasury and without further stretching state, local and household budgets. We can stop the unfunded mandates steamroller—the intense opposition to strict federal requirements for environmental cleanup with no federal money to pay for them. There is a common sense (and therefore distinctly "outside the Beltway") solution: make those responsible for fouling our waterways equally responsible for cleaning them up. Make the polluters pay.

Clearly, local communities and ratepayers can no longer bear the burden of cleaning up our nation's water. The cleanup of Boston Harbor will cost 2.5 million local ratepayers about $5 billion. Many of these households are facing water and sewer bills that are threatening to outstrip their local property taxes. Right here on the South Shore, many homeowners in the City of Quincy must pay more than $500 per year. And those rates are projected to double within the next five years.

The drastic increases have led, understandably, to ratepayer rebellion. MWRA communities have said loud and clear: we cannot continue to pay more than 90 percent of the cost to clean up Boston Harbor. Unless we deal squarely with the issue of funding, we risk an unraveling of our commitment to the harbor cleanup project.

Other clean water projects around the country are also in jeopardy, because the Boston area is not alone in paying high water and sewer bills. Federal, state and local governments, industry and individual ratepayers now spend approximately $62 billion each year in the struggle to keep our rivers and streams fishable, swimmable and drinkable. But it is not enough.

Impaired not only by inadequately-funded sewage treatment, but also by toxic discharges and polluted run-off, water quality continues to decline and cleanup costs continue to rise. The question is: How are we going to pay for the water quality we all expect and deserve?

The answer, I believe, is to require those whose actions degrade water quality to contribute more to the financial burden of cleanup.

H.R. 2199, the Polluter Pays Clean Water Funding Act, would assess major water polluters $4 billion annually. These charges would be levied on those who discharge industrial toxic waste ($2 billion), industrial users ($1 billion) and the manufacturers of fertilizers ($250 million), pesticides ($500 million), and animal feed ($250 million), with all revenues dedicated exclusively to water pollution.

Putting a price on water pollution spreads the cost of cleaning it up more fairly. In addition, it doesn't take an Adam Smith to realize that when pollution starts to show up as a cost on a company's bottom line, there will be less of it. Less pollution means lower taxes and better water quality, which in turn means a decreased need for treatment and lower cleanup costs. We all win.

We must not abandon the progress made in improving our nation's water quality in the 22 years since the Federal Water Pollution Control Act was enacted. Nor can we abandon those, like the ratepayers from the South Shore who came to Washington in February, who rightfully tell Congress that no matter how honorable the goal, they can pay no more to achieve it.

Our federal government should continue to mandate high standards of water quality for all Americans. But we must realize that these standards are costly to attain and that we have a responsibility to put our money where our mandates are.

of his death. There is evidence, however inconclusive, that the remains are of a Union soldier killed on Southern soil.

A document inside the cardboard box barely legible spelled out the name "Abraham Jenks, the 19th Company, U.S. Artillery," and a date believed to be July 30, 1864. Museum officials theorize the soldier died in the Battle of Petersburg, Vir., which occurred on July 30, 1864.

However, the name of the soldier nor the battle unit could not be confirmed by the National Archives in Washington. As a result, the soldier will be buried as an unknown.

"He will be buried as an unknown. His gravestone will say 'known but to God,'" MacMullen said.

A small bronze chest plate with a cup typically worn by a soldier carrying a regimental flag was found with the remains, giving museum officials more reason to believe the man is a Civil War veteran.

"The evidence is sufficient for us to believe he was a soldier killed in battle and thus deserves a proper burial" Timmins said. "But there is not enough evidence for the U.S. government to give a positive ID. Therefore, we will proceed with the burial of an unknown."

Researching Civil War veterans is extremely arduous, MacMullen said. He noted many soldiers commonly transferred units to gain signing bonuses.

"One of the problems with Civil War records is the fact that people were mustered in and out quite often. They transferred around a lot because each time they signed up for service, they received a bonus.

"That's why it's very hard to trace these guys. They didn't have any sophisticated ways to keep track of the soldiers and they didn't have any dental records."

More than 600,000 Union and Confederate soldiers died during the four-year Civil War. Many casualties were buried at battle sites. However, the graves of some soldiers were relocated at the request of family.

MacMullen speculated that may be the case of the unknown soldier. After the Battle of Petersburg, relatives may have requested that the body be returned to Massachusetts and then to Gloucester for burial in a family plot. However, for some unknown reason, the body was never buried after its return.

Now, some 130 years later, the soldier will be finally laid to rest in the Civil War section of Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The burial of the soldier will be part of an all-day encampment behind the Quincy Vocational-Technical School featuring Civil War re-enactors. Re-enactment groups expected to participate include the Mass. 54th Company A Black Regiment, Mass. First Calvary, a cannon battery from the Rhode Island Artillery, and Union and Confederate volunteers of New England and New York, are expected to participate in the all-day encampment.

Mayor James Sheets and other officials plan to dress in clothing of the era for the event. The mayor, a Civil War history buff whose great-grandfather fought at Gettysburg, said he'll read President Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address" as part of the ceremony.

The soldier's remains are now contained in a plain pine casket with rope handles, matching the coffin style of the 1860s, at the Deware Funeral Home in Wollaston. The casket will be draped with an historically correct American Flag with 34 stars made by the Eagle Flag of America, in Weymouth.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church, Quincy Center, will conduct an ecumenical service for the soldier at the church. After the service, the casket will proceed in a horse-drawn caisson to the cemetery as re-enactors march and play music from the Civil War period.

After the burial, authentic Civil War food such as beans and black coffee, will be cooked and served at the encampment. The public is invited to the burial and the encampment.

The publicity of the discovery of the soldier and plans for his burial has generated national interest.

Local officials have learned a crew from "Prime Time Live," ABC News' television magazine, may come to Quincy to film the event. The mayor's office has fielded more than 30 phone calls since the ceremony was publicized last week.

For Quincy Youth Ages 13-17 New Teen Center Opens Saturday At South Shore YMCA

Opening night and registration at a new teen center in Quincy will be held Saturday, April 23 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy Center.

The first night of operation will be catered with pizza and refreshments provided by Papa Gino's Restaurants on Granite St. and Beale St., and Pepsi-Cola of Milton.

An additional teen center will open Friday, April 29 from 8 to 10 p.m. at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

According to JoAnn Bragg, executive director of the city's Committee to Establish Youth Centers, the YMCA site will be the center's main registration site where photo I.D.'s will be made and prerequisite contracts are signed by the teachers. The centers are for Quincy youth ages 13 to 17 only.

The YMCA site will be open Saturdays from 8 to 10 p.m., and the church center will be open Fridays from 8 to 10 p.m., Bragg said, adding the centers will provide teens with activities that will keep them off the streets.

Activities planned at the YMCA include swimming, basketball, floor hockey, volleyball and ping pong. There will also be pool tables, a free weight/hammer room, a teen lounge and music.

The teen center at the church will feature basketball, volleyball, bumper pool, a juke box, board games as well as a teen lounge, cable TV, field trips and a gymnasium.

The new centers, called "Teen Get-Away," are run by a non-profit, charitable organization comprising officials and residents from a cross-section of the community.

"The Teen Get-Away is a place for teens to have fun and socialize in a smoke-free, alcohol-free, drug-free and violence-free environment," Bragg said.

To join "Teen Get-Away," Quincy youths between 13 and 17 must show proof of age, pay $5 annual dues, be a Quincy resident, and sign a membership agreement which includes parent/guardian's permission to join.

Parent's or legal guardian's signature, and proof of birth date, will be required prior to the issuance of a photo identification. Photo ID's will be required for admittance each week. Laminated cards will be issued through the teen center.

The annual dues will help offset the costs involved in providing services, Bragg said. Youths will also be required to pay a $1 admittance fee per visit.

By signing up, youths agree to be substance and violence free. Under no circumstances will anyone demonstrating visible signs of drug or alcohol influence be allowed admittance to the teen center or attendance at specially scheduled events, said Bragg, a member of the Quincy School Committee.

Members of TGA will have access to the YMCA during center hours only.

For more information, call Bragg at 471-3822, Kathy Bigham at 376-0953, Kathy Cavarro at 471-6438, Sally Lynch at 472-6864, Joe Mazzarella at 328-5458 or Jon Simons at the YMCA at 479-8500 ext. 106.

Zane Won't Be Easy To Replace

everyone was walking around with smiles on their faces, but before that, they were grumpy-looking."

May Sweeney, director of planning and marketing at the hospital, said Zane's efforts in instituting a number of new programs have left the hospital "well-positioned" for the future.

"She was very important in the turnaround here in the hospital and we're sorry to see her go," said Sweeney. "But we're stronger because of her, and Quincy Hospital will go on."

The 290-bed hospital, which is owned by the city, had reached a 10-year low in patient volume and equally miserable staff morale when Zane took over, according to hospital employees. Even a $60 million expansion and modernization project completed in 1989 initially hurt the hospital because the inconvenience and noise from the construction drove off a lot of patients.

The resulting loss of revenue contributed to the hospital's financial problems, resulting in the layoff of 200 employees.

Zane, the first woman director of the hospital, helped turn its finances around. One of the first things she did was initiate regular meetings with various hospital departments, overnight staff and union stewards.

Using information she gathered from a number of sources, Zane made dozens of changes at the hospital, including the recruiting of 70 physicians, planning of a new radiation therapy facility, redesigning of the hospital's maternity ward, and others. The hospital is now looking at a $2.1 million profit, due in large part to Zane's accomplishments.

In her departing letter to the staff of Quincy Hospital, however, she said a team effort was responsible for the improvements made.

"I am so very proud of all the accomplishments we have made over these past four years and it has been through your commitment and dedication to the mission and vision of our hospital that we have been able to accomplish so much," Zane wrote. "You should be proud of where you have brought our fine hospital. I encourage each and every one of you to continue to work hard toward helping Quincy Hospital to be well-positioned for the future challenges it will face."

Dunn said that was typical of her personality.

"She would always be the first person to give others credit," he said.

"Ellen would never take credit for anything solely," agreed Buckley. "She always said it was a team effort."

Despite her departure, it is possible that Zane will continue to be affiliated with Quincy Hospital in the future. While she has said that it is too early to determine whether Quincy Hospital will be part of the new network she is joining, Zane has also said that she plans to look north, west and south of Boston for members.

Building Dept. Working To Prevent Another Falling Concrete Accident

said Mulvey. "They want to get it done as quickly as possible."

Mulvey noted that the building is a particularly old one, since his department's records date back to 1907 and he has no record of Wollaston Chambers. He added that he currently has no plans to inspect any other buildings in the city for similar problems.

Thomas Koch, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, said such an inspection will likely not be necessary. None of Quincy's city-owned buildings are built like Wollaston Chambers, he said, which has a "uniqueness" about it because of features that were constructed purely for decorative purposes.

Other buildings in the city won't be inspected because they are the responsibility of the building owners, Koch added.

"We at the mayor's office are pleased nobody was injured in this incident," he said, "and hopefully it will serve as a wake-up call to other building owners in the city."

Hospital Begins Search For New Director said he believes Zane's current salary is around $150,000 a year. Salary is determined by Quorum Health Resources, the Waltham-based private firm that manages the hospital, he said.

At press time officials at Quorum Health Resources could not be reached for comment.

Sources said Quincy Hospital Chief Operating Officer Neil Stroman will lead the hospital until a replacement for Zane is found.

North Still Searching For First Season Win

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High School baseball team is still looking for their first win of the season as they dropped a 10-0 decision to Billerica on Monday to fall to 0-4.

North's next game is Friday at Adams Field against Needham (first pitch at 11 a.m.). They will then play home games on Monday, April 25 against Silver Lake and Tuesday versus Stoughton. Both games are at 3:30 p.m. at Adams Field.

The Billerica game featured the best pitching of the young season by junior Sean Dolbear. Despite giving up all 10 runs and six hits, Dolbear struck out a season-high seven, including four straight in the first and second innings.

Dolbear's toughest inning was the first when he walked the first three Billerica batters to load the bases. A double play and two strikeouts ended the inning.

The game remained scoreless until he top of the fifth. Dolbear surrendered his first hit and Billerica jumped out to a 4-0 lead. North's closest chance of scoring to this point was in the second inning when Dan Reynolds (1-3) singled with two out followed by a Tim Zanaboni walk. The rally was stopped as Brian Oliver grounded to third.

Billerica then exploded for six runs in the sixth and knocked Dolbear out of the game. North Quincy senior relief pitcher Mike Santoro finished the game with impressive numbers, giving up two hits while walking two and striking out three.

North Quincy had one last chance in the seventh, but could only collect two singles by pinch-hitters Lee Hughes and Chris Hancock.

"We played pretty well for about four innings and then a combination walks and popups that just dropped and we couldn't bail out," said head coach Leo Donovan. "We let too many runners get on base and they took advantage of that."

Also getting hits for the Raiders were George Wirtz, Steve Koch and Dolbear.

North entered the week coming off a 26-2 loss at Barnstable last Friday. Koch went 2-for-4 with a double and a home run in the game.

Bregoli On N.E Junior Olympic Baseball Team

Chris Bregoli of Wollaston has been selected to be a member of the New England Mariners AAU/Junior Olympic baseball team for the 1994 season.

The 13-year-old was selected by the Mariners after attending a series of clinics/tryouts during the past month. More than 50 other boys his age tried to earn one of the 16 spots on the roster.

Bregoli helped lead Continental Cablevision to the Quincy Youth Baseball championship and received the George Richards Award in 1993. Besides playing for the

CHRIS BREGOLI

Mariners he will be on the Elks of the Quincy Babe Ruth league.

Last year the New England Mariners won the National Championship in both the 13 and 15-year-old divisions. This year, Bregoli will pitch and play third base as the team travels throughout New England playing in weekend exhibition games. They will also compete in a national tournament being held in Des Moines, Iowa, July 28-August 7.

The Bregoli family is seeking contributions to help defray the expenses required to send Chris to Iowa. Anyone who would like to help this local boy take part in this national competition can make checks payable to: New England Mariners. c/o Chris Bregoli, 80 Willow Ave., Quincy, MA. 02170.

A public apology to the players, coaches and parents of the Don Bosco High School hockey team:

On March 17, in this space, I wrote a piece concerning the Don Bosco/North Quincy Division I hockey playoff game. In a misdirected effort at enthusiastically promoting the play of North's Jim Sapienza, I portrayed the Don Bosco players in a less than positive, or rather, a demeaning, light.

I want to apologize to these players and to all the other people involved in the Don Bosco hockey program. Quite frankly, I figured no one from Bosco would see the story, so I did not consider this a restraint as I tried to hype the play of Sapienza. But this is no excuse. No matter who I felt would, or would not, see the piece, I should not have written the things that I did write.

The idea of belittling the Bosco players never once crossed my mind. The only thought I had at the time was "Hey, Sapienza played a very tough game. It seems every week I mention all the goals he's scored. How about something on his physical presence on the ice." When writing the piece my two thoughts should have been: "would the North players like to read this" and "how would the folks at Bosco feel about this." My error lay in the fact that I only considered the former and not the latter. Please keep in mind that this was done not through malevolence but through ignorance.

Whatever the reason for what was written, it showed poor judgement. But, as readers of this column know, this has never been, and will not be, my typical method of operation.

Now to the good stuff.

Chalk one up for the "little" guys: In hockey's "second season" - the playoffs - anything can happen. Teams pick up the pace. The competition is tougher. Defenses clamp down. The underdog, in one last gasp, throws everything it has at the big boys.

In the NHL the Washington Capitals knocked off the Pittsburgh Penguins, 5-3, in Game One of a series that several people, including Boston Globe hockey guru Kevin Paul Dupont, predicted to be a four-game Penguin sweep.

Even more surprising were the upsets in Quincy Youth Hockey's Pee Wee Hockey League. Keohane's struggled all season long, finishing in fifth place with an 8-15-2 record. In the opening round of the playoffs they took on the Goliath-like Mike Morrissey Club, a team that finished in second place with 33 points and a 16-8-1 record.

With Richard Bonvie (two goals, one assist) and Pat O'Neill (one goal, two assists) firing from their slingshots, the Davids toppled the Goliaths, 7-5, and advanced to the semifinals of the playoffs.

But that wasn't the only upset of the week. Mighty Marina Bay Taxi, who finished in first place with 34 points and a record of 17-8-0, was expected to have an easy day against last place (7-16-2) Skinner's Winners.

Coach Tom Connelly's crew felt differently, however. Backed by the impressive performance of goaltender Shaun Lynch, they played a tight, hard-fought game. Marina Bay prevailed, 4-3, but all was not lost for Skinner's. They advanced to the semifinals by virtue of giving up the fewest goals against in the opening round of the playoffs. Scoring for Skinner's were Bob Harvey, Shawn Manning and gunslinger Dave "High" Noonan.

The Quincy High School wrestling team will hold their annual awards banquet on Thursday, April 28 at the Morrisette Post in Quincy. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. and dinner is at 7:15.

All ex-players, alumni and friends are welcome to attend.

Tickets are $20. For tickets or information call Lou Venturilli at 472-3752.

The Quincy High School Baseball Alumni Association Hall of Fame Committee will induct 13 new members on Tuesday, April 26 at the Quincy Sons of Italy.

The 1994 inductees are Jerry Hughes, Class of 1923; Jay Desmond, '31; John Menz, '36; Lou Marini, '46; Vinny Moscardelli, '54; Bob Quintiliani, '67; Kevin Ryan, '68; Jay Caron, '72; Frank DiSalvio, '74; Paul Ferris, '76; Steve Infascelli, '76; Mike Scurti, '80; and Jimmy Bandera, '82.

The Hall of Fame Committee will also honor Bob Dinan, Guido "Buddy" Pettinelli, Earl LeChance and the late John McDonnell.

Robbie Kane, a former three sport star at Quincy High who now attends Trinity College, will receive the Paul Grasse Memorial Scholarship Award.

Tickets are $20 and can be purchased by writing Alumni Chairman Joe Brill, 87 Woodcliff Rd., Quincy, 02169, or calling Brill at 773-5386.

Morrisette Post Honors Its Legends

It was an evening of cheers, fond memories and good natured ribbing as seven local baseball luminaries were honored on April 9 for the 180 combined years they have devoted to the Morrisette Post American Legion baseball program.

A banquet celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Morrisette baseball program was "the ideal opportunity," according to Alumni President Joe Sheffer, to honor the men who made Morrisette the most successful Legion program in the area.

Bruno Carloni, Nick Malvesti, Frank Osborne, Connie Carlozzi, William Corcoran, Richard "Berger" Ryan and Ray Cattaneo were the honorees at the affair attended by over 200 guests.

Current Morrisette coach Dave Perdios hosted the event. "I was blessed to have been coached by many of these men," said Perdios before he invoked the American Legion Baseball Code of Sportsmanship, a code "which these men have tried to instill in all of us."

"This first man devoted 18 years to Morrisette baseball and was an assistant coach on the first club they fielded in 1945," said Perdios as he opened the commemoration by introducing Carloni, who, along with Malvesti, was one of the founding members of the program.

Carloni spoke briefly about his years with the program and introduced his many family members who were in attendance, including his wife Doreen, who was with him through many of those years.

Before stepping down he had a warning for this years Morrisette club: "Watch out this year for Sandwich Post #188," said Carloni, who now resides in that Cape town.

"This next man has spent 40 years with Morrisette as scorekeeper, athletic officer, fund raiser, assistant coach - he and his wife Elenor have done it all for the Morrisette program," said Perdios as he introduced Frank Osborne.

"Nick asked me to join the program for one year as scorekeeper, and my wife did so much of the work," said Osborne. "The greatest day of my life was when I got involved with Morrisette, the second was when my son made the team," he said, trying to hold back the tears that swelled in his eyes as he recalled many fond memories after 40 years with the program.

"I want to thank everyone in Morrisette for having been so damned good to me," he said with pride before returning to his seat.

Carlozzi, who spent time with Baintree Legion before moving on to Morrisette, echoed many of Osborne's sentiments.

"My happiest day was when I got the call from Nick to coach Morrisette. It was a great opportunity and I never regretted leaving Baintree Legion."

"Carlozzi spent 17 years with Morrisette and coached me during my years here as a player and at Archbishop Williams," said Perdios.

Corcoran, who was the bat boy on the very first Morrisette team in 1945, was the next to be honored. He spent 19 years as a coach and also played on the first Morrisette team to win a zone title.

"In 1962-63 I was asked to be the pitching coach," said Corcoran. "I can't say enough about what it meant for me to be involved with all those young players."

In praise of Malvesti and Carloni he said: "This program can be compared to the Olympic flame. These men who started the program lit the torch and have successfully passed it down the line to our present coach and players."

Perdios reserved some of the evenings loftiest praise for Ryan.

"Berger spent 24 years with the Morrisette program as an assistant coach, our number one fan and number one baseball guy. He taught me more about baseball in my eight years here as coach than anyone I've ever met."

Ryan was quick to deflect any personal praise and point to the overall success of the Morrisette program.

"In 49 years we've played over 1000 ball games. We've won or tied for 26 zone titles, been to the state finals eight times and were state champs twice - 1975 and 1992. '75 was the high water mark, we won the Northeast Regional championship and went on to Rapid City, N.D. for the nationals, where we lost two one-run games. One of them was against the eventual national champion, Yakima, Wash.

Perdios also heaped great personal praise upon the evenings final honoree.

"This man has spent 25 years with Morrisette baseball. He's a very close friend of mine and the man who gave me the opportunity to coach Morrisette. He's still in the dugout with us and still does a great job - my friend Ray Cattaneo."

"When I was 14 I went out for Legion ball and these two men - Nick and Bruno - took me under their wing," said Cattaneo as he gestured towards Malvesti and Carloni. "They taught me about baseball, sportsmanship and life."

He also went on to sum up the healthful effects baseball has had on himself and the other guests of honor.

"Hey look at us," he said with a wide grin while pointing to his mates. "After 50 years we're all still alive, we all still have our hair. Hey, were in pretty good shape. I guess you gotta get into baseball," was his conclusion.

On his occasion to hand the coaching reigns to Perdios, Cattaneo said: "Dave was bugging me about coaching, so I finally turned the team over to him. It was the greatest thing I've ever done. He is aggressive like I was, hates umpires like I did and he's a great teacher. A much better teacher than I ever was. I'm so glad I picked him and I'm so proud of him. And I taught him everything he knows," he joked.

Without a doubt the star of the evening was team patriarch Nick Malvesti. Malvesti, the Red Auerbach of Morrisette baseball, "the man who started it all," received standing ovations both before and after his speech. Judging from the remarks made by his friends in the crowd, however, it seems that the first round of applause was for the man, the second for the man taking a seat.

The jabs were aimed at his reputation for being slightly long-winded, and the sarcastic groans could be heard when he stood at the podium, looked at his large stack of note cards and said "let me first give you a little history of Legion ball in Quincy."

Malvesti told of the first Legion team to play in Quincy, the 1933 Wollaston Post squad on which he played. A member of that team, Ralph McLeod went on to play professional ball in the Braves organization and spent three years in the majors with that club.

"The first Morrisette team played in 1945 - me and Carloni were assistants on that team," he said. "We took over the next year. I told Bruce that we were going to build a team that every post in the state would look to. But we also wanted to have fun; sports are no good if you don't have fun."

In their first year as coaches, Carloni and Malvesti took Morrisette to the Zone 6 title, the first of the amazing 26 zone titles Morrisette would win from 1946 to the present. They lost in the playoffs that first year to a Walpole team that featured Joe Morgan, the man who would go on to manage the Boston Red Sox.

"I would be very remiss if I didn't mention my wife Agnes, who was with me through all those years," said Malvesti.

UNITEDWAY OF MASSACHUSETTS BAY

From The Firehouse

By Quincy Deputy Fire
Chief Paul Cuddy

Meet E.D.I.T.H.

If you have never been in a fire, it's easy to think, "no, it will never happen to me."

The unfortunate fact, however, is that some 5,000 people die in fires in the United States each year, and the majority of these fire deaths occur in the home.

If a fire occurs in your home, your primary goal should be to get everyone out of the house as quickly as possible. We are all aware of the importance of having properly maintained smoke detectors in the home; they are your guarantee that you and your family will be alerted to a fire before your exits become impassable. Once you've been alerted, however, everyone needs to know in advance the best ways to evacuate the home, so they can move quickly and without panic when the alarm sounds.

This is why E.D.I.T.H. is so important! E.D.I.T.H. is not a person, but rather a plan you make to escape from fire in your home. It stands for Exit Drills in the Home. Here's how to do it:

1. Draw a floor plan of your home and mark all possible escape routes. Make sure you know two ways out of every room, especially bedrooms.

2. Remind everyone to close doors after they leave the home. Closed doors can slow down the spread of fire, smoke and heat.

3. Decide on a meeting place where all family members can assemble after exiting the home. Take a head count to ensure that everyone is out of the house.

4. Once everyone is safely outside, call the fire department from a neighbor's house. Dial 911 and give the fire alarm operator the address of the house. NEVER go back inside your home for any reason.

5. Practice E.D.I.T.H.! Have everyone start in their own bedroom with the doors closed. One person can shout or push the smoke detector test button to start the drill. Everyone can then practice crawling under the "smoke" and meeting outside at the prearranged meeting place. Vary the drill to prepare for different fire situations. Pretend that the fire has blocked your primary exit, and make family members use their second way out.

Remember, if a fire does occur in your home, it's too late to start planning then. That's why planning can practicing escape plans is so vital. Your friend E.D.I.T.H. can save your life!

(Next time: What to do if exits become impassable)

Radiation Therapy Service To Open In July

Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospital are planning to open a regional radiation therapy service for Southeastern Massachusetts cancer patients in July.

The service, made possible through a limited partnership with Shields Health Care of Brockton, will likely be located in Brintree at a site near the junction of Route 128 and the Southeast Expressway, according to Quincy Hospital Public Relations Coordinator Joan Schwartz. She added, however, that a site in that area has only been "tentatively identified" and location has not yet been positively confirmed.

Under an arrangement communicated to the Massachusetts Public Health Council, Shields Health Care will be the general partner, and the two hospitals will be equal, limited partners. Schwartz said a number of other details regarding the tertiary affiliate, the cost of the project and joint community health service initiatives, are still being finalized.

Both Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospital had originally proposed offering their own independent radiation therapy services. In July 1992, however, the Public Health Council asked both hospitals to establish a single, shared center to meet the region's growing cancer treatment needs.

Quincy Hospital is a public, not-for-profit, 290-bed, acute care hospital serving residents south of Boston.

South Shore Hospital in Weymouth is a private, not-for-profit, tax-exempt, 342-bed, regional acute care medical center serving 490,000 residents of Southeastern Massachusetts.

Shields Health Care opened the first free standing Magnetic Resonance Imaging Center in Massachusetts in 1986 and is the largest provider of MRI services in the Northeast.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

There's much to the claim that the tone of voice used by an adversary in a disagreement is more important, often, than what's actually said.

It's true that among husbands and wives, those in love, in the same family, the usual courtesies of speech and manner are often not observed, because of the peace of today's peace of life.

A wise man once told newly married couples that if they would all be as polite to each other, throughout their daily lives, as they were to strangers met at the office, or at social affairs, their marriages would have a major advantage, and improved prospects for success.

The goal to keep in mind is that even with those we are closest to, tone of voice, good manners and sensitivity pay wonderful dividends in life...

Board Grants License For Chinese Restaurant

By LISA CONNELL

"Yes" to free enterprise was the License Board's decision Tuesday to grant a common victualler license to proposed Chinese restaurant Beijing Express despite concerns by business abutters that downtown Quincy is nearly overrun with restaurants competing for the same diners' dollars and parking spots.

Business abutters Tasos Kapsakis, owner of Taso's and Diana White opposed the license because of parking.

Licensing Board Chairman and City Clerk

Joseph Shea read a letter to the board in opposition of the proposal from the owners of the city's 11 other Chinese restaurants, who felt there was not enough business at their restaurants to support further economic competition.

"I think it is a bad move to...increase the situation of the parking there...and to increase the problems that we have up in that area," said Kapsakis.

Ron Zooleck, President of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and Charles D'Aprix, Executive Director of Quincy 2000, spoke in favor of granting the license.

"This is a business zoned area and it would be hard-pressed to put any business in there that won't cause parking problems," said Zooleck.

"I want business to have parking problems because that shows we're generating business. Free enterprise and competition decides who stays in business and who doesn't. They (the Tso family, proprietors of the proposed Beijing Express) are the one's taking the chance. If they fail, there won't be any traffic to worry about," Zooleck said.

D'Aprix wholeheartedly agreed with Zooleck.

"I believe a restaurant would generate more business than say a hair or beauty salon or a clothing store," said D'Aprix.

New Police Weapons Seen Effective Deterrent

Summer Crime Crackdown Planned

By MICHAEL WHALEN

With a number of recent additions to the Quincy Police Department, the city is preparing for a newly-revitalized crackdown on crime this summer.

Mayor James Sheets and Police Chief Francis Mullen both said Tuesday that the department will recently-added weapons in its arsenal in a concerted effort to combat crime during the warm weather months.

Sheets said he is particularly pleased with the city's new K-9 Unit, which has been activated within the last month and consists of three dogs brought over from Germany.

"They'll be a deterrent, an effective weapon in fighting crime," said Sheets. "They will help us to get a handle on crime before the summer comes."

"There has recently been an increase in violent crime across the state, and summers are always bad. We're going to make sure Quincy's police officers have all the tools necessary to combat crime."

Sheets noted that this will be the first summer that the police department will have had so many weapons at its disposal. Besides the K-9 Unit, the department will soon be doubling its motorcycle strength with the addition of five new motorcycles and also has two mountain bicycles it recently acquired.

Mullen said these new weapons, combined with the department's various special units such as its Drug Unit, Special Operations Unit and others, will almost certainly have an effect on crime this summer.

"It should make a difference," said the chief. "The dogs, the motorcycles and the bikes will give us both greater flexibility and visibility. By visibility I mean that they're seen, and when people see them, it's meaningful."

Weld Discusses Environmental Issues With Local Officials

Gov. William Weld was scheduled to be in Quincy yesterday (Wednesday) to discuss a number of environmental issues with local officials.

Mayor James Sheets said as The Sun went to press Tuesday that Weld's appearance in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall would be the first time the governor has met with environmental groups outside of Boston. Weld meets monthly at the State House with such groups, as well as state Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Cox, according to Sheets. Cox was also scheduled to attend yesterday's meeting, he said.

Sheets said Weld would be making a presentation of some kind to the city recognizing Quincy's Cleaner, Greener campaign. The beautification program is currently in its fifth year.

A representative from the Seaside Environmental Alliance, a coalition of Squantum residents, was also scheduled to ask for Weld's support in Moon Island gun range situation, Sheets said. Controversy over the City of Boston's plans to expand a gun range on the island began last September, and among residents' concerns is that work at the site has caused environmental damage there.

Moon Island is owned by Boston but falls with Quincy city limits in Squantum.

Sheets said he might discuss plans for a commuter rail station in Quincy with the governor. He added, however, that such a discussion would depend on the results of a meeting on the topic Tuesday in Boston. The mayor said Bernice Mader, his administrative assistant, was scheduled to meet with state, MBTA and environmental officials to determine if an environmental impact review would be necessary for the project.

The mayor said depending on what he learned from Mader, he would possibly touch upon the commuter rail plan and might mention the possibility of state funding for the project. In general, however, Sheets said he had no plans to ask the governor for any funding, adding that he is already grateful enough for Weld's and other state officials' pledged support of the proposed $5.9 million Quincy Center Concourse project which would involve building a connecting east-west roadway between Burgin Parkway and Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

Weld said he would support the concourse project during one of his three earlier visits to Quincy this year.

Nixon Memorial Service At First Parish Church

A memorial service for the late President Richard M. Nixon was scheduled to be held yesterday (Wednesday) at 5 p.m. in United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, pastor of the church, was scheduled to conduct the service. Mayor James Sheets was also invited to speak at the event.

"We kind of decided to do it at the last minute," said Rev. Bennett.

141 Quincy Names On Unclaimed Money List

A total of 141 names from Quincy is on a list of individuals and organizations who have money waiting for them under the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' abandoned property law.

The list was compiled by the State Treasury, according to State Treasurer Joseph Malone.

The list was published in the form of a free-standing insert in the March 20 Boston Sunday Herald and March 27 Boston Sunday Globe. It is also appearing in daily and weekly newspapers throughout the state during the weeks of April 18 and April 25.

The Quincy Sun is running the list of 141 names from Quincy this week.

"This year over $70 million has been turned over to my office as unclaimed property," said Malone. "I urge every citizen to check the abandoned property listing we publish because we are eager to return all of this money to its rightful owners."

Under Massachusetts' abandoned property law, accounts which have been inactive for more than three years are declared abandoned and turned over to the State Treasury for safekeeping. Unclaimed property consists of any financial asset that has not had any owner-generated activity for an extended period of time.

This includes: savings accounts, checking accounts, unpaid wages or commissions, stocks, underlying shares, uncashed dividends, customers deposits or overpayments, certificates of deposit, credit balances, refunds, money orders, paid-up life insurance policies and uncashed benefit checks.

In accordance with Massachusetts' Unclaimed Property Act, property becomes "Unclaimed" when the owner does not respond to attempts by the holder of the asset for a three-year period, 15 years in the case of travelers checks.

Under the law, the "holders" (banks, insurance companies, businesses, etc.) must make a determined effort to locate the true owner. If they are unsuccessful, they are to report the names and last known address of the owners to the State Treasury. The money is then deposited in the General Fund.

Owners can always claim their financial assets and there is no time limit on claiming the money. Owners and their heirs need not pay a finder's fee to anyone to claim what is rightfully theirs. All funds accrue interest until claimed.

Anyone who sees his or her name on the unclaimed property published list may call Malone's office at 367-0400, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., or write to: State Treasury, Unclaimed Property Division, One Ashburton Place-12th Floor, Boston, MA 02108.

When writing or calling, respondents should give the name as it appears on the list, plus current address, address three years ago, social security number, and daytime telephone number.

Area police officers, officials and other community leaders will be honored at the Quincy District Court's annual Law Day ceremonies Tuesday, May 3 at 9 a.m.

Six police officers, including two from Quincy, will receive the Robert P. Dana Award for outstanding police service above and beyond the call of duty. The award will be presented by Norfolk County District Atty. William Delahunt.

Receiving the Dana award will be Quincy Police Officers John Dougan and Michael Miller, Braintree Police Officer Robert Ciolek, Troopers James Gilmore and Richard White of the Milton State Police and Trooper Brian Garratt of the Norwell State Police.

On Jan. 9, Officers Dougan and Miller apprehended two suspects in connection with a home break-in during which the occupants of the home were bound against their will. After responding to a panic alarm at 68 Rawson Rd., the two officers found the occupants bound by duct tape that two Asian males with handguns had used after forcing their way into the home.

Seeing the officers, the two suspects jumped through a side window and attempted to escape on foot. The two officers pursued through several backyards before catching the first suspect, and Officer Dougan arrested the second suspect two hours later when he found him walking on Quincy Shore Drive near Williams Street.

Police Chief Francis Mullen commended the two officers after the incident and nominated them for the Dana award for their heroic actions. He also plans to award each with one day off without loss of pay.

The James M. McIntyre Memorial Award for outstanding service in law and government will be presented Esther Sanger, executive director of the Quincy Crisis Center.

The Alfred P. Maloney Award, given by the Quincy Bar Association's outstanding attorney and man of the year, will be presented to George H. McDermott.

The Jason Feldman Award for outstanding citizen will be presented to 10 individuals for their volunteer work at Quincy District Court. They are: John Barocas, Gloria Bates, Mary Fordham, Camille Horkun, Elizabeth Ledoux, Edward Loomis, Carol MacPherson, Paula Mucci, Mary O'Connell and Barney Ross.

Quincy District Court will receive a special certification for proficiency and excellent from Donald Cochran, commissioner of probation for Massachusetts.

The outstanding program award will be presented to Psychometrics Corp. of Cambridge, which determines drug use through the analysis of human hair. The award will be accepted by Raymond Kubacki, president of the company.

The Honorable Judge Charles E. Black, the court's presiding justice, will bring greetings from the court and introduce the guest speaker, Judge Mel L. Greenberg, associate justice of the Massachusetts Appeals Court.

Winners of the Dennis F. Ryan Essay Contest, named for the distinguished district court magistrate, will be announced. Local high school students participated in the contest.

Robert Bloom, first assistant clerk magistrate, will be master of ceremonies.

Atty. Gerald Kirby, president of the Quincy Bar Association, will bring greetings on behalf of the association and file the Law Day motion.

"Please help me return $70 million to the people of Massachusetts."

AVOID BACK PROBLEMS WHILE CATCHING SPRING FEVER

It appears that the worst of the long cold winter is behind us as the sleds, shovels and ice skates have been replaced by bicycles, rakes and baseball bats. The longer, warmer days not only signal a time of renewal for the plants and animals of our environment, but springtime also beckons each of us to get off the couch, put down the TV slider, and get outside and do something. Whether it be exercise, recreation or working around the house, there are many examples of springtime activities which can be harmful to your spine if you are not careful. Specific activities which can be troublesome include swinging a golf club or baseball bat, turning over the garden, raking and clearing up the yard, and lifting fallen tree limbs, bags of manure, limestone or peat moss.

It would be a good idea for each of us, especially those folks who have been relatively inactive during the winter months to take a few moments to stretch and loosen up our backs before engaging in stressful physical activity.

After warming up, use common sense and start your activity slowly; maintain good posture with your back straight and knees bent whenever possible; and avoid repetitive bending, twisting and lifting. Remember that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, as you enjoy the spring of 1994.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehning, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

City To Honor Bronze Medalist

'Karen Cashman Day' Friday At North Quincy High

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy will roll out the red carpet for Olympic Bronze Medalist and hometown hero Karen Cashman with a special public recognition and awards ceremony Friday at the Olympian's alma mater, North Quincy High School.

The program will begin at 9:15 a.m. in the North Quincy High gymnasium and conclude at approximately 10:45 a.m. The event will be carried live on Quincy Community Television Channel 3.

The program will commence with Mayor James Sheets proclaiming Friday as "Karen Cashman Day" in Quincy. The ceremony will also feature several other presentations from guest speakers and local officials. Among the guests scheduled to appear are North Quincy High School alumni Al "The Original Yakoo" Yacubian and students from the NQHS Pride Committee.

Cashman, a 1989 honors graduate of NQHS, will address the students and guests as well as provide insight to her experiences as a U.S. Olympian and bronze medalist. She led the U.S. women's short-track speedskating relay to a third place finish in Lillehammer, Norway in February.

Her appearance at North Quincy High will culminate the school's annual Pride Week festivities.

Students from North Quincy High School will be a main part of the Cashman ceremony. Four students will emcee the program and four other soloists will sing appropriate songs during the ceremony.

Sharing the emcee duties will be four chairpersons of the school's Pride Committee. They are: Winnie Fong, Christine Herman, Martin Shields and Wendy Sweetser.

The musical portion of the program will start with sophomore Carolyn Rolfe leading the gathering in the singing of the National Anthem. The brother-and-sister duet of Mateo and Amalla Solano will sing "Once Upon a Dream" and Lauren Rodriguez will sing "Everything's Coming Up Roses."

In addition, the school band will perform its own rendition of the Olympic fanfare song as well as the school song.

The NQHS gymnasium will be decorated with ceremonial red, white and blue bunting. American and Olympic flags will be displayed prominently, providing a patriotic backdrop to the special day.

Following the program at North Quincy High School, Sheets will host a luncheon for Cashman, her family and invited guests at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. Other presentations from local, state and county officials and other guests are planned during the luncheon.

Between the recognition ceremony and luncheon, the mayor's office and Cashman Day committee has arranged a trolley tour of Quincy's historic sites for the Cashman family.

The committee is chaired by Recreation Director Barry Welch.

Other members include Tom Koch, executive secretary to Mayor Sheets; North Quincy High Assistant Principal Eileen Feeney; NQHS Dean of Students Ken McPhee; Robert Bosworth, editor of The Quincy Sun; Bette Campbell, Quincy Continental Cablevision; Dr. Alan Yacubian; city Purchasing Agent Michael McFarland; Geoffrey Hennessey, Quincy Track Club director who formerly coached Cashman; Patti Meyers of The Patriot Ledger; and members of North Pride Committee including seniors Wendy Sweetser, Winnie Fong, Darrell Ernest, Martin Shields and Christine Herman.

Friday's event at North Quincy High School is the first public ceremony in Cashman's honor planned by the city. The bronze medalist will march in Quincy's annual Flag Day Parade Tuesday, June 14 as the grand marshal. The parade is sponsored by the Quincy Partnership and the city.

As a youngster, Cashman marched in the Flag Day Parade then sponsored by the Quincy Koch Club.

'GET UP AND GO' clothes arranger is the creation of Lauren Muller at the Atherton Rough School's recent Invention Convention. Students designed and made their own inventions where were displayed.

Adams Academy Named National Historical Landmark

The Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy has been named a national historical landmark.

The U.S. Department of Interior bestowed the honor on the 122-year-old building last week. The academy, which was set up by John Adams, is currently the home of the Quincy Historical Society.

The building is the fourth site in Quincy to be recognized as a national historic landmark. The others are United First Parish Church, Thomas Crane Public Library, and the birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, second and sixth presidents of the United States.

Landmark status certifies that the academy is of national significance, but does not provide regular funding and perpetual caretaking offered National Sites.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, said the designation came after an application process that took more than a year. To be designated a national historical landmark, the site has to have national significance, which the academy has with its architecture and connections with the Adams family, she said.

Built in 1872 by William Robert Ware and Henry Van Brunt, the academy's high Victorian-Gothic building has remained virtually unchanged. In 1822, John Adams had willed the land and set up a fund for a school to be built on the site of the birthplace of John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The academy operated as a private prep school for boys from 1872 to 1907. From then until 1972, when the building was leased to the historical society, the Adams Temple and School Fund maintained and preserved it.

Mader noted that the building's architecture has remained in excellent condition, adding that landmark status will prevent future alterations that change the building's character.

Sheets and officials at the historical society said they were thrilled with the new designation. Sheets also credited Sen. Edward Kennedy in helping with the process.

In a press release, Kennedy said he was pleased to be of assistance.

"The designation of the Adams Academy is another in a series of steps being taken to encourage tourism and promote job creation in the Quincy area," Kennedy wrote.

A Man Ahead Of His Time

A long-time familiar—and controversial—figure was back in Quincy last week and didn't say what he could have.

George Yarrington could have said but didn't: "Well, I told you so."

What he did say, with a laugh, was: "I was Public Enemy No. 1 back then."

Back then was 1953 to 1968 when he was the outspoken executive director of an active Quincy Taxpayers Association and was taking on and catching flak from some of the pillars and leaders of the community.

He had ideas they weren't buying and went head-to-head with them. No shrinking violet, he vociferously stood his ground, earning from his critics, the nickname "George Yappington."

Yarrington's problem was that he was a quarter century ahead of his time. As it turned out, he proved to have the foresight, and his critics, the hindsight.

Yarrington, for example, as early as 1955 was pushing for the extension of the then MTA into Quincy. Which took a little courage because the MTA was a dirty word in Quincy back then.

Yarrington, who was named chairman of the Old Colony Area Transportation Commission by Gov. Foster Furcolo, proposed that the rapid transit line be extended not only to Quincy and Braintree, but to Hingham and Greenbush with an off-shoot to Brockton.

He ran into strong opposition from the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, the Patriot Ledger, City Hall and some other community leaders.

Yarrington recalls a Page One editorial in the Ledger headlined: "Don't Let George Do It."

They didn't let him. But it was inevitable that rapid transit was coming. And trains were crossing the Neponset River into Quincy in 1971. Many of those who has fought Yarrington decided rapid transit was a good idea after all.

When Routes 3 and 128 were being linked in Braintree when the South Shore Plaza was being built, Yarrington favored a link to downtown Quincy.

Quincy merchants and others fought that one, too. It would make it too easy for shoppers to get to Braintree from Quincy. By the 1980's, many of those same opponents hailed the opening of the Burgin Parkway which links Routes 3 and 128 to downtown Quincy.

Yarrington also supported the construction of a parking garage in the Ross Parkway. No way, the merchants on the west side of Hancock St. thundered. Why, a garage would spoil the appearance of their rear door entrances. They fought the garage and kept it from being built.

But in 1972, some of those same opponents were there for the grand opening of a parking garage in the very same spot in the Ross Parkway. A great idea, they said. One of them got to think of it as his garage.

Yarrington and his wife, Katherine, who now live in Belleville, Ill. were back in Quincy celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary and visiting long-time friends, William and Eleanor Otina of Hillsboro St.

An anniversary Mass was celebrated for them by Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor, at St. Joseph's Church.

Yarrington is still a rabid rapid transit advocate. He is on the board of directors of the Citizens For Modern Transit in east St. Louis and helped establish the first rapid transit line there last July. He is now involved in the planning for an extension of that 18-mile line.

The Yarrington's return to Quincy for a visit about every two years.

While here they usually take a trip to Boston—on the T, of course.

And you really can't blame him for smiling as they cross over the Neponset River.

OVERWEIGHT TEENS MAY PAY LATER

It is no fun being a fat kid, but evidence is growing that the heaviest toll of early obesity may be paid later in life. A study of more than 500 Boston-area residents, followed for an average of 55 years each, found that men who had been 20 pounds or more overweight as teens had a double risk of premature death from heart disease and other ailments. Regardless whether the men slimmed down later in life, they also suffered greater odds of getting atherosclerosis, heart disease, and gout. Women subjects who had been overweight as girls were at greater risk of heart disease and gout, as well as arthritis and other mobility problems, although they did not experience premature death. P.S. Excess weight in adults is a serious risk factor for many illnesses, regardless of whether people were thin as youths.

You can help your kids lose weight by limiting television time and junk food consumption, by keeping bowls of carrot sticks and other healthy snacks on the kitchen table, and by making exercise and family affair. If you'd like more information, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN old postcard view of the Squantum Inn which opened in 1898 just off Shoreham St. near the entrance to Squantum Park. In later years it was known as the Wan-eta and in 1929 it became the transmitting location for radio

Quincy's Yesterdays

Striking Granite Cutters Leave City Seeking Jobs

A strike of 350 granite cutters, laborers and truck drivers entered its fifth week and a number of striking workers were preparing to leave the city in search of jobs in other stone centers such as Westerly, R.I., and Mt. Waldo, Maine.

"These men who are going out to other places to work will appreciate all the more the vast sums of money that Quincy manufacturers have spent on improving conditions in their plants," said Edward D. Marnock, secretary of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association.

"We are so far advanced over other centers that these men will find it difficult to work under conditions they will see in other places."

The granite workers were striking for a 35-hour work week. The manufacturers had offered them an eight-hour day at $13 a day for the first six months and a seven-hour day at $12.50 a day for the last six months.

SNUG HARBOR SNAG

Purchase by the city of the Snug Harbor Sailors' Home in Germantown struck a snag when Leon Little, chairman of the home's trustees, set a price of $160,000 for the property, about $45,000 higher than the city's estimate of its value.

Bothered By Negative Remarks About Quincy

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I would like to share a problem that I have with the readers of The Quincy Sun.

I am a Quincy native and have lived in Quincy most of my life. The problem is that when I travel to other parts of Boston such as Cambridge, Newton, Brookline, etc., and I tell people that I am from Quincy, they invariably make very negative remarks about the fact that I am from Quincy.

This bothers me a lot and I don't know why this happens. Why do people never have anything nice to say about Quincy? When I tell people that I am from Quincy, they generally say, "It must have taken you a very long time to get here," and I say, "Not really," because I think Quincy is a very convenient place to live. People practically offer me their condolences when I say I am from Quincy and they seem to do their best to exclude me because I come from Quincy. Naturally, this doesn't make me feel very welcome.

The other day, a person from Malden shared with me that he hates Quincy and the South Shore mostly because of the Southeast Expressway. How can someone hate a whole city or a whole region? Why do people act this way? What's wrong with Quincy? Perhaps some of your readers could come up with ideas as to what I can do to respond to and to counteract such negative attitudes. Thank you very much.

American Cancer Society 'Jail & Bail' May 11-13

The American Cancer Society will hold its annual "Jail & Bail" fundraiser May 11-13.

The money raised supports American Cancer Society local services to cancer patients and funds educational programs and research projects. As part of the event, local business people are "arrested" and required to call friends and business associates to raise their "bail."

Quincy Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley, co-chairman of the society's South Shore effort, said the event always generates a lot of interest.

"We've had a wonderful response in the past and this event allows the business community to have fun while helping to fund such important work," he said.

There are two types of arrests: prearranged, where participants volunteer to be picked up; and surprise arrests, where a friend or associate requests a "Keystone Kop" to serve a warrant and haul the prisoner off to jail. After a surprise arrest, a celebrity judge sets bail and the arrestee makes calls to plea for bail money.

Participants are jailed for an hour and returned home or to work. Keystone Kops make arrests during business hours and detainees will be taken to Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The American Cancer Society's South Shore Unit serves Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Scituate, and Weymouth.

Quincy's Ben Bergman Recalls Horror Of 5 Nazi Concentration Camps 'We Should Always Remember The Holocaust'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. How old were you when you were taken to your first Nazi camp?

A. I was 15 years old.

Q. And what camps were you in?

A. The first camp was in my hometown, Gorlice, which was a sawmill (town); we built barracks for the German armies. It was a forced labor camp. From there, we were moved to another sawmill, Muszyna, to another camp to do the same work. From Muszyna, we were moved to Mielec, which was an airplane factory where I worked on Heinkel German planes.

From there, we went to Wieliczka, which was a type of go-through camp. They held us there for about a week or two, then from there they shipped us to Flossenburg, which was a concentration camp. We traveled by railroad in box cars, 120 people to one box car. Conditions were terrible; people were dying with no water, no food, it was very hot. It was in the summer; I believe it was in August. We were actually fighting for, or made, a system that everybody would stand near the window to get some fresh air.

You had to urinate and everything in the boxcar with 120 people; conditions were absolutely deplorable.

Q. How did the guards treat the people? Were they all awful, or were some better than others?

A. They had one thing in mind: to annihilate the Jewish people. And they almost succeeded: thank God they didn't. They were beating (prisoners); there were punishments, there was killing. Anything you did wrong, they considered it a sabotage. You were whipped, lashed, and things like that.

Q. Is there one incident that stands out in your mind above all others?

A. One of the worst was in Mielec; I worked in a plane factory, and I worked a night shift. One night I was working on wings, and when one wing was finished, we removed the wing and one of the machines broke. And I was accused of sabotage, and they beat me. They removed my drawers (pants), tied me to a chair with my hands behind my back, and I got 25 lashes to tell them who told me to sabotage, and I said it was no sabotage.

I fainted, and they put a bucket of water on my head, and I came to and kept insisting, which was the truth, that I did not do sabotage, that the machine was broken by the day shift and when I removed the wing the machine broke.

Q. Were any of your family members with you in the camps?

A. I was with my father from the first day; in camp together, we worked together. We did not live on the same barracks. In the first few camps we lived together, but in the last camp, we lived separately. But I was with my father the whole time until we started the Death March on April 1, 1945. We marched from April 1 to April 23. And I lost my father a couple of days before the liberation, about April 21 or 22.

Q. He just died, or was he killed?

A. During the march, we had nothing to eat, nothing to drink; we just walked through the woods and they kept shooting and killing people. And he just couldn't make it. He was tired out, and he just couldn't make it.

Q. What about your mother, and the rest of your family?

A. In Gorlice, when they removed all Jews from the town, about 100 people including my father and myself were sent to the work camp. Quite a few thousands of others, including my mother, brother and sister were taken straight to an annihilation camp in Belzec where they died in a gas chamber.

Q. Did you know from the beginning that's where they were going, and that's what would happen?

A. Yes, because we definitely knew there was an annihilation camp there. And when we were separated, it was terrible. We were all screaming and crying; it was a terrible day. One of the most terrible in my life.

Q. How else did the guards mistreat the people in the

FULL NAME: Benjamin Bergman

AGE: 68

BACKGROUND: from 1940-45, was held in five Nazi camps during the days of the Holocaust

ADDRESS: Quincy; first came to the United States by boat in 1949, arriving in New York City; lived in Dorchester before coming to Quincy

OCCUPATION: meat cutter for 35 years near Market Square in Boston

EDUCATION: graduate of Boston Clerical High School

FAMILY: married to the former Cecily Cohen. They have two daughters, Elaine Bergman of California and Beverly Bergman of Weymouth

march?

A. In the Death March, they just kept shooting because the orders were given to the guards from all the concentration camps and forced labor camps there should be no witnesses or survivors from the camps. So they just kept shooting and shooting until the U.S. Army came and we were liberated on April 23, 1945.

Q. What was the liberation like? What were the feelings among the people?

A. At the time of the march, I had typhus, and there's certain things you do remember, there's certain things you don't due to the high fever. So when I got liberated, all I could see was that the German guards were running, and we saw tanks with a white star; I couldn't figure out what they were until they came and said they were Americans.

And from there on, it was just a blank until the Army took me and gave us some food to eat and drink. We were well taken care of; they spoke all kinds of languages, the liberating soldiers, the commandos. They were very nice, and they took us in a truck away from there because the fighting was still going on between the Germans and the American Army.

Q. It must have been overwhelming, finally being free after all that time.

A. Well, from there on I was very, very ill, and some things are practically a blank, but I do remember the happy day that we were liberated. The Army went on, and I went into a German home, and I asked for clothes because I was absolutely infested with lice.

Q. How did you end up at a German home? Did those people offer to help you, or did the Allies force them to?

A. They pretty much had to do it because the U.S. Army made them.

Q. Since coming to the United States, have you maintained contact with any of the other survivors you knew from the camps?

A. Oh, yes. I have lots of friends, people from my own hometown, plus, you know, you meet people on the same boat, in the same condition, and you have in lot in common, without families, so we needed each other. We stuck together as much as we could.

Q. Esther Gens, a Holocaust survivor who recently spoke at The Woodward School, said that a Brookline-based group known as Facing History and Ourselves helped her to deal with her memories. After you came to the States, how did you deal with your own pain? Did you approach any of the groups like that?

A. Not that particular group, but we did, we had groups in different temples and different things, we had speeches and we'd commemorate at memorial services and we went to different places so we could be together, to reminisce, (and) pray for departed families and friends. And we tried to stick together 'til I got married, then I had my own family, my wife and two children.

Q. Yom Hashoah, the Hebrew Day of Remembrance for the Holocaust, was recently observed (April 7). How do you commemorate that day personally?

A. Well, we do attend the services, we say a prayer for the departed. We listen to the speeches to reminisce something we shouldn't forget. We should always remember it; otherwise we would be defeating our own purpose and the purpose of our friends and family who died.

Q. April is also Holocaust Month, isn't it?

A. That is correct. It's being celebrated all over the world; it's being celebrated in Israel and in this country by survivors.

Q. Elie Wiesel, a professor at Boston University, has written many works about his memories of the Holocaust. Have you ever read any of them?

A. I'm familiar with them; I did do some reading, but not too much. He's quite an intellectual, and I don't consider myself to be in his class. He's a very unique individual.

Q. Did you see "Schindler's List"?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you think of it?

A. Well, to be frank with you, I expected a Hollywood-style (version of the story), being made in Hollywood, but it just so happened that the Schindler's list took place in the city of Krakow, which was not far from my hometown of Gorlice, and to be very frank with you, it was too close to home. It was made in such detail that it really brought back some very tough memories.

Q. So you thought it was accurate, and powerful.

A. Absolutely fantastic. Very, very accurate; I never expected it to be that accurate, I really didn't. Words cannot describe how close in detail it is to how it really happened when they were throwing the people out of their homes and shooting and killing and everything. It was unbelievable, too close to home.

Q. Six million died in the Holocaust, yet there were many others who survived. In a sense, some might think it was harder on the survivors because they had to live all those years with their memories. Do you think that's fair to say?

A. Those thoughts went through my mind many a time. (Pause). If I deserved to survive, while they all died, then I guess it was meant to be that way, that those that survived should maintain the remembrance of our families and friends and relatives that died in the Holocaust. I guess that was God's will.

New Restaurant Planned At Old Fox & Hounds Site

By LISA CONNELL
A new restaurant is planned at what once was the Fox and Hounds Restaurant, a long-time Quincy dining landmark.

A request for a common victualler license by the Common House Restaurant, at 125 Sea St., Merrymount, was continued by the License Board Tuesday.

The famed harmony team of Hum 'n Strum performed for many years at the old Fox and Hounds Restaurant which later became Dutton's Restaurant.

Paul Flaherty of Quincy and Susan Manning of South Boston, equally joint partners of The Custom House Restaurant, have secured a 20-year lease from landlord Franklin Simon of Simon Properties to run a restaurant in the white building on Sea St. that has been a city landmark for more than 50 years.

"The building is structurally sound but it needs a lot of work," said Building Inspector and Licensing Board Vice Chairman Matthias Mulvey.

"We are returning it to the way it once was," said Flaherty. "It will be like a shipwreck that's been salvaged."

On that note, Flaherty and Manning plan to keep the building exterior white but add a new colored trim. The roof has recently been re-shingled, according to Flaherty.

Other structural renovations include changing the slope of the roof, creating two separate entrances for patrons and altering the size of the front windows.

Both partners estimate they will invest close to $500,000 once renovations planned for the building are completed. The building has not been used for 10 years.

Flaherty and Manning plan a moderately priced, family-style restaurant. There are three floors in the building and the main dining room area, excluding rest rooms, occupies 4600 square feet.

Both Flaherty and Manning, in their mid-30's, have extensive, hands-on restaurant operation and management experience. Prior work experience for both includes progressively responsible positions at The Pour House in Boston and the Boston Sail Loft Cafe and Bar in Cambridge and Boston.

Late summer or early fall is the approximate opening date of the 200-seat restaurant. Flaherty and Manning plan to hire about 80 employees.

Plans to renovate the site have met with great approval from area abutters, including Merrymount Association President Kenneth Slattery of 37 Overlook Rd., Quincy.

"Both Paul and Susan have bent over backwards to work with us and are concerned with our concerns of the lounge area, and we support this. They will be good neighbors, I feel strongly on that," said Slattery.

Flaherty and Manning, who thought of renovating the building last October, invited and encouraged feedback from the neighbors before they drew up building plans.

This was accomplished, according to Flaherty, simply by being visible and approachable while working on the outside of the wooden building.

People would just naturally drift over and start asking questions about what we were doing, Flaherty said.

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson, also supports the proposed restaurant, according to City Clerk and Licensing Board Chairman Joseph Shea.

Attorney John McGlone, counsel for Flaherty and Manning, said the Zoning Board of Appeals, at their Tuesday evening meeting, will review the only minor glitch in the restaurant's plan, the issue of water drainage. This is not expected to be an obstacle, however, as Flaherty and Manning have worked with Mulvey and other city boards, including the Conservation Commission, to address and correct the problem.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

GREGG T. RENNIE, PERSONAL FINANCIAL PLANNER

UDS

An American Express Company

FOCUS ON LONG-TERM GOALS, USE A DISCIPLINED APPROACH TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF MARKET MOVES

Many investors feel a bit nervous following recent volatility in financial markets. Bonds have lost value in share prices because of rising interest rates, and the stock market has taken on an roller coaster ride because of inflation fears.

Some analysts predict that this "correction" in prices is not just over and that we may see the market rise in a short period. Other analysts say that the economic indicators are strong, and, although the market may be choppy this year, the trend will be a continuation of the upward movement.

What are the issues in that none of the equities can predict exactly when any short-term problems will occur or how far the price swings will go.

No matter what direction the market takes, some of you may be wondering if it is time to sell, hold, or buy. The answer is that the market is a better place to put your money. Certainly, watching your investment values fall is uncomfortable or even downright scary, but it would be a mistake to pull out or avoid financial markets now.

The one-day crash of the stock market in October of 1987, for example, caused many portfolio investors to bail out of their positions no matter what the cost. A look at the numbers, however, shows that holding the positions, rather than dropping out of the market for a year, would have resulted in a much better profit simply because the Dow rose and continued to rise.

The markets these days are simply being gripped, with larger fluctuations than normal, which they usually do. They go up, and they go down. When that happens, it is normal. It is the way the market works. It is the way the market works. It is the way the market works.

Focus on the long-term rather than the short term. Historically, the stock market has trended upward, although not straight up-and-down. Savvy investors, therefore, go against the tide. They are buying opportunistically where others might see trouble ahead.

Woodward School Celebrates 100th Anniversary

By BEVERLY ZIMMERMAN

The Woodward School recently heralded its 100th birthday with a festive round of activities, climaxing in a Centennial Gala Dinner in the Great Hall at Faneuil Hall in Boston.

Opening the series of scheduled events was the April 15 debut of an exhibit at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., which effectively showcased the history of the all-girls' school. The exhibit was a year-long project, designed and executed by Headmaster Robert Johnston, and members of his Centennial class. It is scheduled to be on display at the Society through April 30.

A full day of educational and fun-filled student-centered activities also took place. The students were escorted by grade level to view the exhibit at the Society, where they perused yearbooks, pictures, and costumes of yesteryear's alumnae.

The girls then returned to the school site, where they placed a time line around the school and shared their choices for a time capsule, including letters, class pictures, school passes, and audiocassette tapes.

Next, the results of the Centennial Student Poet Laureate Competition were announced and the poets read their poems aloud. Winners were Molly McCormack of the Upper School, a student of English teacher Janet Poole and Amanda Daly of the Lower School, a student of English teacher Leslie Taylor. Prizes included award plaques, cash awards of $75 to each student, and the promise of future publication.

The day was capped by field activities including games and picture-taking at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater and Pageant Field.

On Saturday, April 16, groundbreaking ceremonies for the new Centennial Commons had to be transferred to the brick lobby of the school due to a steady spring downpour. But the rain did not dampen the enthusiasm of well over 150 people who gathered to witness the unveiling of Greg Treleven's sculpture "A Young Woodward Scholar," which will grace Centennial Commons.

Following a reception in the newly-renovated Greenleaf Room, the Alumnae Association held a Centennial Reunion Brunch. Among the program events were the reading aloud of the Centennial poems by the student poet laureates and musical selections performed by graduating seniors under the direction of Allen Thomas, the school's music director.

Roberta Colman, president of the Alumnae Association Board and a member of the Class of 1970, presented a roll call of classes, including individual members of the Class of 1994, as well as recognition certificates to outstanding graduates. Alumnae from classes ranging from 1917 to 1994 attended the luncheon, many celebrating special reunion years.

Women traveled from distant and nearby states, including California and Maine. The majority in attendance were Quincy-born and either current Quincy residents or alumnae with family living

The Centennial Gala Dinner at Faneuil Hall, sponsored by The Woodward School Foundation, was attended by over 150 people, including Mayor James Sheets, a trustee of the school who offered greetings from the city. Johnston was keynote speaker.

Addresses were also made by Woodward Foundation President Harold Fitzgerald and Centennial Gala Committee Co-Chairpersons Linda Fitzgerald and John McDonald Jr. Coordinator of the event was Barbara Segadelli, director of development and admissions and clerk of the foundation.

Music for the formal affair was provided by the ailing orchestra RSVP. Guests danced until midnight, an elegant end to an extraordinary weekend.

City Plans Summer Crime Crackdown

Mullen said the K-9 unit has already been "very effective" in solving several armed robbery and domestic violence cases. And the bicycles have also been helpful, most notably in the recent case of a high-speed pursuit when Officer Richard Praetsch apprehended two suspects in a stolen car after the automobile's tire blew out, the chief said.

"These bicycles are amazing, and the amount of distance they can cover is also amazing," he said. "More than anyone could ever imagine."

While Mullen said he feels his department generally does a "good job" fighting crime, he said he will continue to work with Sheets' office "to cover all bases." He added that, with the addition of the new crime deterrents, "in terms of general crime statistics, I think we're going to see a decrease."

Funding for the new crime-fighting tools has come from a variety of sources. Sheets said the motorcycles were paid for through a recent bond issue and the K-9 Unit through a special appropriation from the city's free cash account. Mullen said the two bicycles were donated by a local businessman, Paul Sullivan of Sullivan Plumbing Supply in South Quincy.

Mullen said the bicycles cost $1,000, the dogs about $18,000, and the 10 motorcycles—five of which have already been acquired by the police department—approximately $150,000.

The chief said Officers Richard Churchill, Thomas Connors and David Coletti are each living with and training one of the three K-9 Unit dogs. Officers Praetsch and Scott Smith have been assigned to the mountain bicycles, and other officers are undergoing specialized training for the new motorcycles, he said.

The Quincy Police Department has a total of 189 officers including himself, Mullen said.

Another method of fighting crime, mounted police, will likely not be used in the near future, according to the chief. While there has been talk in recent months of purchasing horses for such a use, Mullen said such an expenditure "would not be cost effective at this time."

Mullen added that he could not guess an approximate figure for the cost of acquiring horses because there are "several avenues you could go" in doing so.

Sheets said the decision whether to use mounted police is entirely up to the chief, but added that the city will support Mullen should he change his mind in the future.

"If he decides to use them, I'll make the (financial) resources available," said the mayor.

Houghs Neck Sea Wall Improvements Begin

Long-awaited improvements to the sea wall in Houghs Neck have begun.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the beginning of the sea wall project were held Monday.

The granite-block wall has failed in recent years to keep storm-driven bay waters from flooding homes in the Edgewater Drive area.

A number of residents were forced to leave their homes after seawater filled their basements, knocking out heat and utilities.

The sea wall improvement project will cost $412,300. Money for the project was appropriated by Mayor James Sheets and the City Council in a recent bond issue.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton said a 1,200-foot stretch of the wall from Bell to Darrow Streets will be raised an average of two feet with concrete blocks. The wall's remaining 1,200 feet will be raised with poured concrete, he said.

Colton noted that RDA Construction Corp. of Milton is expected to complete the project in July. He added that the Edgewater Drive work is the second phase of a three-part $1.2 million project that began last year with repairs to heavily damaged sea walls in the Merrymount and Adams Shore areas.

The final phase of the project involves improvements along Heron Beach, Post Island, Terne Road, and Baywater Drive.

'Thank You' Cookout At Pageant Field

'Cleaner, Greener' Cleanup May 7

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The city is gearing up for the 5th annual "Cleaner, Greener Quincy" cleanup will be held Saturday, May 7 beginning at 9 a.m.

Rain date is May 14 at 9 a.m.

Volunteers from community organizations, churches, local businesses and residents are invited to participate in the cleanup.

Volunteers will spread out over the city collecting litter and debris while sprucing up city parks, beaches, playgrounds, highways and marshes.

"We hope to have between 750 and 1500 people volunteering," said Mayor James Sheets. "Every spring we get out to do it (clean up), and that's important. I think that's why it's been so successful."

The mayor said the cleanup effort is a source of strength for the community and instills a sense of pride. "I always say, you have to cleanup before you fix up, and I appreciate what all the people (who have participated in the program) have done."

As a thank you to the cleanup participants, Sheets and other city officials will host a cookout at 1 p.m. at Pageant Field.

The city hopes to surpass the success of last year's cleanup when more than 4,000 tons of litter were collected from streets and beaches.

The first 1000 people who sign-up for the cleanup in advance or register on the day of the cleanup will receive a free "Cleaner, Greener" t-shirt. To register in advance, call the Department of Public Works at 376-1901.

North Downs Needham But Bows To Silver Lake

By DAVE SOUTHWICK
Leo Donovan's North Quincy High School baseball team had its winning streak snapped at one on Monday by dropping a 9-8 decision to Silver Lake.

North (1-5) tried again for its second win of the season Tuesday against Stoughton. Upcoming action has the Raiders travelling to Taunton today (Thursday) and returning home Monday to play Weymouth at Adams Field. First pitch is at 3:30 p.m.

North jumped out to a 2-0 lead against Silver Lake in the first inning beginning with back-to-back singles by Steve Koch and Jim Sapiaenza. After a Dan Duncan fly out to center, A.J. Carthas singled to load the bases.

Tim Zanaboni then belted a double to score Koch and Sapiaenza to give North the lead. Zanaboni went 2-3 to raise his team leading average to .500.

Silver Lake tied the score with single runs in the second and third innings and took a 4-2 lead with two runs in the fourth. The bottom half of the fourth inning was one of the most productive showings of the season for the Raiders as they pushed across four runs.

After back-to-back singles by Zanaboni and Sean Dolbear, Brian Oliver followed with another single, but a throwing error allowed Oliver to advance to second, scoring Zanaboni and Dolbear to tie the score at 4-4. After a Chris Hancock walk, he and Oliver then scored to give North Quincy the lead back at 6-4.

Silver Lake responded with one run in the fifth but North answered back with two more runs in their half of the fifth on a two-run double by Hancock to regain the lead, 8-5.

The Lakers refused to quit and roared back with four runs in the sixth inning for the final 9-8 score.

"We had an 8-5 lead and they got four in the sixth," said Donovan. "We walked a couple of guys and a punt that got thrown away cost us the game."

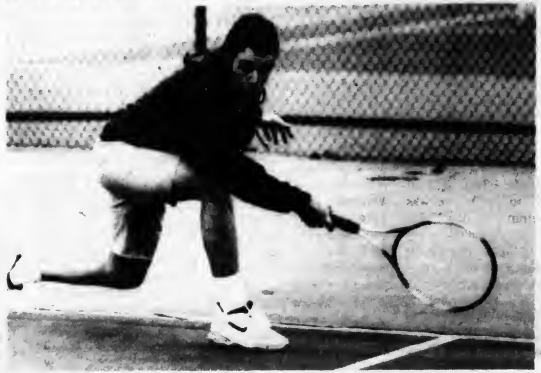

Carthas pitched five innings for North. Duncan finished up the last two innings.

North won their first game of the year, 5-3 over Needham, last Friday. Carthas went 2-3 in the game while scoring two runs and Hancock had two hits and a run scored.

Steve Manning pitching five strong innings for his first victory of the season.

VICTOR GADRE (left) and Kevin Chang compete in North Quincy's first doubles match against Silver Lake's Jeremy Covino and Peter Brown. The Lakers won the match and went on to win the meet, 5-0.

Also scoring in the championship game were T.J. Wilson, Dave Noonan and Shawn Manning.

The game ended in an 4-4 tie. A six minute overtime produced no

North Quincy Senior Runs 5:47.2 Mile Duggan Qualifies For State Track Competition

With a 5 minute, 47.2 second performance in the mile against Falmouth, senior Erin Duggan added her name to the list of North Quincy girls' track team members who have already qualified for state competition.

Duggan joined Jen Pineo, Aja Jackson and Phyllis Poon - all who gave qualifying performances in the season's first meet against Plymouth - on that list. These girls continued to look sharp despite losses to Falmouth and Barnstable.

"We continue to improve, we continue to do well," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "These teams (Plymouth, Falmouth, Barnstable) are just too strong. Their numbers and talent are tremendous."

After her initial qualifying run, Duggan went on to capture first-place finishes in the mile and 2-mile against Barnstable. Her time of 12:46.7 in the 2-mile was also within state qualifying time.

Pineo has dominated the shot put for the Red Raiders. The sophomore has finished first in all three meets this season; her best throw was 33'-5" against Falmouth and she has yet to miss the qualifying distance of 29'.

Pineo has also qualified for the states in the discus. She took first against Falmouth at 89'-2" and second against Barnstable with a throw of 86'-5".

Pineo's performances in the field events have been assisted by those of Wingsze Yuen in the shot put - second against Falmouth and third against Barnstable - and Lauren Rodriguez, who placed third in the discus in the earlier meet.

Another field event - the javelin - has also been a strong point for North Quincy. Heather Simmons grabbed the second spot against Falmouth then took the top position in the later meet. Erica Crawford finished in third in the Barnstable contest.

The other Red Raider state qualifiers, Poon and Jackson, also had outstanding weeks. Against Falmouth, Poon won the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 17.3 seconds, which tied the qualifying performance she gave against Plymouth. Poon was edged out of first place in the Barnstable meet but shaved .2 seconds off her previous time. Jackson tied her personal best with a second-place leap of 4'-10" in the high jump. She also finished third in that meet in the 200-meter race.

Poon has had to work hard to beat out teammate and fellow 100-meter hurdler Suk Ng, who placed second in the earlier meet. Ng also took the first spot in the 300 hurdles against Barnstable and third in that event versus Falmouth. She finished third in the long jump in the Barnstable meet.

North dominated Barnstable in the relays. The 4x100 team of Casey Ngo, Ng, Poon and Pineo won with a time of 56.56. The 4x400 group - Mel Gaziano, Diane McGunigle, Amalia Solano and Jackson - captured first with a 4:41.9 performance.

Gaziano has been sharp with second and third place runs in the 800 while McGunigle and Solano both finished third in the 400 against Falmouth and Barnstable, respectively. Laura Blaikie gave a second place, 13:19.3 performance in the 2-mile during the Falmouth meet.

With several impressive performances by his athletes, coach Hennessy is upbeat. "We're only a .500 dual meet club, but our strength is in the invitational meets as we have several outstanding individuals."

Squirt A's Capture Tournament

The Quincy Squirts A's, sponsored by South Boston Savings Bank, captured the title in the Southeastern Patriot Tournament, held in Taunton and Fall River over April vacation.

In the first game, Quincy defeated Hyde Park, 11-1.

Charlie Sorrento, Steve McGonagle, Dan Kennedy and Mark Giese scored two goals each. Paul Flynn, Mark Gibbons and Ryan Doyle netted single goals.

Two assists each were credited to Sorrento, Doyle and Giese. Frank Curreri, Dave Germain, Jim Cashins and Kennedy notched single assists.

Quincy went on to blank S.W.S., 3-0.

Curreri, Gibbons and Kennedy were the goal scorers. Assists were made by Germain and Kennedy. Scott Cawley recorded his first shutout as a Squirt A goalie.

The Quincy Squirts went on to trounce Cape Cod, 12-0.

Curreri led the team with a hat trick. Brian "Blue Chip" Stock, Andy Nestor and Gibbons racked up two goals apiece. Kennedy, Doyle and Cashins netted one goal each.

Nestor and Flynn were the leading playmakers with three assists each; followed by Curreri and Shane Kabilian with two. Notching single assists were Dom Papile, Cashins, Kennedy, Germain, Sorrento and Cawley.

Quincy blew past Hyde Park in the title game, 12-3.

Mark Giese led in the scoring department with four big goals. Nestor followed with two goals. Sorrento, Curreri, Germain, Blue Chip Stock, McGonagle and Kennedy netted one goal each.

Assists were recorded by Cashins (3), Germain (2), Flynn (2), Sorrento, McGonagle and Kennedy. Tom Gaeta was solid in this contest and throughout the tournament.

Quincy welcomed back their goalie, Matt Gregory, who did a great job in net as usual. Cawley finished the third period Who'd a think it!

Bigger than the '67 Sox, more powerful than the '72 Bruins - able to leap tall Pee Wee Wess in a single bound! After crawling through the Pee Wee House League regular season hockey schedule with a meager 7-16-2 record, dead last in the league, Skinner's Winners pulled off the unthinkable. They fought through back-to-back overtime wins against two of the top teams in the league to capture the Pee Wee title.

In the semifinal contest against Marina Bay Taxi, the team that finished in first place with an awesome 17-8 record, Graham McShane and Shawn Manning netted two goals each for the Winners to send the game into overtime knotted at four goals apiece.

The extra session provided the perfect opportunity for overtime warrior Bob Harvey to net his only goal of the game and send his squad into the final game, their toughest opponent now behind them.

Or so it seemed. It turned out that their title game contest against Neponset Valley Survey, the third place team in the Pee Wee House League, was every bit as tough as the previous game.

What Skinner's needed was a hero. They got several.

Harvey led the charge, lighting the lamp three times in the most important game of the season. Manning scored just one goal, but he made it count. His overtime tally proved to be the one that captured the championship for the poor little team that struggled all season.

Of course, you can't win a title without tremendous goaltending. Just ask Brian Sutter after his team has peppered Patrick Roy night after night. But has Roy ever had to stop a puck in an overtime shootout in the semifinal and final games?

Shaun Lynch has, and he did it successfully in two consecutive games as he backboned the Skinner's Winners Cinderella story.

GETTING ADJUSTED

The need for a valve adjustment can be detected from a loud ticking noise from the engine that increases with frequency as engine speed increases. Another indication is a ticking noise from the engine that fades as the engine heats up. Both of these symptoms may result from valves that are operating at clearances that are too wide. The noise that results from loose valves is the least of a car owner's worries. Loose valves in need of adjustment can experience damage to their faces due to the pounding they absorb in their respective seats. As a result, valves can become distorted, as well as be less able to seal properly. To avoid these problems, noisy valves should be adjusted soon after the noise is heard.

 HINT: Damage resulting from valves in need of adjustment is more likely to be suffered by engines that operate at high RPM.

For most of your cars maintenance needs including valve adjustments, rely on our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn from yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Waterfowl Ordinance Debate Continues

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The debate over whether a waterfowl ordinance banning the feeding of birds at Sailors Home Pond in Wollaston is necessary continues.

The City Council voted 7-0 last week to impose a $50 fine on anyone who feeds visiting ducks, geese or other waterfowl at the pond. Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro did not attend the meeting.

A permanent sign notifying people of the ordinance will soon be posted.

Supporters of the new law say it will help clean up the pond, where the water has turned a lime green color after being polluted by droppings from the birds and infested with vermin attracted by food left for the waterfowl.

Opponents, including members of the Quincy Citizens Association and Wollaston Park Association, have voiced opposition to the ordinance, saying the ban is unnecessary.

Dorothy Kelly, secretary of the Quincy Citizens Association, said she has contacted the City Council and asked them to overturn the ordinance so that a public hearing can be held.

She claimed she was told such a hearing would be held before the ordinance was passed, which never happened.

Kelly said the problems at the pond have been exaggerated.

"The ordinance is totally unnecessary," she said. "All this talk about the pond is an exaggeration and much ado about nothing. It's a public preserve, and there shouldn't be any fines."

Asked what course of action opponents of the law plan if the council chooses not to overturn the ordinance, Kelly said "I don't think we want to say right now."

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, who introduced the ordinance, said the new law has the support of neighbors abutting the pond and the majority of area residents. It also has the blessing of a consultant hired by the city to test the water at the site as well as the state Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of Environmental Protection and the Massachusetts Audubon Society, he said.

Phelan said no public hearing is required for the council to vote on a new ordinance and he does not know where Kelly received her information.

"I never told her that," he said. "I don't know who told her that."

Phelan said most of those opposed to the law do not live nearby the pond. He added that they have no case if they attempt to oppose the ordinance.

"We did everything by the law, and I'm perfectly comfortable with what we did," he said.

DeCristofaro Returns To City Council

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Looking strong and healthy, Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro rejoined his colleagues on the council for the first time in more than two months Monday night.

DeCristofaro, 70, spent several weeks in Quincy Hospital, South Shore Hospital in Weymouth and Braintree Hospital after suffering a heart attack March 1 and a stroke March 4.

DeCristofaro, who has recovered full use of his arms and legs, said he was initially very nervous after being stricken and urged Quincy residents to do everything they can to preserve their health.

"I was worried for awhile, and if I hadn't been in shape, I probably wouldn't be here," he said. "I was in shape, and this still happened to me. Please, if you care about your families, take care of yourselves. And especially, knock off the cigarettes."

DeCristofaro was given a standing ovation by his City Council colleagues and those in the audience, which included Mayor James Sheets, DeCristofaro's wife Betty and daughter Ruthie McInnis. The council also presented him with potted flowers.

Although he said last week he will be resuming some of his council duties, DeCristofaro has noted that his doctors have advised him not to resume a full schedule until he recuperates further. DeCristofaro was only released from Braintree Hospital last Thursday. DeCristofaro, who has been elected to the council for seven terms, said he received more than 3,000 cards of prayers and best wishes while hospitalized.

DeCristofaro only stayed at Monday night's meeting long enough to present a special City Council commendation to

During Upcoming Review Sessions No-Tax Budget May Still Face Council Cuts

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite a level-funded FY95 municipal budget proposed by Mayor James Sheets, the chairman of the City Council Finance Committee said it is possible the budget may undergo further trimming during the council's upcoming budget review sessions.

Sheets has proposed a budget of $133,652,802 for the new fiscal year, which begins July 1. Although 4 percent larger than the FY94 budget of $128,360,915, the proposed new budget calls for no new property taxes, which the mayor said has not happened since the early days of former Mayor Frank McCauley's administration in the 1980s.

However, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, the Finance Committee chairman, said the budget is still subject to the scrutiny of the City Council.

"There's still the possibility that it could be cut," said Fabrizio. "That's what the budget review process is all about. I'm not sure yet where we would make the cuts, but we're going to scrutinize everything as closely as possible."

Fabrizio said residents interested in voicing their opinions on the budget may attend a public hearing Monday, May 16 at 6:45 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall. He added that the council will begin budget review sessions Wednesday, May 18, although a schedule for the sessions was not available at press time.

The mayor's proposed budget also calls for a few additions to several city departments, most notably the parks and public works departments, a new pay scale for non-union employees, and the return of the Bookmobile to the city's public library department.

Sheets said the city can afford the increase in the budget because of various cost-cutting methods as well as an increase in state aid and additional anticipated revenues including $800,000 from the state Lottery, $500,000 in extra tax collections, $220,000 in state education reform funds and $216,000 in rent from Quincy College.

Breaking the budget down, Sheets said $49,310,663 or 36 percent constitutes fixed costs such as pensions, debt service and unemployment compensation. Non-fixed costs, which include such items as all departments, city dues, celebrations, student programs and others total $84,342,139 or 64 percent, he said.

Members of the City Council expressed satisfaction at the prospect

No Opposition For Mariano, Bellotti Morrissey, Tobin To Face Challengers

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

This fall's local state elections, which had been forecasted as a yawner, opened a few eyes Tuesday when two political newcomers filed papers to challenge two well-known Quincy incumbents.

Braintree Democrat Bernard L. Walsh of 38 Abbott St., will oppose incumbent Sen. Michael Morrissey in the primary election Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Walsh, a recently elected Braintree town meeting member, filed papers 30 minutes before the 5 p.m. deadline Tuesday at Quincy City Hall. He also filed at Braintree Town Hall.

Another political newcomer, Republican Steven

Williams of 17 Ryden St., Houghs Neck, will challenge Rep. Stephen Tobin in the final election Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Tobin, who represents the Second Norfolk District, is seeking his fourth two-year term. Williams, 24, will graduate next month from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

A third potential challenger, who had indicated he might run for either Morrissey's seat or Tobin's seat, decided against entering either campaign.

Charles Debrecezi of Adams St., Quincy, had taken papers out for state senator and representative, but did not file for either seat before the deadline Tuesday, said

City Clerk Joseph Shea. Two Quincy legislators will likely be re-elected with no opposition, barring any sticker or write-in campaigns. Rep. Ron Mariano and Rep. Michael Bellotti, each appear headed for third and second terms respectively.

Asked why the election did not generate more challengers, Shea replied, "I think it's because Quincy is primarily a one-party city (Democrat) and I think people are generally satisfied with the current senator and representatives."

Besides the two locally contested races, there are two contested races in Norfolk County: governor's councillor and

Norfolk County commissioner.
 Incumbent Chris Iannella, who is seeking a second two-year term on the Governor's Council, is being challenged by at least one opponent: Quincy attorney John J. Kerrigan of 68 Post Island Rd., Quincy. A former member of the Boston School Committee, Kerrigan was runner-up in race two years ago. Both Iannella and Kerrigan are Democrats. Since the Governor's Council represents other communities besides Quincy, it is possible other challengers have filed elsewhere.

 In the race for Norfolk County commissioner, at least four Democrats are seeking their party's nomination to unseat incumbent Republican Bruce Olsen of Stoughton.

Braintree Selectman Thomas J. Reynolds, Milton attorney Peter Collins, Edward Millano of Stoughton and Quincy Building Commissioner Matt Mulvey of Weymouth will face each other in the Sept. 20 primary. The winner will face Olsen in the final election Nov. 8.

As in the case of the Governor's Council, there may be additional candidates in the Norfolk County commissioner's race who filed elsewhere in the county.

Three other county officials face no opposition. They are: Clerk of Court Nicholas Barbadoro, a long-time Quincy resident and current Braintree resident who seeks another four-year term; Registrar of Deeds Barry Hannon of Braintree who also seeks another four-year term; and District Attorney William Delahunt of Quincy who seeks his fifth six-year term.

Barbadoro, Hannon and Delahunt are all Democrats.

The fall ballot will be complete next Tuesday, May 10 when the deadline passes for candidates to file for governor, lieutenant governor, U.S. senator, U.S. congressman, secretary of state and state auditor.

Quincy Republican Denis Tardo, who sought his party's nomination for secretary of state, has bowed out of the campaign.

DeCristofaro, for their assistance during her time at the hospital.

Board Cancels All Kelly Licenses

By LISA CONNELL
His whereabouts remain unknown, according to Asst. City Solicitor James Timmins, but issues surrounding Peter Kelly, former proprietor of Kelly's in the Square, continue to surface.

He is scheduled to appear before the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. to appeal the February 22 action of the City Licensing Board in which his license to operate was suspended for 30 days.

Timmins said he has had difficulty locating and contacting Kelly for the past month.

Timmins and members of the Licensing Board, also scheduled to appear before the ABCC Wednesday, will do so, but now will state why the previously scheduled hearing before the ABCC should be canceled.

Last week Timmins drafted a notice to Kelly which stated, "...that if the licensee ceases to do business at the licensed premises, then the [City Licensing] board can cancel the licenses given to the licensee."

It is the intention of the Police Liquor Inspector and the Licensing Board to keep liquor licenses in the hands of licensed authorities and not have people who have licenses not do business at their licensed site, Timmins said.

If a liquor license is not being used at the premises for the purposes granted then the license shall be canceled immediately, according to Timmins.

"Due to the abandonment of the property, the license has been canceled. I recommend that the license be canceled," said Timmins to board members Tuesday.

As reported in The Sun, April 21, Kelly abandoned his property without notification to the board sometime between April 15 and 17. Due to the cessation of business clause, according to License Board Chairman and City Clerk Joseph Shea, Kelly's liquor license was revoked.

Timmins sent a notice to Kelly dated April 26 informing Kelly of the recommendation to the board that the liquor license be canceled. A notice was posted at Kelly's in the Square, 15 - 19 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center, so Kelly could be present Tuesday to provide an answer to the board regarding his sudden disappearance.

Neither Kelly nor any family or business representatives were present Tuesday at the board's regular weekly meeting.

Building Inspector and Board Vice Chairman Matthias Mulvey made a motion to cancel all licenses held by Peter Kelly doing business as Kelly's in the Square.

The motion was unanimously accepted by other board members.

"I believe this renders moot the issues of the scheduled hearing," said Timmins.

Timmins will advise the ABCC of the board's decision.

Kelly's entertainment license and right to house three video machines were also revoked by the board Feb. 22.

Robert Fleming, Kelly's attorney at the Feb. 22 hearing, confirmed Tuesday that he has since withdrawn as counsel.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS Steve Infascelli, left, and Gary Patten present a $5,000 check to Elise Clayman, MDA program coordinator, as part of a fundraising kick-off for "Fill the Boot" campaign. Beginning in June, firefighters will be at Marina Bay and supermarkets with boots for donations to be placed for MDA. Proceeds from the check presentation were collected from the last campaign.

Council Supports Teachers' Early Retirement Plan

The City Council voted unanimously Monday night to support an early retirement plan for Quincy teachers.

The proposal, which is being made under provisions of the state Education Reform Act, recently received similar support from the School Committee. It now requires the signature of Mayor James Sheets, who has also indicated his full support of the plan.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon and George

Umscheid, business officer for the Quincy schools, spoke on behalf of the plan Monday night. Umscheid said the plan would save the school system $28,141 for each employee over a 15-year period.

Umscheid added that while it is uncertain how many teachers will sign up for the plan, he expects between 10 and 40 positions could open up because of the early retirement incentive.

The incentive is open to any teacher, whether in the Quincy schools or at Quincy College, who belongs to the Massachusetts Teachers Retirement system.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, chairman of the City Council Education Committee, spoke favorably of the plan.

"I think this is a good vote for the city," said Phelan.

Quincy Education Association President Thomas Walsh has said the plan saves money and provides a way to hire younger teachers.

Flags Needed For Flag Day Parade

The Quincy Flag Day Committee is asking families of deceased U.S. veterans to loan Veterans Memorial Flags to line the annual Quincy Flag Day Parade route Tuesday, June 14.

Families and individuals wishing to loan their flag or flags for display may deliver them to the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston, or call 773-3551. Each flag will have a banner attached, bearing the name of that veteran, and will be returned to the donor after the parade.

A Memorial Flag is given to the family of a veteran by the Veterans' Administration to be displayed on the casket during the funeral. They are the requested flags for prominent display along the parade route.

"Each year the community response is tremendous," said Ed Keohane, president of the Quincy Partnership and co-chairman of the Quincy Flag Day Parade.

"We believe this is a special way to honor our flag as well as the veteran who fought to protect it. We want Quincy to lead the way in showing how much we appreciate the courage and sacrifices which have been made by all of our veterans through the years."

The June 14 parade will begin at 7 p.m. at Washington and Coddington Sts. The parade will proceed north to and on Hancock St. The route passes Veterans' Memorial Stadium and ends at Adams Field, at the intersection of Hancock St. and Southern Atery.

The parade's Grand Marshall will be Quincy's 1994 Olympic bronze medalist, Karen Cashman. Fireworks will follow the parade, shortly after dusk.

The annual parade is co-sponsored by the Quincy Partnership, Inc., and the City of Quincy.

Nixon Did Visit Here

Some of you old enough to remember might be wondering if you just imagined that former President Richard Nixon visited Quincy.

You may have been thrown off by a report in another newspaper that said Nixon never visited United First Parish Church where a memorial service was held for him last week on the day of his funeral at his birthplace in Yorba Linda, Calif.

Well, he did visit Quincy and the church 42 years ago.

Nixon, then a U.S. Senator and vice presidential running mate to Republican presidential candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower came to Quincy in October 1952 on a campaign swing.

A crowd of 3,000 to 3,500 turned out to hear the boyish-looking 39-year-old candidate speak from the steps of the historic "Church of Presidents."

His wife, Pat, was with him and the two visited the crypt in the church basement where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, are entombed. They also signed the visitors' register.

David McIntosh, who was then Quincy's Plan E mayor and honorary chairman of the reception committee, presented Nixon with a replica of the Abigail Adams cairn which marks the spot on Penn's Hill, South Quincy, where Abigail and her young son, John Quincy, watched the smoke from the Battle of Bunker Hill and the burning of Charlestown.

City Historian William Edwards presented him with a copy of his book "Historic Quincy."

Mrs. McIntosh presented Pat Nixon with a bouquet of roses.

Quincy was still a GOP stronghold back in those days and there was a local Republican "Who's Who" including Congressman Richard Wigglesworth on hand to greet Nixon.

Nixon came to Quincy by motorcade from Boston but was originally to arrive by train and speak from its rear platform at the Quincy Center railroad station.

But at Police Chief William Ferrazzi's urging, the plans were changed to have him come by motorcade instead.

Ferrazzi said the motorcade would be better for security and traffic management.

Of course, that was long before that ill-fated motorcade in Dallas in 1963.

Incidentally, it was also reported that last week's

"Being a small businessman myself, and in these tough economic times, to have an ally like the Quincy 2000 gives extra support," said Ayers.

"Joe Doran Sr. and myself want to make sure that the North Quincy Businessmen know what is available to them."

CITY HALL WELCOMED back Councillor Ted DeCristofaro at Monday night's City Council meeting and hope to be doing so for two other popular figures soon.

Former Assistant City Clerk Tom Burke is at Quincy Hospital after suffering a heart attack a week ago. His condition is improved and he has been moved from intensive care to progressive care.

Current Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland is a medical patient at Milton Hospital where she was admitted a week ago. Her condition is reported as "good."

We wish Tom and Pat speedy recoveries.

SOME MORE ENCOURAGING news. Bryant Carter, Sr., past commander of Wollaston Legion Post, has been transferred from Quincy Hospital to Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital. He suffered a stroke four weeks ago.

Carter, incidentally, was moved into the very room that Ted DeCristofaro, who suffered a stroke in March, had been in after his transfer from Quincy Hospital.

GALLSTONES: FACT AND FICTION

Most people know that the gallbladder is not the body's most essential organ, but that it can produce gallstones, which definitely can be among the more painful things in life. Beyond that, though, there are a lot of misconceptions. For example, the belief that people with gallbladder trouble develop indigestion and bloating after eating fatty foods has proven false. It is true, however, that high-cholesterol, high-calorie diets are common factors in developing gallbladder disease. Another misconception, and a potentially fatal one, is that gallbladders can cause pain but no serious health threats. Severe infections and life-threatening complications can occur, sometimes with little warning.

P.S. Women in the U.S.

are three times more likely to develop gallbladder disease than men.

One of the most famous political cartoons of the sixties featured LBJ showing off his gallstone scar—in the shape of Vietnam. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We specialize in the treatment of heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Office hours are by appointment, and our comfortable office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Wants Evergreens To Eliminate Noise Along MBTA Tracks

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

While it is encouraging to see the MBTA agree to mitigation regarding noise along the Red Line right-of-way, I believe the plans they have to reach this end are shortsighted.

The MBTA intends to construct a brick wall along those portions of the line which have been identified as being unacceptably noisy. A "test" section of the proposed wall was built along Newport Avenue in Quincy. While this sample seems benign, I can foresee many problems which will come with such a barrier over time.

For those of us who ride the line regularly, it is well-known that vandals have disgraced nearly ever surface available. Some of this graffiti has spread into Quincy, but remains in, along, or near the stations. By constructing a wall, the MBTA will be building a fresh "canvas" for those so inclined to paint their filth. This step will allow for Quincy to start resembling the inner city.

What happens in years to come when the wall starts to crumble? Environmental effects and constant vibration are just two of the factors which will compromise both the aesthetic and structural integrity of the wall. What are the chances that the MBTA will repair it? If only Megabucks were as easy to predict!

A brick wall running through parts of the city will simply look out of place. A wall might be appropriate in a heavily-industrialized area such as Lynn or Lawrence, but will it take away the suburban quality of Quincy's character? Besides, with walls coming down all over the world, why build one through the heart of the city?

As an alternative to this disappointment waiting to happen, I suggest the MBTA use evergreen trees in this round of mitigation.

They are more appealing, much harder to spray-paint, and serve as a very good noise and sight barrier. In addition, evergreen trees will absorb some of the pollutants which will be emitted by the diesel engines of the Old Colony Railroad which will be using the same right-of-way.

Both residents and government officials alike have worked hard over recent years to beautify the City of Quincy. Are we going to let a state authority ruin what we've accomplished?

SADD Now Selling Emergency Rescue Kits

SADD members (Students Against Driving Drunk) at North Quincy High School will be selling SADD Emergency Rescue Kits. The kits, provided by CVS Pharmacy, will help raise money for SADD's mission to provide students with the best prevention and intervention tools possible to deal with the issues of underage drinking, impaired driving, drug abuse and other destructive decisions and their consequences.

The SADD Emergency Rescue Kit can be a life saver in a roadside emergency and was developed by SADD out of the organization's concern for safe driving practices. SADD Chapter members will be calling on family, friends and neighbors to purchase their CVS/SADD Emergency kits. CVS Pharmacy has agreed to sell the product in all of its stores in order to help SADD with the project and to make the kit available to anyone not contacted by a SADD member.

SADD also stands for Students Against Destructive Decisions and Student Athletes Detest Drugs. SADD is a nationwide youth group established in 1981 to deal with issues of safety, underage drinking, drunk driving and other destructive decisions. There are presently 25,000 chapters with nearly 8 million members including high school, middle and elementary schools and universities.

City's Tax Rate Set At $74

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa announced that the tax rate for 1959 will be $74, the highest in the city's history and an increase of $4.20 over the previous year.

Chief factors in the hike were budgetary increases in railroad subsidies $200,531, overlay $145,000, schools $355,000, salary increases $470,000, MDC charges $35,000, county taxes $203,000 and debt charges $146,000.

The City Council appropriated $250,000 from the excess and deficiency fund for the express purpose of holding down the tax rate increase.

PRIVATE RUBBISH COLLECTION

The City Council voted by a narrow margin of 5-4 to authorize Mayor Della Chiesa to have Quincy's rubbish collected by a private company under contract to the city.

Voting against the authorization were Councilors Joseph E. Brett, Charles L. Shea, John J. Quinn and James R. McIntyre. Shea charged that inefficient supervision was responsible for the uneconomical operation of the Sanitation Division.

"Nobody wants a survey of the division because it would show up those in charge for what they are—inefficient," said Shea.

Voting for the authorization were Councilors Carl W. Anderson, Edna B. Austin, Thomas S. Burgin, William C. Ellis and David S. McIntosh.

McIntosh suggested that the city give priority to the question of an incinerator now that the school building program and the hospital addition were completed.

SEEK BUS STRIKE END

Rep. Charles L. Shea was circulating petitions urging Gov. Foster Furcolo to invoke the Slicher Act forbidding strikes by public utilities workers in an effort to end a work stoppage at the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. that had gone on for 143 days.

Meanwhile, the City Council moved to revoke the Eastern Mass franchise for what Councilor Ellis called "its complete disregard of the public."

Quincy Choral Society To Perform John Rutter Music May 15 At Bethany

The Quincy Choral Society and Orchestra, directed by John Nichols, will perform four works by British composer John Rutter: "Requiem," "Magnificat," "Gaelic Blessing," and "God Be In My Head."

The concert will be held at Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington Sts., Quincy Center, Sunday, May 15, at 4 p.m. Solos will be performed by the society's Tina Cavaleri, soprano.

The society has performed in Quincy for 12 years. Recent performances have included Handel's "Messiah" selections and Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in 1993 at the Church of the Presidents. "Bethany Church was selected for this concert because its architecture and acoustics are perfectly suited to Rutter's music," Nichols noted.

Rutter's works were chosen for this concert for their musical quality. The Quincy Choral Society performed one of Rutter's pieces, "What Sweeter Music," in their December, 1992, concert. The chorus liked that particular song so much that it decided to focus on Rutter's compositions for this May's concert.

Rutter has been composing music since he was 10 years old. His composing talents were discovered by Sir David Willcocks. This association between Rutter and Willcocks led to the co-edited "Oxford Book of Carols."

Rutter became director of Music at Clare College in 1975 and served until 1979. In 1981, he founded his own chorus - The Cambridge Singers. In 1984, he started Collegium Records which he continues to have an active role in supervising.

Rutter also won a Grammy Award in 1985 for his recording of the Faure "Requiem" based on his own critical edition. In this recording, he succeeded in restoring the Faure work to its original chamber quality which was the composer's intent.

The two major pieces - "Requiem" and "Magnificat" - are contemporary, having been written in 1985 and 1990, respectively. Each is approximately 40 minutes in length. The "Gaelic Blessing," and "God Be In My Head" are shorter (3 - 4 minutes in length), beautiful old English prayers set to music.

Sung mostly in English, Rutter's music is very accessible to the listener. His lyric melodies and warm harmonies are easy to comprehend and give enjoyment to the soul. Organ, woodwinds and harp add a soothing timbre to the music as well. On those occasions where a bit more excitement is called for, brass and percussion instruments play contrasting rhythms to the choral parts.

John Nichols, the society's conductor since 1988, recently visited York, England, where he was able to visit with Mr. Rutter and sing under his direction along with members of the Royal School of Church Musicians. He has this to say about his visit:

"Rehearsing and performing a work under the direction of the composer himself was one of the greatest musical experiences of my life. It's exciting to be able to explore the creative process with a 'musical inventor' and certainly John Rutter is among our greatest living composers."

Rutter says, "Composing is for me a kind of magic garden, a place where everything is arranged as I would like it to be. If others share that feeling, I am gratified."

Susan B. Anthony Drama At Adams Historical Site

The National Park Service, Adams National Historic Site will host a portrayal of Susan B. Anthony to be performed by Jessa Piaia, Friday, May 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the Carriage House of the "Old House," 135 Adams St.

The performance, part of the site's ongoing celebration of American woman patriot Abigail Adams' 250th birthday, is 30 minutes in length and will be followed by a post-performance discussion.

Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, and Susan B. Anthony were advocates for similar causes, the rights of women, during their respective lifetimes.

Piaia's dramatization chronicles the life, struggles and accomplishments of the noted suffragist in her work for social, political and economic reform for women in nineteenth century America. The dramatization presents the depth and diversity of Anthony's interests and activities, encompassing the full spectrum of her work: organizing women's groups, publishing a newspaper, promoting legislation to reform laws on marriage, divorce, labor and child care.

Piaia, is currently on the staff of the Schlesinger Library, a collection specializing in the History of Women in America.

Seating is limited and available on a first come, first served basis. The historic Carriage House is not climate controlled so visitors are asked to dress accordingly.

This program was made possible through a grant from the Massachusetts Foundation for Humanities. For further information, contact the park at 773-1177 or 770-1175.

Former Softball-Baseball Star Makes The Most Of Her Opportunities Mary Pratt: In A League All Her Own

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. How were you first approached to play in the girls' professional league?

A. Well, I had played in Boston Garden in 1939 and 1940 in a league that was sponsored by Walter Brown, who then owned the Garden, and as a result of playing there, when Mr. (Phillip) Wrigley started his (girls' professional) league, I got a call in June of 1943 saying they were looking for pitchers. And I was, at the time, teaching school. So the tryouts had been held, and they apparently were still trying to recruit players. And based on that, Ralph Wheeler, who was a schoolboy (sports) editor of The Boston Herald at the time, he called me, and made the contact that enabled to go out, and as it was, get signed, to Rockford.

Q. You must have had a lot of practice when you were younger, in order to get into a professional league like that.

A. Well, ironically, the only opportunities I had to play were the opportunities I made for myself, and those opportunities were to play with the boys. Because at that time, competition and highly competitive sports for girls were kind of against the dictates of society. I had no competition when I went to North (Quincy High), except for the one time we played Quincy High. And so it was the opportunities I sought outside of school, and the Boston Garden episode was one of them. At college, we could not play intercollegiate sports. And so it's the opportunities I made for myself by playing with the boys and competing against the boys.

So I really had a bit of nerve going out to the Midwest, where I met girls from Canada and California who had had so many more opportunities to compete than most of the girls or the women from the East Coast.

Q. It must have been a lot of fun.

A. It sure was. I had five wonderful summers, two that I spent the whole season, 1944 and 1945, but in '43, '46 and '47 I went out after school closed.

Q. How much money did you make while you were in the league?

A. I made $60 a week. Then in 1944, when I had a good season, I held out and I got a $10 raise; I got $70. In today's society, that doesn't sound like much money, but when you compare it to what I was making teaching school—I was in my third year of teaching, so I had risen from $27.50 a week to $32.50 a week when I went out to play ball for Mr. Wrigley's league.

Q. Did you think priorities were a little out of whack because you were getting more to play ball than you were to teach?

A. Well, I never looked at it that way and a lot of the women today have commented the same thing. Most of us would have gone and played for nothing, because we all loved sports so much, and it was just another opportunity that had never been presented to me. And so I didn't look at it from the angle of the money, but I look at it now, because it was a case that I was going to earn twice as much as teaching school.

Q. What was the fan reaction to the league? Did they treat you seriously as women baseball players?

A. Oh, I think they certainly did, but I think it was mostly because of the standards that Mr. Wrigley had set, I guess prior to starting the league. And it was those high standards that really made such a hit with me because, after all, I was a young girl who had gone to college to prepare to become a teacher. And one of the things that was instilled upon me early on was that I wasn't actually going to compete anymore because I was going to be a role model to young girls and I was going to be a lady, and for some unknown reason, if you loved sports and you were

FULL NAME: Mary Pratt

AGE: "I'm old enough to know better"

ADDRESS: lifelong Quincy resident

BACKGROUND: pitched for the Rockford (Ill.) Peaches and Kenosha (Wis.) Comets in the All-American Girls Professional Softball League (changed to Baseball League in 1944), 1943-47; a plaque bearing her name commemorating the league hangs in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. Also officiated school basketball and softball games for 45 years as a member of the Boston Board of Officials

OCCUPATION: physical education instructor for Quincy public schools, 1941-65 and 1968-86; from 1965-68, was an associate professor of physical education at Salem State College

EDUCATION: graduated from North Quincy High School, 1936; received a B.S. degree in physical education from Boston University, 1940; received master's degree in education from Boston State, now the University of Massachusetts; did subsequent graduate work with BU, Boston State and Bridgewater State College skilled in sports in that day and age, they tended to think you were masculine.

And I think that's one of the reasons Mr. Wrigley put us in those uniforms which you saw them depict in the movie ("A League of Their Own") as something that at first, people were going to ridicule them. But I heard at that time no resentment against the type of uniform.

Q. The league existed from 1943-54. How did it come to disband?

A. Well, there's different people with different reasons. I personally feel that when they switched from softball to baseball, they went to a game that is so definitely associated with men, and yet people don't often agree with me, but I feel that girls never gain anything when they try to mimic a man's game.

The real reason, I've heard, was that the war was over and rationing of gasoline had stopped. The towns that we were playing in were all within a 90-mile radius of Chicago, and I guess people thought that it was time to get back to the big-league games. And as a result, the demise of the league started in about 1950, where most of the teams were traveling teams. They were going around more barnstorming.

Q. You made some headlines last year when you asked that your name be taken off a field that had been named after you at Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy. Did they ever take your name off?

A. Yes, they took my name off, and I think they understood that a lot of improvement has got to be done to a lot of the fields around the city.

Q. So the field they were going to name after you is still in pretty bad shape?

A. Well, it's not so much that it's in bad shape, which it is, but as far as I can see it's not even conducive to playing a softball game. Part of it is now a soccer field.

Q. How has your life changed since "A League of Their Own" came out?

A. Well, it's changed in that when we went to Cooperstown, they had asked us if when we went home we would do anything we could to keep the name of the girls' league in the forefront. And little did I think that so many people would ask us to come and speak.

And what has been great to me is that for all the years I've stood in front of children and spoken; I've never really gone in front of audiences to speak. And it's given me a good chance to tell what I consider is the real message of what I did. The fact that I played ball, I don't think means as much as the fact that I know it proved to me anything you want to do in this world, you can do. I was determined that I was going to play, I was determined that I was going to pitch, and I went out there with very little experience.

And because of the notoriety that has come from the movie, and it all seems to be very positive, it's proved to me that what goes around, comes around. And if you do right, nothing will ever come out of it but right. And so it's been a very positive experience for me to be able to go around and talk to youngsters who have seen the movie over and over again, adults that have been taken by the movie and the message that was in the movie. So I think it's been a very positive thing in the overall concept of recognizing that girls can, in fact, love sports, do well in sports, and be feminine, and not have to have the label of being like a boy or being masculine just because they perform well.

Q. I understand that there's a movement on the West Coast to start a similar women's league. Do you think that would work today, and do you think it would work here in the eastern part of the country?

A. There's no question that there's girls with plenty of ability. I don't know about the one on the West Coast, but I've heard of one called the Silver Bullets that trains down in Florida. It's managed by Phil Niekro, who used to be a big-league pitcher. The only thing, I think, that they maybe haven't considered well enough is that they've arranged, the last I heard, a 32-game schedule and it's to play against men's teams. So my big question is, what rules are they going to play by? Are the girls going to play the baseball diamond, or are the men going to play the girls' (smaller) diamond? I'd be interested in knowing what rules they're going to play by. But it's not a league, it's just one team.

And I hear that they're going to pay the Silver Bullets $20,000 (apiece), which in today's society is not too bad. But I think those girls will do it the same as we did: they'd play for nothing.

Comer Reappointed QHA Executive Director

John P. (Jake) Comer has been reappointed executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Comer's contract was renewed for another five years last week at the QHA's annual meeting following a 5-0 vote of its appointing board.

The board consists of Rosemary Wahlberg, chairman; Jim McDonald, vice chairman; Frank Kearns, treasurer; Kay Bamford, assistant treasurer and Rev. James Kimmell.

Comer, who is in his 13th year as executive director, said he was pleased with the board's unanimous vote.

"I'm very honored," he said.

Comer said one of his top two immediate goals is to oversee the deleading of all 619 of the QHA's family units which he noted would cost nearly $1 million in state and federal money. At last week's annual meeting, $450,000 was approved for the first phase of the project, he said.

The other goal is to make more QHA units handicapped accessible, Comer said. Those included 14 senior citizens' units--10 at O'Brien Towers and four in Pagnano Towers--and nine family units, he noted.

Comer said the handicapped improvements will be funded by part of an annual $1.6 million in federal money allotted to the QHA, but added that he could not estimate what the cost of those improvements will be.

Quincy Kiwanis Club Bike Safety Rodeo Saturday

The Quincy Kiwanis Club will join more than 85 other Kiwanis Clubs throughout New England on Saturday, May 7 in conducting a Bicycle Rodeo to promote the use of bicycle helmets by children.

The Quincy Bike Rodeo will take place at the Center for Technical Education (former Vo-Tech) parking lot on Woodward Ave. between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Chairman Donald McCarthy of the Quincy Kiwanis Club invites all children and their parents to participate in this event and help reduce the number of childhood related injuries from bicycle accidents.

Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci will present citations to the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute and the Kiwanis Clubs on behalf of the Governor's Highway Safety Commission. Officials of the Trauma Center including Dr. Burton Harris; Executive Director James Levesque, and Mary O'Brien of Quincy, trauma nurse coordinator, will attend.

There will be several bicycle stations in the parking lot where riders can learn bicycle safety skills and practice them in a safe setting. Jon Simons, a program director at the South Shore YMCA and members of his Mountain Movers Bike Program, will conduct bicycle safety checks.

There will also be instruction in the proper fitting of the bike helmets. The Quincy Kiwanis Club will have approved bicycle helmets available at reduced prices. Each participant must be wearing a helmet.

Each year approximately 400 children between the ages of 0-14 are killed in bicycle crashes. Thousand more are treated in emergency rooms for related injuries. While bicycle helmets have been shown to reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent, only 5 percent of children cyclists nationwide use helmets.

Posters promoting the Kiwanis Family Safety Day show seven-year-old Michael Donato of Wilmington. He and his parents know how important this event is. Michael survived every parent's nightmare: having a child hit by a car while cycling. Michael is alive today thanks to his family's rule, "no helmet, no ride."

Sixty-six groups and individuals were honored by the City Council recently for their participation last year in the city's Adopt-An-Island program.

As a token of the city's appreciation, participants were each awarded a small petunia plant and a special Adopt-An-Island t-shirt.

The awards mark the end of the fifth year of the program, which has grown steadily since its inception under former Mayor Francis McCauley during his administration. According to Councillor Timothy Cahill, around 25 islands were adopted in the first year of the program, around 35 in the second, 50 in the third and 61 last year.

Those honored included: U.S. Postal Service (Quincy Post Office), Joyce Family, Philip Kenney, Groleau's Landscape Contractors Inc., Curry Hardware, St. John's Girl Scout Troop 4205, Paul Harold, Off the Wall

Board Games, Ayers Bros. Inc. 'Prevention Day' Today At Quincy Health Dept.

The Quincy Health Department, 1120 Hancock St., will hold a "Prevention Day" featuring an Immunization Clinic and Smoking Prevention Exhibit today (Thursday) from 4 to 7 p.m.

The event was organized by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and involves more than 180 individual events in communities across the state.

The Tetanus and Diphtheria Immunization Clinic will be staffed by Quincy Health Department nurses. The department recommends that all adults who have not received a series of at least three doses of tetanus and diphtheria vaccine during their lifetime do so. The first may be received at today's clinic and the others at the department's monthly adult immunization clinic or by an individual's own physician.

The department also reminds Quincy residents that even adults who have received these series of immunizations should receive a tetanus and diphtheria booster every 10 years.

People with serious allergies or a temperature over 101 degrees should not receive the vaccine.

Pregnant women should consult with their doctors before doing so.

Anyone with questions about the clinic or his or her immunization status should call the Quincy Health Department at 376-1284.

The Smoking Prevention Exhibit will be staffed by the Quincy Health Department Tobacco Prevention Project. It will offer information, pamphlets, and materials to help people understand the seriousness of smoking and second-hand smoke and to provide referrals to smoking cessation clinics.

"Scott Greenberg comes from within our staff and brings to his office the experience of watching the college grow as well as having been involved in adapting to that youth," said Donald Young, interim president at the college. "He was selected from a substantial list of highly qualified candidates."

P&G Closing May Cause Noise, Odors, Kolson Says

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson has alerted constituents to the possibility of noise and odors that may result from the closing of Procter & Gamble's Quincy soap plant.

In a recent letter to Germantown residents, Kolson said he met with P&G officials to discuss the closing of the plant, adding that the city has worked with P&G during the last several years in an effort to control odors or residue in the air. The company plans to have all employees vacated from the property by Nov. 1.

"In the meantime, the company will be dismantling structures on their site, including their tower, tanks and buildings," Kolson wrote. "This process will take approximately five months to complete."

"The dismantling and cleaning of the site will be done during normal working hours over the next few months. You may notice some noise and odors during this period, although I have asked the company to be as considerate of the neighbors as possible during the dismantling project which should begin in mid-May."

Kolson added that he hopes his constituents do not experience any discomfort during the dismantling and invited residents to contact him regarding any other questions or concerns about it they may have.

Firefighters and officers of the Quincy Fire Department are completing an intensive training course in the use of the defibrillator, a device which shocks the heart out of cardiac arrest.

The training, provided by Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance Systems of America (ASA), will educate over 160 fire personnel in the City of Quincy in the use of the device.

The training session for Quincy has consisted of 12 separate classes to accommodate all interested personnel. Classes began in March and will run through May. Fire department personnel are each required to complete one six-hour session to be certified as proficient in defibrillator use.

The program is run by ASA, in conjunction with

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Once a year, a day is set aside for the special purpose of honoring mothers. It is a day dedicated to honor all mothers for their devotion, guidance, sacrifice and love.

Great philosophers, churchmen, writers and sociologists through the ages have long agreed that the role of a mother is as demanding, and exemplary, as any human endeavor. A mother's influence is unexcelled.

Many of today's modern mothers have a two-fold job. To "make ends meet" financially, many modern mothers have to work outside the home. In many other cases, modern mothers choose to continue business careers.

And so, on this special day let us take the time to think hard upon how much Mother means to all of us. Let us renew our determination to express our feelings throughout the year, and not just on this single day. Let us find a way to let her know how we feel... how important she is every day of the year...

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Neighborhood Watch Guidelines

What is suspicious?

No police department can function effectively without the concerned assistance of responsible citizens. We are depending on you to call and tell us whenever you observe suspicious persons or actions. Some people fail to call the police simply because they are not aware of what seemingly innocent activities might be hesitant to call for fear of being a "nosy neighbor" or a "crank." Still others take it for granted that someone else has called.

Call the police immediately about all suspicious activity--and do it yourself. Don't worry about "bothering" us because this is what we are here for. Don't worry about being embarrassed if your suspicions are unfounded. Thing instead about what could happen if you don't act.

Basically, anything that seems even slightly "out of place": for your area or during the time of day which it occurs may mean criminal activity. Some of the most obvious things to watch for and report include:

1. A stranger entering your neighbor's house when it is unoccupied may be a burglar.
2. A scream heard anywhere may mean a robbery or rape in progress.
3. Offers of merchandise at ridiculously low prices could mean stolen property.
4. Anyone removing accessories, license plates or gasoline from a car should be reported.
5. Anyone peering into parked cars may be looking for a car to steal or for valuables left displayed in the car.
6. Persons entering or leaving a business place after hours could be burglars.
7. The sound of breaking glass, or other loud explosive noises, could mean an accident, burglary attempt or vandalism to property.
8. Persons loitering around schools, parks, secluded areas or in the neighborhood, could be sex offenders.
9. Persons around the neighborhood who do not live there could be burglars.

Not every stranger who comes into your neighborhood is a criminal by any means. There are many perfectly legitimate people moving around our City all the time. But criminals do take advantage of this by assuming the guise of the legitimate business representative. After all, if a criminal looked like a criminal, no one would have any trouble spotting him. Next week: Specific situations to watch for.

Cashman Day A Triumph For Karen, Family

By KERRY BYRNE

After Karen Cashman was feted before 1,600 at her alma mater, North Quincy High, the day's festivities continued during a intimate luncheon hosted by Mayor James Sheets at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

While the morning rally was an impressive show, the afternoon affair - attended mainly by 150 friends, family members and others who played a significant role helping Karen during her outstanding athletic career - was truly a triumph for Karen and the entire Cashman family. In attendance were her parents, Fred and Jane, brothers Fred and Ron, and grandmother Barbara. The emotion of the moment could be seen in the eyes of the Cashmans and heard in Karen's words.

To her family she said with tear-filled eyes: "I would most like to thank my parents. You were the backbone of my life."

To the rest of the audience: "I dreamt of the Olympics but I never dreamt of a Karen Cashman Day. I never thought anything would surpass being on the podium and receiving the medal, but this has. This means more to me than I could possibly say."

Although the Olympian was thankful towards all those who played a part in her special day, it was Mayor Sheets, in an eloquent address, who spoke for all those in attendance when he thanked Karen for "reminding us that there is still a greatness in the American character. You remind us about what is great and good in the American public school system...and you remind us of what is right about Quincy, our blue-collar roots and its work ethic."

More Photos On Pages 20-21

It was one of their own that everyone came to see, but the Cashman's were lavish in their praise towards the City of Quincy and "The Karen Cashman Day" Committee. According to Karen's father the city delivered its own "gold medal performance" in honoring his daughter.

"We were very impressed," said Cashman, "we really didn't expect anything like this."

The city pulled out all the stops to honor its greatest athlete a number one citizen. From a glass enclosed piece of track, taken from the oval at Veterans Memorial Stadium where Cashman began her athletic career as a runner in the Quincy Track Club, to a 4'x8' multi-media mural depicting Karen in action, painted in secret by Atlanta artist Donna Marie Farrell, the city spared no expense.

Displayed at the ceremony was footage of Karen's Olympic performance and clips of the medal ceremony. The ceremony was never aired by CBS during their Olympic coverage and had to be acquired by the city directly through the network.

"We saw the race on TV but they never showed the ceremony, so this is the first time any of us have seen it. It's definitely a surprise," said Karen's sister Diane Sharp, whose Wilmington home was the gathering spot for the Cashman family to watch the event.

Although this was her most triumphant moment, Karen made it clear that it was not the cap on her career.

"After today it makes me want all the more to go to Japan in 1998 and bring home a gold medal."

Karen won her medal as a member of the 3,000-meter short-track speedskating relay team. She hopes to compete in the individual events in 1998.

Cashman's Speech A Championship Performance

Overcoming tears and her fear of speaking in public, Karen Cashman did what she did at the 1994 Winter Olympics: delivered a championship performance.

Following a dizzying array of awards, gifts and honors on her behalf, the bronze medal-winning short-track speedskater stepped to the podium at the North Quincy High School gymnasium to speak to the crowd of 1,600 gathered at a rally on her behalf.

Obviously shaken by the events of the Friday morning, Karen said: "I am truly awed, overwhelmed and flattered by all of this." And then, professing her nervousness, she joked, "had I known I would've had to speak in front of all these people I would have skated a little slower."

Despite the warning she delivered an uplifting homily which, fittingly enough, highlighted the event held in her honor.

Esponsing the virtues that allowed her to reach her dream of an Olympic medal - hard work, sacrifice, positive thoughts and dreams - she outlined to the students of her alma mater, and to all the students of Quincy via live television feed, what it takes to succeed, not just in athletics, but in life.

Hard work, because nothing worth anything comes easy. Sacrifice, because sometimes you have to give up "doing what you want to do as opposed to what will make you a better person." Positive thought and dreams because these are what define your goals. And if anyone in Quincy knows what it takes to reach their goals, it is Karen.

"Everyone has a dream that they want to reach. Everyone has the ability to reach a level of excellence. Going to the Olympics was always my dream," said the overwhelmed Cashman. "To compete against the world's best and come out on top is the most unbelievable heights one could obtain."

Karen was honored by such dignitaries as Quincy Mayor James Sheets and Dr. Allan "Yakoo" Yacubian.

It was Sheets who declared the official opening of the celebration with a Mayoral Proclamation: "Whereas, As a member of the United States 3,000-meter relay team, winning the bronze in Lillehammer, Norway, Karen has competed against some of the finest athletes in the world; ...I, James A. Sheets, Mayor of the City of Quincy, do hereby proclaim April 29th, 1994 as KAREN CASHMAN DAY in Quincy."

It was Yacubian, however, who had the most heartfelt and effusive praise for Karen and her alma mater.

"I maintain that there is nothing better than a North Quincy kid. A North Quincy kid is better than the average kid. I know this is Quincy and it's all related, but a good-great North Quincy kid is better than any kid in the world," said the bubbling Dr. Yacubian.

For many on hand, Karen's success was a victory for the entire city. "In my judgement this is an extremely proud day not only for you as an individual but for everyone throughout the Quincy school system...you are an example of what a fine school system is all about," said School Superintendent Eugene Creodon.

That Karen's speech highlighted the celebration was an opinion held by many who were present. At the luncheon at the Quincy Neighborhood Club which followed the North Quincy High rally, City Council President Michael Cheney had this to say about Karen's words: "Her speech was a recipe for success that each child in Quincy should listen to. It was one of the better speeches I've ever heard because it came from the heart."

North's Bats Come Alive Against Weymouth

1 DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High School baseball team's bats came alive on Monday at Adams Field as the Red Raiders defeated the Weymouth Wildcats, 8-3, to improve their record to 3-6.

North traveled to Edgewater-Raynham yesterday and plays Quincy today (Thursday) at 3:30. They will host Plymouth on Monday.

North got on the scoreboard first against Weymouth in the first inning when George Wirtz led off with a walk and advanced to second on a pop fly by Steve Koch. Starting pitcher Dan Duncan then singled, scoring Wirtz and giving North a 1-0 lead.

Weymouth tried to even things up in the second when Doug Vininski singled and took second on a Pat O'Toole sacrifice, but the inning ended when Koch caught a line drive off the bat of Paul Morse and tagged second for the unassisted double play.

North added to their lead in their half of the second when Tim Zanaboni and Mike Santoro reached base on errors. Lee Hughes reached on a base hit, but another Weymouth error allowed Zanaboni to score. Koch singled to give North a 3-0 lead.

In the fourth North exploded for five runs in the bottom of the inning to take an 8-0 lead. Duncan opened the inning with a single and stole second. After groundouts by Jim Spiezna and A.J. Carthas, the Raiders collected four straight single by Zanaboni, Sean Dolbere, Santoro and Hughes to drive in three runs. Wirtz then reached on an error and Koch singled, scoring Hughes and Santoro for the 8-0 advantage. North sent 10 batters to the plate and collected five hits in the inning, all singles.

The Wildcats tried again in the fourth and fifth innings but could only muster two walks by Steve Karissy and Chuck Mackey. Weymouth scored their first run in the sixth inning when Jim Gagnon doubled to deep center and advanced to when Mackey reached on an error and scored on a Vininski groundout.

Weymouth scored two more runs in the seventh when Morse and Mike Gates opened with singles. Morse scored on a sacrifice fly by James Barrett and Gates scored on a single by Gagnon. Mackey struck out swinging to end the game.

"The three errors opened the doors for us and then we had the four straight hits that drove the runs in," said North Quincy head coach Leo Donovan. "That put the game out of reach."

North received, an outstanding performance by Dan Duncan. In pitching the first complete game by a Raider hurler this season, Duncan (1-1) allowed seven hits, walked four and struck out five.

Offensively North received a fine effort by Carthas who went 2 for 4 including a long double in the fourth. Also getting in the hit column was Steve Roberts, who replaced Zanaboni in the sixth inning.

Quincy Beats Barnstable, Plays North Today

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy High hopes the emotion of a big 4-3 win over previously undefeated Old Colony League rival Barnstable will carry over into this week's contests against Silver Lake (Wednesday) and North Quincy (Thursday).

The win improved Quincy to 3-3 in the OCL and 4-3 overall. Barnstable fell to 5-1 in league play.

Junior pitcher Shaun Kivlan carried the day for Quincy, giving up only three runs while pitching all but the final out. Senior fireballer Tom Malvesti came in in the bottom of the seventh with two men on base to fan the only batter he faced and end the game.

Malvesti also knocked in Steve Miller for the game winning run with a hit in the first half of the final inning.

Quincy coach Bob

Sylvia was especially pleased with Kivlan's performance on the mound.

"Shaun pitched his heart out today. I couldn't ask any more from him. They hadn't lost all season until they faced him," said the coach.

Adding to the Quincy offense were sophomore Joe Biagini and junior Steve Barrett with two hits each.

The win was huge in terms of keeping alive the Presidents' goal of reaching post-season play this year.

"This win kept us in the hunt," said Sylvia. "Without this win we'd be below .500 while Barnstable would be on top of the league with an undefeated record." The top two teams in each league and each team with 12 or more wins qualify for the tournament.

The Presidents were scheduled to face the Silver Lake Lakers yesterday (Wednesday). The Lakers entered the game with a 4-2 OCL record.

Today they'll take on crosstown rival North Quincy at Adams Field at 3:30. The Red Raiders opened the week with an 8-3 win over Weymouth to improve to a record of 3-6.

Coach Sylvia feels confident his team can do well in the two contests.

"We're playing good defense but we've struggled at times offensively. If the lower part of the order comes alive we can be successful," said Sylvia. "But in any game there are intangibles; who has their ace on the mound, who's hitting well and things like that. Of course the massive intangible on Thursday is that it is a Quincy-North Quincy game."

Quincy, North Softball Teams Clash Today

The bad news is that the Quincy High Softball team lost to the Red Raiders on Monday, 10-6. The good news is that it was the Barnstable Red Raiders and not their crosstown rivals who they'll try to beat today (Thursday) at 3:30.

The Presidents found themselves down 10-2 halfway through the fifth when a late-inning rally and two-innings of shutout baseball by Quincy pitcher Danielle Perry made a game of it.

The game opened with two runs by each squad in the first inning. But four runs in the third by Barnstable - two of them coming after some questionable Red Raider base running and officiating - opened up the contest.

Quincy was led by the play of shortstop Katie Gallagher who reached base three out four times at the plate on a single and two walks and scored three of Quincy's six runs. Gallagher also did it in the field making a nice stop and force at second that led to a 6-to-3 double play in the sixth. The play helped Perry close the game with two consecutive 1-2-3 innings.

After the game Quincy Bud Mosher expressed his pleasure with the performance of Gallagher.

"Katie struggled at certain points today but she is very dependable, our most dependable player. She also turned that big double play in the sixth that helped us make it close," said Mosher.

Excellent days at the plate were also had by third baseman Kerri Connolly and designated player Nicole Domina, each of who drove in two runs - Connolly on a single and a double and Domina on two doubles.

Quincy's big rally came in the fifth. Down by eight they tagged Barnstable pitcher Christine Frauton for three runs as all but one President came to the plate. Gallagher opened with a single and then advanced when Perry was thrown out on a fielder's choice. Connolly's double knocked in the lead runner and then she came home after a double by Domina. Domina recorded the third run when Caitlin O'Conner nailed her only hit of the game. The inning may have resulted in a game-winning rally had it not been for Barnstable right fielder Jolynn Ahnquist robbing Tori Kabilian with a diving, tumbling grab that ended the Quincy slugfest.

With contests this week with Silver Lake and North Quincy, Coach Mosher is confident that his team can do well.

"We lost to Falmouth 5-1 earlier in the week and they're the second best team in the Old Colony League. It was only 2-1 after five innings," he said. A noble accomplishment for the very young Quincy squad.

"I feel we can pick up a few more wins before the season is over," said Mosher of his 1-5 softball team. "We have the quality of athletes that can win some games, we just have to develop more as a team."

North Girls' Softball Team Improves

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High School girls' softball continues to impress, and despite an 0-7 record they continue to shine as a team.

North played Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday (Wednesday), plays cross-town rival Quincy today (Thursday) at Faxon Field and will travel to Plymouth on Monday.

North hosted Taunton on Friday, and despite a 19-2 loss, showed excellent improvement in team work and defensive skills and with only one senior on the roster, this is a sure to be a preview of things to come.

"They have the ability," said head coach Carolyn Parsley. "Being young and inexperienced, they have to learn to put together a full game."

Taunton scored in the first four innings to take a 10-0 lead. Their quietest inning was the second, when North held the Tigers to one run. The Raiders prevented any more Taunton baserunners from scoring in that inning thanks to a great defensive play by Kristen Proude who tagged a runner out at third base to end the inning. Mary Jane Bergeron assisted on the play.

North got on the board in their half of the inning. Jamie Monahan singled to open the inning, and was sacrificed to second by Proude. After advancing to third on a wild pitch, Jamie scored on a groundout by Kerry Monahan to make the score 10-1 in favor of Taunton.

After going down 1-2-3 in the fifth inning, Taunton exploded for nine more runs in the sixth. Of the nine runs scored, seven were scored with two out and were aided by two North Quincy errors Taunton also collected eight hits in the inning.

The Raiders scored again in their half of the sixth. It all started with a single by Bergeron. After groundouts by Jamie Monahan and Proude, Kerry Monahan walked and Jen Doherty singled to load the bases. Meghan Roche singled, scoring Bergeron. Kerry Monahan was thrown out at home plate to end the inning.

Although she allowed 19 runs, Kathy Hughes pitched a fine game, making two putouts on line drives and walking only two.

North collected four hits and put at least one runner on base in every inning for the first time this season.

"It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the doer of deeds could have done better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marked by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again; who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement; and who at the worst, if he fails, at least he fails while daring greatly; so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat."

—Theodore Roosevelt, as quoted by Olympian Karen Cashman,
April 29, 1994

Among the many gifts received by Karen on Friday's "Karen Cashman Day" celebration was a 4x8 multimedia mural painted by Atlanta artist Donna Marie Farrell.

The mural features Karen in her Olympic uniform racing around the ice on her extra-long speedskating blades and is flanked by her portrait and a bigger-than-life-sized bronze medal with ribbon flowing from it. It was a gift to her from the city of Quincy.

Graphic artist Farrell specializes in painting Olympic athletes and has done portraits of Kristi Yamaguchi and Bonnie Blair, among others. She has also done art work for the New Jersey Nets of the NBA.

Her work on Cashman's painting was kept very low-key. The city flew her up from Atlanta and then hid her away for three days as she worked feverishly on the piece.

Word is that Karen will have the final say as to where she wants the mural to be kept. Here are some suggestions:

1. At one of the main entrances to the city, so that everyone who comes to Quincy will know that we're home to one of the nation's few Olympic medal-winning athletes.

2. At Veterans Memorial Stadium, the city's main sports arena and the place where Karen began her athletic career as a member of the Quincy Track Club.

3. At her home, after all it belongs to her and is a symbol of her great accomplishments.

4. At The Quincy Sun, so that a frustrated NFL wanna-be-of-an-athlete-turned-sports-writer can pretend that he holds some sort of sway over the ebb and tide of thought in this city.

Six former Quincy High School basketball stars will be inducted into the QHS Basketball Hall of Fame on May 24 at the Quincy Sons of Italy.

Harold Kapsis, Class of 1935; Russell "Red" Maver, '40; John McKinnon, '45; Al "Snooky" Taglieri, '52; Stanley Berman, '52; and Robert Furfari, '67, will be this year's inductees.

Two outstanding ladies will also be given special awards for their contributions to the program: Norma Finnegan and Janice Amoroso.

Those wishing to attend can obtain tickets by contacting one of the following: Guido Pettinelli, 40 Hardwick Rd., Quincy, 02169, phone 472-6991. Bill Draicchio, 20 Glynn Terrace, Quincy, 02169, phone 472-3109. Quincy High basketball coach John Franceschini, 984-8753.

Tickets are $20 per person. Checks should be made payable to the QHS Basketball Alumni Club.

Tryouts for Wollaston Legion and Quincy Legion baseball teams will be held this weekend.

Wollaston coach Mike Draicchio will hold tryouts on Saturday, May 7 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at O'Rourke Field. Sunday tryouts will be from 1-4 p.m. at Merrymount Field.

Quincy coach Ed Spring will hold tryouts Saturday and Sunday at 10 a.m. at Kincaide Park.

In case of rain, tryouts will be held the following weekend.

Players may not be 19-years of age before August 1, 1994.

Barbara Murray, Kerri McGlynn, Veronica Bertram and Laura Jordan finished first with a low gross of 67 at the President's Golf Course Ladies Association Florida Tournament held on Saturday, April 23.

In second were Susan Donovan, Elaine Hanlon, Erin Long and Dorothy Vekos with a gross of 69. In third, also with 69, were Sandra Jordan, Alice McGrath, Jane Shanley and Karen Darcy. Fourth place finishers, with a gross of 71, were Celeste Maloney, Carol Maglio, Nancy Perella and Helen Mulligan.

No-Tax Budget May Still Face Council Cuts

of not having to raise property taxes when the mayor's budget was submitted to them Monday night.

"We're certainly pleased with the fact that they'll be no new property taxes," said Fabrizio.

"We're making history." Council President

Michael Cheney credited the property tax situation to the cooperation between the city's legislative and administrative branches.

"The city is in great financial condition," said Cheney.

Sheets agreed that the proposed budget is a result of a collaborative effort between the City Council and the mayor's office. In a letter to the council, he highlighted some of the decisions that have helped the city's finances reach this point.

"When you voted in 1992 to distribute 1.06 percent of the health insurance savings to our employees who had accepted no raises for two years, you were actually voting for a no-tax increase in FY95," Sheets wrote. "When you voted to allow the (Quincy) hospital to refinance its bonds in 1994, you were actually voting for a no-tax increase in FY95."

Sheets said Tuesday the city has already saved around $8 million as a result of its decision to switch to a single health care carrier in 1992, and could save over $7 million more in the coming fiscal year. The city's unions would never have agreed to switch to a single carrier if not for the council's decision to grant them 1.06 percent of the savings, he added.

In addition, it has been estimated that Quincy Hospital's refinancing last year of a 1986 Federal Housing Authority bond issue will save Quincy more than $3 million as the hospital gradually assumes control for its annual $2 million pension liability that has been paid by the city since 1988 as the result of an FHA bond covenant.

The mayor, who recently said the improvement of the city's parks are priority for him, has proposed several additions to the parks department for a budget of $684,259, up from the FY94 budget of $633,194. The increase would allow the department to nearly double the number of maintenance workers it has, from seven to 13.

The mayor's proposed budget also calls for the addition of six new positions to the Quincy Department of Public Works. Sheets said his proposed DPW FY95 budget of $2,397,176, which he came up with in cooperation with the City Council Snow Task Force, will allow the DPW to provide enhanced snow removal and other services to the city. The FY94 budget for the DPW was $2,305,310.

Sheets said several other positions will be added in other departments, but he singled out a new position in the purchasing department as being particularly important. The mayor noted that as of July 1, school and city purchasing will be combined under the Quincy Purchasing Department. The proposed FY95 budget for the department is $218,537, as compared to the $210,615 budget passed last year.

Regarding the new pay scale for non-union employees, Sheets said the "standard measure" for the 8 percent increases was the average union employee increase of the last three years. The mayor said it has been 4 1/2 years since non-union salaries have been addressed.

The Bookmobile, which Sheets said was mainly being brought back to allow seniors and handicapped individuals a chance to have access to educational and cultural materials, will cost $25,654. Sheets said it has been about "three or four years" since the city decided to take the vehicle off city streets.

The mayor said he would have no problem with the City Council making any cuts in his proposed FY95 municipal budget.

"We sent down what I think is a very real budget," he said. "But they're a good council, and it's their job to decide where additional cuts could be made."

In addition to the fact that no new property taxes are proposed for FY95, Sheets said Quincy residents could save money on the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority water and sewer assessment. The MWRA may possibly recommend an increase of 0 to 3 percent, which means an average family of four may spend anything from nothing to about $20 more a year for the assessment in FY95, he said.

Sheets said the actual assessment will not be known until sometime next month.

'Would Create Retail Mix'

Developer: Wal-Mart Will Help Downtown

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The developer of a proposed Wal-Mart store next to The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point said Tuesday the downtown merchants of the city will not be harmed, and in fact will be helped, by the project.

Donald J. MacKinnon of Hingham said he has worked hard to meet the concerns of Quincy Center merchants as well as residents of The Falls and other people in the Quincy Point area. He added that although he felt there "clearly wasn't a consensus" at two public meetings held previously on the matter, residents and merchants alike will be happy to see he has made an all-out effort to keep everyone's best interests in mind.

MacKinnon, who also confirmed for the first time Tuesday that Wal-Mart would be the anchor store of the project—something he would not do in the past—said the project could actually help recreate a retail mix that once existed in the city.

"A retail mix is something we need to bring back to Quincy," he said. "With a Wal-Mart and Decelle coming in, that could begin to bring back that mix."

Quincy 2000, the company's public-private planning corporation, is currently negotiating to bring Decelle—a women's and children's clothing store that is a division of Burlington Coat Factory—to the site of the former Child World store in Quincy Center.

MacKinnon has built Wal-Mart stores in several communities, including Avon. His company, Atlantic Development Corp., now wants to build on 242,800 square feet at the intersection of Route 53 and Southern Artery. MacKinnon said construction could start by the end of the year and the project could be completed by the end of 1995.

The project calls for two facilities to be constructed at the site: the Wal-Mart store and a smaller building which would likely house a supermarket. MacKinnon said he has contacted both Shaw's and Stop & Shop about the possibility of coming to the site, adding that even if they both decline, he knows of others that would be interested.

MacKinnon added that a possible "junior anchor store" measuring about 15,000 square feet and

City Hall Phones Knocked Out When Cables Accidentally Cut

Phone problems at Quincy City Hall Tuesday were caused by the accidental cutting of underground cables, according to Mayor James Sheets.

Sheets said the cables were cut by officials from P.A. Landers, the Hanover-based company that is contracted to build the beautification project in front of New City Hall Annex which includes of "Walk of Names" composed of dark red, personally-engraved bricks. The accident occurred during construction of the project, he added.

The mayor said the Landers officials had received clearance to cut the cables from representatives of Massachusetts Electric who recently transferred their power supply from that source. However, Massachusetts Electric was unaware at the time that the City Hall phone lines were also powered through the cables.

Both the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) and New City Hall Annex were without phones until press time Tuesday afternoon, when the most of the telephone lines were restored. Backup portable phones were used by city departments in the interim.

Sheets said the "Walk of Names" and the rest of the related project remain on schedule and will be completed within three weeks. The $217,000 project was funded primarily by the sale of personalized bricks and other private donations, while a $50,000 bond issue covered site preparation, project design and layout, and marketing of the bricks.

Council Sets Dept. Budget Review Dates

The City Council Finance Committee will meet May 18, 24 and 26 to review and discuss with Quincy department heads the various FY95 city department budgets proposed by Mayor James Sheets.

All budget sessions will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall.

Twenty-three budgets, including those for the building, library and planning departments will be discussed May 18. Sixteen budgets, including the police, public works and school department budgets will be examined May 24, while 21 budgets including those for the fire department, mayor's office and any items currently on hold will be reviewed on the final date.

1500 Volunteers Clean Up 4000 Tons Of Debris

By LISA CONNELL
With thoughts of warmer days to come, Cleaner Greener Coordinator Michael Wheelwright began planning the annual citywide clean-up campaign last January as the snow fell and piled up outside.

The planning paid off. And although Saturday's sunny, balmy weather couldn't be planned for, it certainly helped the cause, according to Wheelwright. Wheelwright said this year's event, held last Saturday, May 7, was the most successful and smoothly run program ever in its five year history.

Nearly 1500 volunteers, including young children, collected close to 4000 tons of debris from sites all across the city.

The Cleaner Greener program, begun by Mayor James Sheets in his first year as mayor, is the city's official beautification and affirmation program.

"It has his signature on it," said Wheelwright about the program, "but he doesn't want people to think of it as his; it's Quincy's Cleaner Greener program."

Since the program's inception, Sheets has turned the management of the clean-up day, planned for a Saturday in May, over to the City Department of Public Works (DPW). This way, explained Wheelwright, the program is destined to continue throughout the years and outlast Sheets' administration.

Cleaner Greener Day affirms peoples' pride in their own city. The DPW appreciates it as volunteers do the city's initial spring clean-up, said Wheelwright.

Wheelwright said the volunteers have many success stories to tell, but he did point out the efforts of those responsible for cleaning Avalon Beach in the city's ward 2 section and Nickerson Beach in Squantum.

"[Those areas] look like they've been done with a fine-toothed comb," he said.

Entrances to the city, main thoroughfares and other areas of high visibility are key, and are done first. The clean-up of beaches, playgrounds and public parks is also a vital effort of the day, said Wheelwright.

Quincy Shore Drive, Furnace Brook Parkway, Keddy Park and the areas abutting MBTA stations were cleaned, along with the Welcome Young Playground.

It is encouraging to see some groups and businesses acting together, said Wheelwright. Specifically, the Raytheon Manufacturing Co. and Shaw's in West Quincy joint efforts resulted in a re-built backstop behind the baseball diamond at Sterling Middle School.

Other local companies, including MassElectric and Commercial Union Insurance (CU) in North Quincy also played a part in the beautification efforts.

Pam Sokol, personnel representative for CU, along with her four year old son and approximately 15 CU employees, cleaned up Squaw Park.

"We filled between 15

and 20 trash bags with glass, old chairs..." said Sokol.

"A few from our South Boston office, that live in Quincy, did this too [with us] and they enjoyed it. I'm already planning for next year's event," she said.

Despite the difficult economy of the last few years, Wheelwright is gratified that local businesses are still participating in the event, either in terms of volunteers or donations.

Mentioned as superstars by Wheelwright were Home Depot, who cleaned up O'Rourke Field, Curry Hardware, who spruced up Burgin Parkway, and Stop & Shop, who cleaned up the median strip from the Wollaston T station to Newport Ave. "All of these companies did work, plus made a considerable donation towards more materials for other volunteers to do work with," Wheelwright said. "He does thank Stop & Shop for donating about $1500 in free food for the cookout, Mayor Sheets acting as chef, that everyone enjoyed following the event."

"He takes every opportunity to get involved with the city," said Wheelwright of Sheets. "He doesn't micro-manage; he's very concerned. If you look around the city, he's out there, and we appreciate it; his staff does appreciate it."

connected to the supermarket might also be considered, but that would be the only other store at the site other than Wal-Mart and the supermarket.

MacKinnon noted that his original proposal called for a shopping mall that would include a number of stores anchored by Wal-Mart, but he decided to scale the project down in consideration of the downtown merchants.

The Falls condominium complex, which was scaled back during the recession, is less than a mile from the Quincy Center business district. Several Quincy Center merchants said in March they were discouraged by the proposed project, saying that a mall would hurt small businesses.

MacKinnon also said he has worked as hard as possible to alleviate any traffic or other concerns residents at The Falls and in the general area may have. Among his plans are to rebuild part of Falls Boulevard to separate commercial traffic from residential traffic and also to purchase land at the 28-acre site to build a "park area" as one of several amenities to insure property values at The Falls do not decrease.

The Massachusetts Highway Department had "no problem" when contacted about the proposed roadway change, MacKinnon said.

He added that the project would create 500 retail jobs and generate $610,000 in tax revenue for the city.

Mayor James Sheets said he feels MacKinnon has shown a willingness to cooperate with downtown merchants and residents of The Falls and Quincy Point. He said if all the issues that concern the residents are addressed and it is positively concluded that the project will not harm downtown merchants, he thinks it "could be an asset" to the city.

City Council President Michael Cheney, who attended both public meetings on the subject, said MacKinnon has thus far been "very co-operative" about meeting neighborhood and downtown concerns. He added, however, that he will reserve judgement on the project until he is certain all concerns have been met.

CUTTING COFFEE CAN GIVE YOU THE SHAKES

Coffee has had some pretty bad headlines splashed around it in recent years.

It's been blamed for everything from heart attacks to birth defects. Now there is some evidence that, for the sake of their health, drinkers of caffeinated coffee should think twice before dropping the habit.

A recent study has found that cutting out coffee drinking could suddenly and completely result in possibly severe headache, fatigue, fuzzy thinking, and mood swings. These symptoms may occur among quitters who previously drank as little as two cups a day of caffeinated coffee. Fortunately, the solution to the coffee-quitter jitters is simple: Kick the habit gradually. Taper off over a period of days or weeks.

You may switch first from coffee to less-caffeinated tea and then to herbal tea. If you'd like more information on this or any other column topic, feel free to call the doctors—myself or Dr. Lia Antonelli at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Maggie Bobby brought her home.

If there was a stray cat anywhere he was sure to find it. Or it him.

It was 1979. He was in junior high school and this little young tiger cat followed him home. That's what he said. I wondered.

"Can we keep her, Dad?" he pleaded.

"No," I said. "I don't want to get attached to another cat and go through that again."

We had lost another tiger cat—Maggie—to leukemia not too long before and after a blood transfusion.

This one was her look-alike except her double paws were gray and the other's were white.

"Oh, she's so pretty," my wife, Dorothy, said.

Yes, she was pretty. Very pretty. But I stood my ground. No way was she going to stay. I didn't want to get attached to another cat.

Besides, she had to belong to someone. So I told Bobby to check around the neighborhood and the area to see if he could find her owner.

He and a friend went out and sometime later came back and reported they looked everywhere but couldn't find anyone who would say the cat belonged to them. That's what they said.

Well, the cat stayed for the night but on the condition that a new search would be made the next day for the owner.

They went out again the next day and came back. No luck. That's what they said.

And, that's how our second Maggie (also known as Kitty) came to live with us.

The years went by. Bobby entered high school. Then college. Graduated. And got married.

And during that time Maggie became part of the family and I fell in love with her. She became my pal.

She always seemed to sit by me. Jump up into my lap and purr. Be waiting for me in the morning at the foot of the stairs looking up with those pretty green eyes. Follow me out to the kitchen looking for her breakfast. And, we'd talk. Yes, we would.

We have a cedar screen fenced-in back yard. She could be up and over that in nothing flat. But she wasn't a wanderer. She was a homebody. Never crossed the street.

She really loved the back yard, sniffing the rhododendrons, the other bushes and flowers. It was her back yard. She would sit on the picnic table near the kitchen window and look out on her domain. If another cat came over the fence, she'd issue a hissing warning and was ready to do battle. This is my yard! You don't belong here! Out!

Whenever she was out there and I couldn't see her, all I had to do was to clap my hands and she would appear from out of a bush and come running like a puppy.

But recently she started to slow down. She was getting on in years. She was now almost 15 years old—the equivalent of almost 90 years old for a cat.

She was having a few problems last January and we took her to a veterinary hospital. They kept her a couple of days for tests but could not detect anything serious. They gave us some medication for her and we brought her home.

But last month we noted she wasn't eating as much and she was even passing up her treats which she loved. She appeared to be losing weight.

We brought her back to the hospital. There were more tests. This time they showed what we hoped they wouldn't: Maggie had cancer—lymphoma.

She underwent abdominal surgery and the tumor was removed. But the cancer was going to spread and it did.

We visited her at the hospital. I petted her and talked to her and told her she was still pretty.

It was a sad setting. On one side of her was a cat with diabetes who was on insulin. Across the way was a basket bound—his name was Sam—who had a tumor which I think turned out to be benign. But he was blind, from glaucoma.

The next day we brought Maggie home and made her as comfortable as we could.

The veterinarian said we might consider chemotherapy and suggested I make an appointment with an oncologist at the hospital.

I went back with Maggie. While I waited with her in the examining room, an attendant weighed Maggie. I looked at the scales and decided there would be no chemo. It would be too much for her.

The oncologist came in and examined her. He agreed with me about the chemo. But was there something that could be done for her?

He said he could give her a cortisone-like drug that would help stabilize her and make her comfortable. She wouldn't be in pain. I agreed to it.

I brought Maggie home.

Three Sundays ago—that nice, warm, sunny one—Maggie wanted to go out in her back yard. I went out with her. She walked around slowly and laid down for awhile. I brushed her. After awhile she wanted to go back into the house.

Early that evening she was gone.

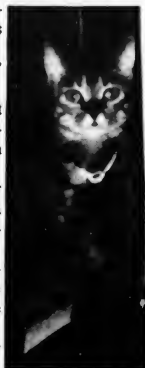

Bill Allen, a cabinet maker and friend, had built a box for her. My son-in-law, Jeff, came over to help me put her to rest with her toys in her yard.

Now there is a little Cape Cod white fence around her grave which is now also marked with a geranium.

I know some people will wonder why I'm writing this. But anyone who has ever loved a pet cat or dog—and in return been loved—will understand.

I'm writing this to let it be known that Maggie lived and was loved.

And, is missed.

QVNA HIV Service Coordinator Steve Wilson

'The AIDS Disease Can Happen To Anybody'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. The QVNA began its new HIV-AIDS program a couple of months ago. How did the idea for the program come about?

A. I wasn't involved directly with that; the Quincy AIDS Consortium was interested in having somebody on the South Shore to provide services to people living with HIV infection. A lot of people here were traveling into Boston, and they thought it might be nice to have something a little closer to home to work with—the doctors, and the nurses, and the clergy, and other people here who have provided services to people on the South Shore.

The close working relationship I can build with folks down here is a little easier because I know the resources that are here on the South Shore, and when they talk with a social worker up in Boston, sometimes the social worker has to do a lot of research to find out what's available down here.

Q. For the benefit of our readers, maybe you can just touch upon what the Quincy AIDS Consortium is all about.

A. It's a consortium of 30 service providers on the South Shore. They're hospital administrators, and doctors and nurses, social workers, addictions counselors, pastors—and it's my understanding they got together to educate themselves about HIV and what's available, and talk about how services are being provided out here and how they can coordinate those services, and do sort of document what has been going on down here. And then eventually to try and address the needs, and one of the ways that they address the needs is to write a grant to fund the position I'm working on.

Q. So that's your source of funding?

A. Well, the money actually comes from the state Department of Public Health; it was a modest grant, approximately $47,000. The funds are limited to 17 months, and it's unknown at this point if we'll be able to get more.

Q. What are the main goals of the new program?

A. Well, the main goal of the program is to help people living with HIV infection access all of the services that are available to them, to have a better quality of life, and to have the best health care possible. A second goal is to help with some of the emotional strain that comes with living with a chronic illness that has as much of a stigma as AIDS does. And the third goal is to deal with some of the practical problems that people are living with.

So I'll start with the first (goal): as a social worker, I have contacts with the disability determination unit that does the disability determinations for social security; I can help work something through that system, and I understand how the application process works. I can give people practical hints and tips, and really follow through with the whole thing. That's just one example: there are many, many publicly-funded programs in the state of Massachusetts to deal with everything from helping people pay for back rent, to getting reduced prices on their cable television, to paying for their insurance payments when they leave a job. So just knowing about the programs and how they all work is part of my training as a social worker.

For the second goal, I also have a background in mental health. So I can help with mental health emergencies, if somebody starts to feel suicidal or really upset, I can help them plan what to do next. Some people have a hard time sleeping, some people get very depressed, some people just want to know if what they're going through is normal and what they can do to help themselves. So I might meet with someone several times; we're going to have support groups, I can do individual counseling, I might refer them to a private therapist for long-term work or I might refer them to a

FULL NAME: Stephen Andrew Wilson

AGE: 31

ADDRESS: Boston's South End

OCCUPATION: licensed independent certified social worker (LICSW) for the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association; serves as the QVNA's HIV Service Coordinator

EDUCATION: graduate of Palestine High School in Palestine, Texas and Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J.; received M.S.W. (master of social work) degree from the University of Pennsylvania minister if they have spiritual questions.

FAMILY: single; no children

And the third part is a volunteer component. We'll be having volunteers who will help with child care, others who can sit with someone who's very sick, some to take people to and from medical appointments, and some to deliver meals. We'll also be having a "buddy system" where we'll have volunteers visit with people who are feeling lonely during the day. That's pretty much an overview of what we'll be doing.

Q. Do you have a need for more volunteers?

A. We always have need for more volunteers. We trained probably 20 to 25 new volunteers earlier this month, but we hope to have another training in the fall. And there's a wide variety of ways people could help, not just working directly with patients. We also have a need for people to do advertising, artwork, people with computer skills, and many other things.

Q. Do you know how many HIV and AIDS cases there are in Quincy, and do you foresee that number growing?

A. It's difficult to say. HIV is a reportable illness, but only when somebody develops full-blown AIDS. When that happens, the doctor is supposed to make a report to the Department of Public Health so the numbers can be counted. In actuality, we think the numbers are underreported; number one, because the doctors are just very busy and they don't have time to fill out the paperwork; and number two, because sometimes they want to respect the person's privacy as much as possible, so sometimes the reporting doesn't get done until after somebody dies.

So the number of people living with HIV who don't have full-blown AIDS is probably much, much greater than the number of people who have died from AIDS, but we have no way of documenting that, and that's certainly something I will be working on.

Q. How long have you been involved in this line of work, and what initially sparked your interest in it?

A. In the summer of 1988, I was volunteering for a crisis and suicide hotline, and Dr. C. Everett Koop, the U.S.

Surgeon General at the time, required that all states have an AIDS hotline. At the time, his mailing went out to all U.S. households. And the state of Delaware needed an AIDS hotline, so they asked me to put it together for them. I trained volunteers for them, and that's how I really got started.

And while I was working on the hotline, I met some social workers, and some people with AIDS, and it seemed like a good project. And my college roommate also died of AIDS at about that time. Eventually I worked for the local AIDS service organization in Philadelphia, and that led to a job at the Fenway Community Health Center in Boston for two and half years. I then took some time off to do some HIV-related research, and that's how I ended up here.

Q. AIDS is a growing problem for the entire world population, yet some still see it as a "gay disease." Why do you think that is?

A. Well, worldwide, certainly it isn't a gay disease. It's certainly a worldwide problem, but it happened to be first brought across the U.S. border by gay men. And they infected a variety of people, mainly gay people, because it is a sexually transmitted disease. So back then, it could be seen as a gay disease because it was only affecting gay people. But now it has spread into the general population, probably through bisexuals and intravenous drug users. The numbers of non-gay people with HIV is growing steadily.

Q. There's kind of a paranoia about AIDS, isn't there? People seem to think there's so many ways you can get the disease, but there's really not.

A. You're right, it's a difficult disease to catch. HIV is different because it's a sexually-transmitted disease; it's a blood-borne virus. The only way to really get the virus into your system is if somebody's blood, semen, breast milk or vaginal secretions come in contact with your blood supply. And that's a pretty difficult thing to do, unless you engage in some very specific behaviors. One of them is unprotected sex, and another is sharing needles with somebody. The only other really efficient way to get it is from mother to unborn child, but even that doesn't happen all the time.

Q. What do you think is the most important thing people should know about AIDS, and how can people best educate themselves about it?

A. The one most important thing people should know about disease is that it can happen to anybody, and that the infection can take an awful long time to produce symptoms, sometimes 10, 12 or 14 years. I've worked with some couples who have just been amazed that one of them has turned up HIV positive.

People can educate themselves about HIV in a lot of ways, and one-on-one is probably the best way. They can call an AIDS hotline, such as 1-800-342-AIDS or the AIDS Action Hotline in Boston. And parents should call to learn about steroid use and intravenous drug use, because there are high school athletes who are sharing needles. When you're talking with someone one-on-one like that, it becomes a very real problem.

The one other thing I think is important to say is that we are looking for people to use our program even if they're already getting services in Boston; we can be a nice adjunct to the services they're getting in Boston. We really want to work with everyone on the South Shore who's HIV positive. And people don't have to use their real names, they can use an alias. They can call and talk with me anonymously. And all of these things will help us keep the program open by proving to the Department of Public Health that we're filling a need.

Tri-Community Day At Fore River May 14

The Fore River MiniBays Project and the Fore River Watershed Association will hold a tri-community Fore River Day, Saturday, May 14 from 9 to 11 a.m.

Rain date is Saturday, May 21.

The groups are co-sponsoring the event which is being held to celebrate and enhance the Fore River, a recreational and commercial resource shared by citizens of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth.

Activities to be held in the three communities include beach cleanups and shoreline surveys in each community within the Fore River watershed.

The event offers citizens an opportunity to have fun getting to know the Fore River while working with neighbors to clean and protect it. Trash bags and gloves will be provided for the beach cleanups.

Shoreline survey forms will also be provided. Forms will be used to note the environmental conditions of the river, including suspected sources of pollution, such as pipes discharging into the river, and obvious signs of pollution, such as discarded objects and oil slicks. Wildlife and habitat observed along the river will also be recorded.

Following the activities at 11:30 a.m., refreshments will be available at Watson Park in East Braintree, courtesy of Boston Edison. Participants are encouraged to bring picnic lunches to Watson Park and attend a post-event get-together to enjoy the park and river with others.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said he, also, would reserve comment on MacKinnon's proposal until he has had time to discuss it with Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who was recently released from Braintree Hospital after suffering a heart attack and stroke in March.

"Now that Councillor DeCristofaro is back, I look forward to talking about the issue with him and getting his input on the matter," said Cahill.

A third public meeting at Quincy City Hall had been scheduled for last night but was postponed at the request of DeCristofaro, who wished to attend but was unable to because of a conflict. At press time no new date for the meeting had been set.

The project is currently undergoing a series of reviews for its impact on the environment, traffic, and neighboring residents and businesses. A Planned Unit Development (PUD) application will be filed with the city this Friday, MacKinnon said.

A PUD application would have to be approved by 2/3 of the City Council in order to take effect.

In addition, Quincy 2000 has hired an economic planning consultant, R.K.G. Associates of New Hampshire, to assess the impact of the project on the community. Atlantic Development Corp. is also headquartered in New Hampshire, MacKinnon said.

MacKinnon said he plans to buy two separate pieces of land to carry out the project. He has an agreement to purchase 12 acres from N.H. Funding Corp., which recently foreclosed on the property adjacent to fire-gutted Eddie's Diner.

He will acquire another 30-acre piece of property from an investor group, which purchased the parcel, along with other foreclosed assets, from Chase Manhattan Bank.

Wal-Mart has estimated annual sales of $45 billion, making it the largest retail operation in the country. It has been expanding significantly in New England in recent years, and now operates in 40 states. MacKinnon said the company was responsible for creating 77,000 new jobs in 1993.

The Arkansas-based chain has seven stores in the state and has announced plans for 14 others, including outlets in Abington, Halifax and Walpole. The communities of Westford and Greenfield have rejected Wal-Mart stores because they feared it would change the character of their communities.

Quincy Wins 3 State Community TV Awards

Quincy was well-represented at the recent ninth annual Massachusetts Community Television Awards competition at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, winning three first-place awards.

Two volunteers from Continental Cablevision won first place awards in the competition while a third first-place winner representing another cable outlet is a resident of Quincy.

Continental community volunteer Libbie Payne won for her two-part special "First Aid and the Home Medicine Cabinet." The first part offered advice from Quincy Hospital emergency room nurses, a physician and an EMT on emergency first aid procedures, while the second provided information on essential supplies to keep in the home medicine cabinet.

Payne is a certified physician's assistant and writer for The Boston Globe.

Continental's John Noonan won top honors for his magazine-style "Senior Beat" show for senior citizens which he has co-produced, directed and hosted for three years. The program seeks out subjects of interest to seniors and included segments videotaped on location, as well as reports on historic places in Quincy and advice for better living.

The winning "Senior Beat" episode included a segment on "100 Years of Quincy" involving a Quincy Historical Society exhibit and a personality profile on Quincy industrialist J.B. Grossman.

Statewide, Continental Cablevision programs won 15 awards, the highest total of any cable operator.

Philip Gavin of Quincy also won for his program "Songs of the Season." The show, which can be seen on Cablevision of Brookline/Boston, took first place in the Ethnic/Cultural by a Media Professional category.

The awards ceremony was sponsored by the Massachusetts Cable Television Commission.

Cellucci Commends Kiwanis For Promoting Bike Safety At Quincy Rodeo

Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci recognized the Massachusetts Kiwanis Clubs at a Quincy bicycle rodeo Saturday with a gubernatorial proclamation for their contribution toward safe bicycling education and sponsorship of community bike rodeos.

The Quincy Kiwanis Bicycle Rodeo, held at the Quincy Center for Technical Education, was one of 43 held to teach safe bicycling techniques to school age riders.

"The Kiwanis organization has contributed greatly toward the reduction of bicycle-related injuries through their educational efforts of helmet use and safe riding habits," Cellucci said.

Also commended at the rodeo was young bicyclist Michael Donato of Wilmington. Michael was hit and run over by a car while riding his bike near his Wilmington home.

Luckily he was wearing a helmet. Michael escaped with only minor injuries and has dedicated himself to helping other children understand the importance of wearing bicycle helmets.

Michael accepted a helmet signed by Gov. William Weld and received a special commendation for his efforts to educate other bicyclists. Michael was joined by his sister, Nicole, who won praises from Gov. Weld after spearheading a Wilmington petition drive for the newly adopted Massachusetts bicycle helmet law.

In March, a bicycle helmet law went into effect requiring all children age 12 and under to wear a properly fitted helmet with a secure head strap while riding on public ways and property.

Approximately 1,600 people are seriously injured in bicycle crashes every year in Massachusetts.

"Bicycle helmets reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent and the risk of brain injury 90 percent," said Nancy J. Luther, director of the Governor's Highways Safety Bureau.

"We are asking parents to protect their children by insisting they wear a helmet every time they ride on a bicycle and to set a good example by wearing one themselves," Luther said.

"The startling fact is that accidents kill more children than all other causes combined and injuries to cyclists are among the worst," said Burton Harris, M.D., director of the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute at the Floating Hospital for Children, New England

Medical Center.

Harris, who has treated hundreds of children suffering from serious injuries resulting from bicycle accidents said, "The Kiwanis Clubs have succeeded in moving bicycle safety up on society's agenda and deserve high praise."

As part of a statewide educational campaign, the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau distributed newly produced bicycle helmet posters and safe riding information cards to more than 450 retail outlets in the state which sell and rent bicycles. The agency distributed reflective stickers to rodeo attendees to make them more visible to motorists.

Approximately 150 bicycle helmets were sold at a nominal cost to children at the Quincy Kiwanis Bicycle Rodeo.

JOSEPH BARRETT gets some encouragement from Quincy Kiwanis Arden Schofield during the Kiwanis Bicycle Rodeo and Family Safety Day where bicyclists were encouraged to wear helmets.

New Date, Location For 'Family Festival'

By LISA CONNELL

The 'Family Fun Festival,' originally scheduled for April 26 through May 1, has been rescheduled and relocated due to tests that indicate the original Fore River Shipyard festival site is contaminated with lead, according to City Council President Michael Cheney, festival organizer.

The festival will be held Tuesday, May 17, through Sunday, May 22, at the Grossman's site, 100 Granite St., Quincy Center.

Cheney said tests conducted by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) confirm a high presence of lead at the original site.

Cheney said he ordered the MWRA to cap the site. The festival will be jointly sponsored by Quincy First Night and Fiesta Shows of Salisbury Beach, N.H.

No stranger to Quincy, Fiesta Shows has sponsored previous festivals at Marina Bay.

Fiesta Shows has a good track record of working with the communities they enter to hold festivals. This is apparent by the high number of repeat sites chosen for festivals, said Cheney.

The festival will close at 10:30 p.m., each night. A portion of the proceeds from this event will benefit Quincy First Night.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Suspicious Situations You Should Report

The following are some situations involving people you might observe. You should report these suspicious situations to police.

1. Someone is going door-to-door in your neighborhood. Watch for a while, if, after a few houses are visited, one or more of the persons tries a door to see if it is locked or enters a back yard, it could be a burglar. Such action is even more suspicious if one person remains in the front when this occurs, or if there is a car following a few houses away.
2. Someone is waiting in front of a house that is unoccupied. Someone is parked in front of a business that is closed.
3. Anyone using force to gain entrance to, or tampering with, a residence, business or vehicle, should be considered suspicious. Call the police.
4. A person running, especially if carrying something of value, could be leaving the scene of a crime.
5. Carrying property could be suspicious too, if it's at an unusual hour or in an unusual place, or if the property is not packaged as if just purchased.
6. A person exhibiting unusual mental or physical symptoms may be injured, under the influence or drug or alcohol. The person may need medical or psychiatric help.
7. Many people coming and going from a particular residence is not suspicious unless it occurs on a daily, or regular, basis, particularly at unusual hours. It could possibly be the scene of drug activity or a fencing operation to move stolen property. Call the police on any of the above situations. You could be saving your neighbors property or life.

The Variance And Special Permit Process

In a previous article relating to non-conforming uses of structures, I informed readers that I would explain the Variance/Special Permit process.

In a nutshell, zoning is comprised of ordinances and by-laws regulating the use of land, buildings and structures in a manner to protect the health, safety and general welfare of the present and future inhabitants of a city or town. The City of Quincy has had zoning ordinance regulations in effect since 1943.

If you are constructing an addition to your home that does not meet today's zoning ordinance, but the main structure which you are adding on to does, you would need a variance. If you are proposing a non-permitted use in a particular zoning district, such as a multiple family dwelling in a single family district, you would need a variance. If you wanted to add to a non-conforming structure (one built in compliance with the zoning laws in effect at the time of construction, but not today's) you would need a Special Permit/Finding from the Zoning Board of Appeal.

For one to gain a variance, it must be shown that:

1. There is a hardship with the soil, shape or topography of the land or structures involved.
2. With regard to the circumstances especially affecting the land or structures, a literal enforcement of the provisions of the Zoning Ordinances would involve substantial hardship, financial or otherwise, to the petitioner.
3. The relief requested may be granted without nullifying or substantially derogating from the intent or purpose of the Zoning Ordinance.
4. The desirable relief may be granted without substantial detriment to the public good.

A Special Permit/Finding carries less of a burden of proof:

1. The use should be in harmony with the general purpose and intent of the Zoning Ordinance.
2. The use should comply with the general or specific provisions set forth within the Zoning Ordinances.
3. Any extension, alteration or change involved shall not be substantially more detrimental to the neighborhood than the existing non-conforming use.
4. Any accessory use to the principal use should not substantially derogate from the public good.

With both the Variance or Special Permit/Finding, the Board of Appeal may impose conditions relating to time or use. Below, I have listed the different timetables and procedures involved for Variances and Special Permit/Findings once an application is transmitted to the Zoning Board of Appeal.

The timetable for a Variance is:

1. Public hearing within 65 days of filing application with the Zoning Board of Appeal.
2. A decision rendered within 75 days of filing.
3. A detailed record submitted to the City Clerk within 14 days of the decision.
4. A 20-day appeal period from the decision filing date with the City Clerk.

The timetable for a Special Permit is:

1. Public hearing within 65 days of filing application with the Zoning Board of Appeal.
2. A decision rendered within 90 days of filing.
3. and 4. same as timetable for a Variance.

It should be noted that the City of Quincy takes care of notification of abutters within 300 feet, parties of interest of the property involved and also, the required posting of hearing notices. The applicant is responsible for recording the Variance/Special Permit at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

Should any party of interest be aggrieved by a decision of the Zoning Board of Appeal, an appeal must be made in Superior Court no later than 20 days after the Zoning Board of Appeal decision notice is filed with the City Clerk.

As always, feel free to discuss your project with a Building Inspector.

SOME SOUND ADVICE FOR THE TEST DRIVE

One of the primary questions that new car buyers should ask themselves is whether they are purchasing an automobile or a radio.

To be sure, a radio/cassette/compact disc player is an important component of the car to most car buyers, but it should not be allowed to overshadow other factors of the car-buying process.

All too many prospective buyers are inclined to begin their test drive by turning on the radio. Doing so masks their ability to assess cabin noise at different driving speeds, as well as the throttle noise, the quietness of the heater fan and AC compressor, the sound of the engine, wind noise, etc.

Once the car has demonstrated its quality in these respects, by all means give the radio a good workout.

HINT: Prospective car buyers should also use a test drive to assess seating position, handling, and braking. LEO & WATTS SUNOCO is very proud of our technicians and of the equipment they have on hand to properly service your new or older car. At 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550), we are also very proud of the wonderful reputation we have earned by satisfying your friends and neighbors.

"A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon-Fri 6 am-9 pm, Sat 7 am-9 pm, Sun 9 am-5 pm. Watch this column in the weeks to come as we discuss many other important topics related to your vehicles.

Quincy Falls To Powerful Taunton Softball Team

By KERRY BYRNE

The Quincy High School softball team ran into a juggernaut named Taunton on Monday, as the Tigers walked away from Faxon Field with a 16-4 win and a 9-1 record.

Several top-notch Quincy performances were not enough to overcome a mighty Tiger squad that is among the best softball teams in the state.

The main weapons in the Taunton arsenal were pitcher Heidi Duarte, who, backed by stellar defensive play, kept the Presidents hitless into the fifth inning. The other key was a six-run explosion in the visiting half of the second which opened up the contest for Taunton.

Quincy scored its first run in the bottom of the third when Kelly Howard walked, went to second on fielders choice, stole third then went home on a wild pitch by Duarte.

The Presidents would have an explosion of their own in the sixth when they rattled the Tigers for three runs on three hits, including a home run and a triple.

With lead-off hitter Katie Gallagher on third and one out, hard-hitting sophomore Kerri Connolly stepped to the plate and ripped off a shot that got past the outfield and cleared the base paths. It was only the second home run for Quincy this season and it came against the best pitching staff in the Old Colony League, if not the state.

The Presidents were not done, however. First baseman Nicole Domina followed up Connolly's blast with a triple. She came home on a wild pitch that closed out Quincy's scoring.

"Nicole hit very well today," said Quincy High coach Bud Mosher. "She almost beat the defense with a long hit in the second (a rocket that was caught deep by the Taunton center fielder) and then she did beat them with her triple."

Quincy also got exceptional play in the field; facing a line-up filled with hard-hitting and experienced batters, they played near error-free ball.

Howard, Quincy's number one star, made two exceptional plays from left field. Included were a running, back-hand, shoestring grab of a line drive, and a leaping stab that hauled in a potential home run shot.

In the fifth inning shortstop Gallagher basked a line-drive rocket that was just inches off the ground. In the fourth she anchored a 1-3-6 double play that helped limit the Tigers to just one run; pitcher Danielle Perry stopped a bullet and threw to first for the first out and Domina turned the play fast enough to nail the lead runner at second.

"Katie is mentally our headiest ball player," said coach Mosher. "She knows what she's doing out there. She has played with the boys in the past and she brings a lot to the field that some other players don't have."

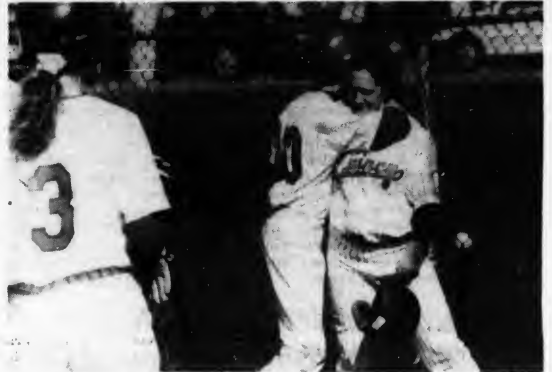

Gallagher was also responsible for eight putouts in the game. Two were running stabs at ground balls after which she tagged second for the unassisted force.

As to Quincy's top performer, Howard was responsible for the Presidents' first base runner, first run and first hit. Also reaching base for the Presidents were Lauren Farrell, and walked in the third but was thrown out stealing third, and Caitlin O'Connor who walked in the fifth.

The Presidents were scheduled to take on arch-rival North Quincy on Tuesday, May 10, in a make-up of a previously rained out contest. Their next home game is Friday as they host Bridgewater-Raynham.

PRESIDENT LAUREN FARRELL is tagged out as she tries to steal third in Quincy's 16-4 loss to the high-powered Taunton Tigers.

QUINCY SLUGGER KERRI Connolly is congratulated by Katie Gallagher after the two scored on Connolly's sixth lining round-tripper.

QUINCY FIRST BASEMAN Nicole Domina runs to third as Taunton's Jen McGuinness is unable to get a handle on the ball. Domina later scored on a wild pitch.

Babe Ruth

Fire Dept. Washes Out Golden Print

In Babe Ruth League action, Fire Department erased Golden Print, 9-2, behind the 3-hit performance of pitcher Mike Doyle.

Doyle went seven innings, walking none while striking out 12. Doyle's battery mate Billy Walker was the hero at the plate, uncorking a bases-loaded double and a single. He recorded three RBIs. Walker also did a great job defensively in his first Babe Ruth game as a catcher.

Other hitters for Fire

Department were Jose Diaz who hit a solid double and Jamie McDonagh who had single and an RBI.

Golden Print was shutout until the seventh inning when Billy Barron reached on an error and Brian Beaton hit a double to knock him in. Pat Donovan sent Beaton home with a single.

Ryan Ploof recorded the victory for Morrisette Post as they topped Houghs Neck, 4-2.

Houghs Neck pitcher Aaron Marshall fanned 11 batters in the loss.

Mike Green belted a single and a double for Morrisette. Jeff Feiner and Mike Centrella were the defensive stars.

Snug Harbor Senior Division Champion

Snug Harbor captured the city championship in the Quincy Recreation Department's Senior Division basketball tournament with a 62-35 win over Bernazzani.

Snug Harbor jumped to a 37-21 halftime lead as Terry Bowman scored 15 of his 17 points in the first half. Tom Clark led all scorers with 19, including two 3-pointers. Dave Sawan and Jay Downey scored 10 and nine, respectively, while contributing to a quick and constantly changing defense. Peter Orseno (4), Kevin Norton (2) and Scott Pye (1) rounded out the Snug Harbor scoring.

Bernazzani used a variety of defenses and different player combinations but were unable to consistently combat the speed of Snug Harbor.

Six players scored for the always hustling Bears. Scott Kelly led his team with 15 points. Geoff Meade scored eight, while brother Chris scored four and led all rebounders.

John Mahoney also scored four while Ryan Herlihy and Liam Griffin both netted second half baskets.

It was the second consecutive city championship for coach Mike Norton's team.

It was Bernazzani's first appearance in the finals in just their first year with a team. They were coached by Dan Coughlin and Brian Buckley.

In final four action, Brendan Ridge (20 points) and Scott Kelly (19) led Bernazzani to a 62-55 come-from-behind win over Merrymount.

Merrymount, led by Jeff Keddy with 15 points and Tom Satkevich with 14, held an 11 point lead at the half. Other scorers for Merrymount included Greg Shea (11), Sean "No Game" Thomas (6), Dave Keddy (5), Greg Stipkovich (2) and Jim Conrey (2). Chuck Feeley played a strong all-around game and Greg Phillips provided much needed bench support for coaches Debbie Vacca and Joe Murphy.

Snug Harbor advanced to the championship round by taking a commanding 42-22 first-half lead over Point Webster. Tom Clark dominated the game, finishing with 35 points in the 83-59 win. Coach Mike Connor's team rallied behind Keith Martinson's 21 second-half points (33 total) but couldn't catch the tough Snug Harbor team. Other scorers for Point Webster included Toby Odom with 10, Todd Sullivan with eight, Patrick Joyce with four and Mike Kiely and Mohammed Nahas with two each.

Balzano Welcome Addition To USM Baseball Squad

Tom Balzano, a 1991 graduate of Quincy High School, stepped onto a University of Southern Maine baseball team that was loaded with talent. With a host of all-stars and All-Americans returning, positions were hard to come by.

But Balzano isn't likely to spend much time on the bench this season. After 14 games in a Husky uniform the transfer from Massasoit Community College leads the team in several offensive categories.

Balzano, a catcher who has also earned time at the designated hitter slot, came to USM after helping Massasoit win the 1993 Junior College national baseball title. Despite competing for time behind home plate with last year's ECAC Player of the Year, Pete Misiaszek, Balzano has been on a hitting tear few teams have been able to handle.

"Tommy didn't take long to prove he can play at this level," said USM coach Ed Flaherty, whose team is currently 17-4. "He has one of the more powerful bats I've seen at the Division III level and always seems to come up with a big hit."

Balzano currently boasts a .492 batting average with 34 hits in 69 at bats. In 18 games played he has scored 27 runs, hit nine doubles and driven in a team-high 32 runs. He recently turned in a 5 for 5 day at the plate as the Huskies ripped Husson College, 17-8.

The Huskies have had little trouble scoring runs this season. USM has a multitude of big bats, but Balzano's has been a welcome addition.

"Our level of play, competing against some of the best Division III teams in the country, is quite a lot higher than you'd find at most junior colleges," said Flaherty. "Tom has had little trouble adjusting to the stronger pitching or the better defenses. It makes you wonder what he might have done already if this was his third season at USM instead of his first."

Balzano is working toward a degree in criminology at Southern Maine. He is the son of Mary and Anthony Balzano of Quincy.

Nigro To Participate In N.E. Bicycle Tour

Michael Nigro of Quincy will take part in the New England Classic Bicycle tour for the benefit of the American Diabetes Association.

The event is a seven-day ride covering 500 miles of back roads and countryside in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

The ADA initiated the New England Classic in 1992 with great success, and the 1994 tour is expected to fill to its capacity of 150 participants.

"Last year's event drew cyclists from all over New England. This year cyclists have signed up from all over the country and as far south as Texas!" said ADA Development Director Rick Reilly.

Car Wash-Bottle Drive At NQHS Saturday

The North Quincy High School Girls Volleyball Team and Boosters Club will sponsor a Car Wash-

Bottle Drive-Bake Sale Saturday, May 14 from noon to 4 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

Proceeds will help support the North Quincy High School girls volleyball team.

North Quincy's 'Charity' Gives Taunton Track Win

A charitable move by North Quincy High School girls' track coach Geoff Hennessy resulted in a 65-56 loss to Taunton.

When the undermanned Tigers showed up with only 15 girls Hennessy offered first-year coach Steve Hutchinson to not run the 2-mile as Taunton had no athlete to run it. The Red Raiders gave up a sure nine points which proved to be the margin of victory. The loss of those points also meant that North had to win both relays to win the meet, but the Tigers took the 4x100-relay to clinch the victory.

"We didn't perform badly on the track - blame it on the coach," said Hennessy after the loss.

An injured Jen Pineo also hurt the Red Raider cause. The sophomore standout suffered a rare loss in the shot put due to a pulled muscle in her back.

North Quincy's victories during the meet were turned in by Mel Gaziano on the 800-meters, Erin Duggan in the mile, Phyllis Poon in the 100-meter hurdles and Pineo in the discus.

Second place finishes were made by Diane Kane McGunigle (400), Ursula Feurtdo (800), Suk Ng (100-hurdles, 300-hurdles), Katy Deady (long jump), Aja Jackson (triple jump, high jump), Pineo (shot put) and Heather Simmons (javelin).

Third place performances were turned in by Deady (100), Jackson (200), Melissa Debonis (400), Laura Blaikie (mile), Casey Ng (long jump), Amalia Solano (triple jump), Wingsze Yuen (shot put), Maureen Sullivan (discus) and Erica Crawford (javelin).

On Sunday North Quincy participated in the Falmouth Invitational. Despite a cool east wind, the competition was red-hot. Sophomore hurdlers Poon and Ng both advanced to the Freshman-Sophomore finals with Poon taking third and Ng finishing sixth. Poon's time of 16.8 was close to the school record of 16.6

and is the fastest at North in years. Ng ran a 17.4 and qualified for the state meet. She qualified in the 4x100 the previous week.

Pineo won the Freshman-Sophomore discus with a toss of 92". She took second in the shot with a heave of 31'10". Yuen placed fourth with a personal best 287". Marianne Blaikie took sixth in the discus with a throw of 69'11", also a personal best.

In Junior-Senior action Duggan placed fourth in the mile.

"We seem to be a better invitational meet team than a dual meet team," said coach Hennessy. "Big meets bring out the best in us."

North met Weymouth on Tuesday, May 10. They take on Bridgewater-Raynham Monday, May 16 at Veteran's Memorial Stadium.

Several North athletes will take part on the State Coach's Invitational at Apponquet Regional High School on Saturday, May 14.

Saluti Leads St. John's Bowling

Bob Saluti high triple of 315 was right on par with his St. John's Holy Name Bowling League-leading average of 105.07.

Mike Priscella remains at the number-two spot with a 101.15 average. He is followed by John Grande (97.42), Jim Mastrantonio (94.74) and Rich Warner (93.70).

Saluti also rolled the week's high single, 122. Dan Dieso had the second best high triple (293) and high single (110).

The team standings: Bobs, 70-42; JimS, 66-46; JoeM, 60-52; Mike, 56-56; JoeZ, 47-65; John, 37-75.

The week's team high triple and team high single were recorded by JimS, 1059 and 373.

Baseball

North's Rally Falls Short Against Plymouth

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

A brave seventh inning rally fell a half-step short as the North Quincy High School baseball team dropped a tough 7-6 decision to Plymouth.

North (3-8) played Quincy in a make-up game on Tuesday, traveled to Falmouth yesterday (Wednesday) and will play at home against Barnstable this Friday. They will travel to Silver Lake on Monday.

North trailed, 7-4, going into the bottom of the seventh when Tim Zanaboni opened with a single. He advanced to second on a Sean Dolbere groundout and scored on a Brian Oliver single.

After a Mike Santoro walk, Steve Koch singled in Oliver to make the score 7-6. George Wirtz walked to load the bases for Dan Duncan who grounded into a double play, a play that saw Duncan come just short of reaching first base which would have allowed the tying run to score.

Plymouth (which will split and play with two schools next year) got on the board first in the second inning when Martin Ferry hit a long triple to center field and Todd Rzdzeszewski knocked him in with a groundout to first base to make the score 1-0.

The Blue Eagles extended their lead in the fourth beginning with a Billy Wzters triple. He came home on a Ferry single. Keith Long then drove in Ferry to give the visitors a 3-0 advantage.

North, after going down in order in the first three innings, got their chance to do some damage in the fourth inning. They took advantage of this chance and scored four times to take a 4-3 lead.

Koch led off the inning with a single and advanced to second on a throwing error by Plymouth's pitcher. Wirtz followed with a walk. Jim Sapienza drove them both in with a single. After an A.J. Carthas strikeout Zanaboni tripled to left field, scoring Sapienza. He scored himself when Paul Egen's throw to third went wide to give the Raiders their first lead of the game.

Plymouth bounced back in the fifth when Jeff Paluseo singled and Egen walked to set up Wzters. He hit a sacrifice fly to drive in the tying run. The go-ahead run was scored when Ferry singled in Egen to give the Eagles a 5-4 lead.

Plymouth added to their lead in the seventh when Ferry collected his fourth hit of the day, a single to drive in Lynn Finley. Finley singled and stole second to open the inning. Ferry scored on a Rzdzeszewski base hit to give Plymouth a 7-4 lead.

"I'm pleased with the way the kids played today," said North Quincy head coach Leo Donovan. "They didn't give up and fought back in the seventh inning with two runs and just missed getting the third run with the bases loaded."

Duncan pitched his second complete game in as many starts, giving up ten hits while walking three and striking out four.

MICHAEL DesROCHE, a 1993 graduate of North Quincy High School, recently signed his letter of intent for the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. A former honor student at North, DesRoche will play hockey at the Academy. Seated with him are his parents, Ann and Stephen DesRoche. Standing are his homeroom teacher James Murphy (left) and North Quincy assistant hockey coach Robert Doyle.

Farm League

Krystinak Fans 9 For Sweeney's Victory

Paul Krystinak recorded an amazing nine strikeouts in three innings on the mound as Sweeney's Funeral Services topped Nation One, 9-1, in Farm League action.

Craig McKechine blasted a grand slam to bust the game open in Sweeney's seven-run third inning.

A four-run fourth inning lifted Reggie's Oil to a 4-3 win over DiBona Plumbing and Heating.

Marc Lopez pitched three innings of shutout baseball and hit a home run for DiBona.

Two runs in the top of the first inning were all Sweeney Funeral Services needed to post a 2-0 win over Donut King.

Sweeney pitcher Alan Marano and Donut King hurler Anthony Boyle both looked good on the mound. Jennifer Jacques drove in the winning run.

William Cosgrove was the winning pitcher as Sweeney recorded another win, this time topping Paul Hogan Family, 9-4.

Derek Jacques hit a home run and Paul Krystinak nailed a two-run base hit in the winning effort.

The two squads met one other time, with Hogan family earning a 2-1 win.

Pitchers Joe Troila and Joe Priscella combined to shut down the Hogan attack. Steven Priscella scored the game-winning run in the fourth when Carter Dufrane was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded.

Continental Cablevision fell behind early but rallied to beat A.H. Campbell and Sons, 11-4.

Jimmy Constat pitched three innings of no-hit baseball with 8 strikeouts as BFI topped Matarazzo, 14-7.

Dave Kusy (four RBIs) and Joe Bleakney (three RBIs) both went 3-for-3 at the plate.

After falling behind 3-0, a 10-run burst in the bottom of the first lifted South Quincy Bocce Club to a 13-4 win over A.H. Campbell and Sons.

Toodles outgunned Yellow Cab, 17-14.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Dr. Samuel Johnson's injunction "Keep your friendships in respect" should be applied to books as well as to persons.

Books are friends at all times if we treat them well; we can enjoy their companionship when human friends have passed beyond our reach or have grown out of us. In every phase of life they are loyal friends, and, if they show signs of wear, that only proves how much we have cared for them. They repay us by linking youth with middle age and refreshing us in our later years as they inspired us in our earlier years. Unlike friends who never answer letters, our books always speak when we open them.

Books are keys to wisdom's treasure.
Books are gates to lands of pleasure.
Books are paths that upward lead.
Books are friends. Come let us read.*

"We have an organization called Cleaner-Greener Quincy," wrote Susie to Sheets. "It might sound familiar. We plan to clean up Quincy. I thought we had to ask you. I think it's important."

Sheets responded quickly to Susie's letter.

"Thank you both for your interest in the City of Quincy. If everyone felt the way you and Kiley Ann do, this would be the cleanest city in the United States," wrote Sheets.

Sheets, whose administration started the Cleaner-Greener program during his first term in office, suggested that the two girls contact Program Manager Michael Wheelwright to coordinate clean-up efforts in Donovan's neighborhood.

Susie and her friends, Verislotsky, Sheri McCusker and Laura Matos, plan to focus their clean-up efforts in Bishop Field because "it's really on the untidy side."

"We were just outside and we saw how vandalized the city looked...and I just wanted to look at the place and see what needs to be done and what doesn't," Susie said in a recent interview.

Susie and her friends are planning to help Wheelwright neaten up the area near her neighborhood.

"I am always intrigued by kids who take on projects like this," said

Wheelwright of Susie. "She's just one of those wonderful little ladies who's going to go places in this world."

"Susie, one of four wonderful kids, has always been very focused," said her mother, Helen Donovan.

"She leaves a mark wherever she goes; she's great, she really is. Some of my strongest memories of her at an early age are hearing her say that she is going to go to Simmons College, that she is going to become a veterinarian and that she and I will visit Australia on one of Susie's college vacations, Mrs. Donovan said.

When asked about her future plans and without any prompting, Susie repeated the above information.

Susie, the daughter of Helen and John Donovan, lives at 44 Sagamore Ave. with her three brothers, Shaun, 15, Reid, 11, and Ryan, 5.

Hospital To Hold Free Eye Screening For Seniors May 14

Quincy Hospital will hold a free Eye Health Screening for senior citizens Saturday, May 14, from 9 a.m. to noon.

The screening is part of an annual statewide event cosponsored by the Massachusetts Society of Eye Physicians and Surgeons (MSEPS), The Executive Office of Elder Affairs and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

At Quincy Hospital, Drs. Domenic Strazulla and MaryJane McCarron will screen for glaucoma, cataracts, macular degeneration and other eye diseases common to seniors. The screening will also include vision and blood pressure testing. There are a limited number of appointments, so call 773-6100, ext. 4018 to register.

The ophthalmologist volunteering for the screening are members of MSEPS, which represents 350 ophthalmologists (medical eye doctors) practicing in Massachusetts.

Age-related visual problems that can lead to permanent loss of sight if not detected early include:

- Glaucoma. This rise in fluid pressure inside the eye, which may occur without symptoms, may result in damage to the optic nerve and loss of sight. If detected early and treated with prescription eye drops, vision loss can be prevented.

- Cataracts. Clouding of the normally transparent lens inside the eye can lead to severe vision impairment and require surgery. When the cloudy lens is removed, it may be replaced by an intraocular lens transplant, which allows the eye to focus clearly again.

- Degeneration of the macula. This condition, which is caused by a deterioration of the macula, the central part of the retina, leads to loss of central vision. While there is no cure for the common form of macular degeneration, an ophthalmologist can prescribe special low vision aids that will improve vision for reading and close-up tasks.

You should see an ophthalmologist if you have any of these common warning signs of eye disease:

- Loss, blurring or any change in vision.
- Flashes or streaks of light.
- Eye pain or unusual sensitivity to light.

Woman To Be Charged In Fatal Car Crash

District Attorney William Delahunt is seeking a vehicular homicide charge against a Quincy woman in connection with a fatal collision while she was being followed by police last October.

Delahunt said last week he will ask a grand jury later this month to indict Marianne Sullivan, 41, of 21 Taffrail Rd. In addition, a police officer who was involved with the accident has been cleared.

Police said Sullivan was driving a Ford Escort that officers Michael Sullivan and Joseph Sullivan were following Oct. 29 when their police cruiser collided with a Hyundai driven by Dolores Murray. The officers are not related and neither is related to Marianne Sullivan.

Murray was injured in the crash and her 71-year-old passenger, Mary O'Leary, was killed. Officer Michael Sullivan, who was driving the cruiser, was also injured in the accident which occurred around 10 p.m. at Sea and Jewett streets.

Marianne Sullivan's car crashed on Sea Street a few minutes later, according to police. She was arrested on charges of drunken driving, leaving the scene of an accident and operating to endanger.

In a prepared statement, Sullivan said her attorney would request an independent investigation.

"My lawyer warned me that I would be indicted after it was too late for an unbiased person (to run) against Mr. Delahunt," she said. "Why does it take from October to May to complete an investigation?"

Delahunt is up for reelection this year, and May 3 was the deadline for entering the Democratic and Republican primaries.

Deputy District Attorney Matthew Connolly, who led the investigation, said Sullivan told witnesses the accident occurred because the police were chasing her.

Delahunt said there is "no question" Officer Michael Sullivan acted appropriately in pursuing Marianne Sullivan's car.

Connolly said the two officers were parked at the public library on Sea Street, where they say Sullivan's Escort was traveling 5 to 15 m.p.h. over the speed limit. They followed the car on Sea Street, and as the cruiser approached Jewett Street, Murray turned off Jewett Street onto Sea Street, directly in the path of the cruiser.

Connolly said the cruiser's blue lights were on during the pursuit. Last fall, some witnesses had said the lights were off, but Connolly said most witnesses said either the lights were on or that they could not remember.

Connolly added that the blue lights stopped flashing after the accident, when firefighters cut the battery cables.

Delahunt discussed the investigation's findings recently with O'Leary's son and daughter, Tim O'Leary of Weymouth and Mary Ellen Connell of Milton.

Mayor James Sheets and Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson both said they were satisfied with the State Police investigation, which followed a preliminary review by Quincy police.

Local Officials Would Consider Ballpark Here Sheets: City Could Score With Red Sox

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets and other city officials said Tuesday they welcome the possibility of the Boston Red Sox moving to Quincy if a proper location could be found for a new ballpark.

The officials made their comments following recent published reports quoting Red Sox owner and CEO John Harrington as saying the team is considering alternative sites for its home, including areas around Route 128. Sheets said assuming a feasible site were located in the city and residents' concerns were addressed, bringing the team to Quincy would be a major plus.

"You don't rule anything out," he said. "I'm not going to initiate anything, but I would respond to their initiative."

However, Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning organization, said he has already contacted team management about bringing the team here. He said they would not yet comment on their exact plans but put Quincy's name on a list of other communities eager to become the team's hometown.

Planning Director Richard Meade said bringing the Red Sox to the city would be beneficial for a number of reasons.

"It would help tourism, it would help employment, and it would help business," said the mayor, who added that he has no plans personally to contact Red Sox management but would be glad to sit down and discuss the matter if they contacted him.

Pneumatic Scale Site Rezoned

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Pneumatic Scale site on Newport Avenue in North Quincy has been rezoned from Industrial "B" zoning to Planned Unit Development (PUD).

Ward 3 City Councillor Lawrence Chretien, who introduced the proposal to rezone the site, said at Monday night's council meeting the public will be better protected by the change.

"PUD would offer extra protection," said Chretien. "Industrial 'B' allows a lot of uses that would not be in harmony with the neighborhood."

Pneumatic Scale plans to sell the site in the near future, although city officials are hopeful the company will remain in Quincy. Stop & Shop has expressed interest in the North Quincy site and may soon file a permit to move there.

Under PUD, the City Council is the special permit granting authority for any businesses wanting to come to the site. While the City Council had changed the Industrial "B" zoning last year to give them that authority over the site, that change only applied to retail stores of 5,000 square feet or more. Another type of business, such as a factory, could still apply to move in by right, according to Planning Director Richard Meade.

In addition, Meade said PUD means that a positive

Home Quarters Withdraws Quincy Construction Plans

Home Quarters has withdrawn plans for a new store on the Braintree-West Quincy line from the city.

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio apologized to residents who showed up for a scheduled City Council public hearing on the proposed project Monday night, saying that Atty. Robert Fleming of Quincy, legal counsel for the company, announced Home Quarters' decision to withdraw the plans from Quincy at the last minute.

Although a letter from Fleming to Council President Michael Cheney does not specify the reasons for the withdrawal, Fabrizio said he believes the company decided not to go ahead with the project in Quincy because of opposition from Fabrizio and area residents.

Home Quarters had planned to build a 102,940 square foot home improvement retail store in Braintree near the town line. Although the majority of the project would have been Braintree, there would have been some construction on Willard Street in Quincy, including a partial roadway allowing access to the store.

Fabrizio said the company still plans to build the store with all proposed construction to take place in Braintree.

Liquor Store License Suspended Seven Days

By LISA CONNELL
Murphy's Liquors, 385 Hancock St., North Quincy, received a seven-day suspension of their liquor license by the City License Board Tuesday for selling alcohol to an underage person.

Murphy's night sales manager, David McGinnis, of South Boston, appeared before the board with Quincy attorney Louis Cassis.

Murphy's proprietor, R. David Hosmer, was unable to attend the hearing due to illness.

The incident resulting in Tuesday's decision occurred last March when Quincy police officer Stephen Kelly, walking his beat in the Norfolk Downs section of the city, observed a youth, exiting Murphy's, carrying a case of beer.

Kelly walked over to Officer William O'Neil, who was sitting in a patrol car parked about 50 feet from the front door of Murphy's Liquors.

Both officers observed a paper license plate on a vehicle nearby. Because of the nature of the plate, the vehicle was pulled over, at which time Kelly recognized that the youth in the back seat, later identified as Daniel Danis, was the same person who emerged from the package store with the beer.

O'Neil found the case of beer on the floor of the car.

After a careful search of the back seat, police found an expired Pennsylvania license ticket between the rear seats.

Arrested at the scene were Edward Doyle, 19, operator of the car, and Daniel Danis, also 19. Danis was charged with purchasing the alcohol.

Kelly testified that when he entered Murphy's with Danis, Murphy's sales clerk, McGinnis, denied that he had sold alcohol to the youth.

Similarly, Danis said that he had not been carded by the clerk at the time of purchase. Danis also denied that he had purchased the beer with an expired or altered i.d., according to Kelly.

"McGinnis did not see Danis in the store nor did he sell the beer to him," said Cassis. "Danis may have picked up the beer and simply walked out of the store with it."

McGinnis was the only employee in the store at the time, according to Cassis.

"I think it would be pretty difficult to take a whole case out; it's cumbersome and I think you'd notice it. I can see how one bottle might get out," said City Clerk and Licensing Board Chairman Joseph Shea.

"I have cautioned Murphy's about the liability of taking out-of-state license's. No matter what you take, it can't be expired," said Laracy. "Murphy's has never sent anyone in to take an i.d. [identification checking] class."

Not only did the picture on the license not bear any physical resemblance to Danis, according to Laracy, but also the license was stamped, right on the front, as being a junior driver's license for an under-21 year old operator.

Noting Hosmer's illness that have kept him away from overseeing store operations, Cassis said, "Hosmer is very concerned and will get back and ask his employees to get to these classes."

"I don't think it's ask," said Building Inspector and Board Vice Chairman Matthias Mulvey, "I think it's tell."

City Liquor Inspector Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy said Tuesday that he had warned Murphy's management and sales clerks on numerous occasions about checking in-state and out-of state license and identification cards.

Verbal warnings were given on at least one occasion when police discovered a sale of an alcoholic beverage by a Murphy's clerk, to an underage person, according to Laracy.

The board unanimously voted to follow policies established by the police after unannounced on-site inspections of several Quincy package stores November 23, 1991 found store personnel serving or selling to underage patrons: a 7-day suspension of a liquor license for a first offense and a 30-day suspension of a liquor license for a second offense.

Police Chief Francis Mulven said, "It's been a detriment as we haven't had many problems before us [since then]."

Cassis was told that he has five days to appeal the board's decision to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

Household Hazardous Waste Collection Saturday At DPW

By LISA CONNELL
Household hazardous wastes. Don't let the words scare you; everyone has them. It's just a matter of knowing how to get rid of them.

Aerosol spray cans, paint thinner, liquid drain cleaner and household cleaning solutions—typical household hazardous wastes stashed under the kitchen sink or in the rear of the back porch closet—will be collected by the DPW Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the DPW site on Sea St., behind the police station.

Over the six hour period the DPW expects approximately 500 residents to bring a wide assortment of items to the DPW site totalling nearly 2000 tons.

"This is the third of a series of collecting household hazardous wastes. It is open to Quincy residential clients only—this isn't for commercial clients, such as dry-cleaners or photographers or other people with special requirements," said Program Manager Michael Wheelwright.

It is the mayor's and DPW's policy to hold an annual or semi-annual hazardous waste collection event, said Wheelwright.

Ultimately, the state Department of Environmental Management would like all 350 cities and towns throughout the commonwealth to hold regularly scheduled hazardous waste collection drives, he said.

Old paint cans, pesticides, household cleaning solutions, garden supplies, aerosol cans, drain cleaners and solvents: all will be picked from the residents' car trunks by hazardous waste specialists, Triumvirate Environmental, Inc. of Dorchester. Residents are asked to pack their items in a box and put the box in the trunk of their cars; the box will be removed by Triumvirate's collection specialists.

"Such drives are organized in the fall (October) and spring (May) because that's the way people arrange their household cleaning. There incineration.

is more tonnage collected in the spring because of recreation-related activities," said Wheelwright. "We usually collect at least one auxiliary gas tank from an outboard motor boat engine."

He expects automobile batteries and lead paint to continue to comprise the two largest categories of items collected.

Waste that is collected, explained Wheelwright, is sorted by standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The EPA determines the degree of severity of toxicity of particular items. p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy.

Invited guests include Quincy Park Director Ray

Ward 6 Community Meeting

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy.

Invited guests include Quincy Park Director Ray

Cattaneo and John Powers, director of the Quincy Softball League. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss issues related to the Welcome Young Ballfield and any other issues pertaining to the ward.

"I encourage the residents to attend community meetings to find out more about the various programs the Atlantic Neighborhood Center is offering," Ayers said. "Your input allows me to best represent you in City Hall."

Social Security Cards Needed When You Apply For A Job

By CAROL L. BOYLE

School is nearly over and students across the nation are getting ready to start hunting for summer jobs—some for the first time.

One thing to remember is that job applicants will need to show an employer-to-be their social security card.

Most young people whose parents claim them as dependents for income tax purposes already have a Social Security number as the law requires. But, if you have never had a Social Security number, you'll need to apply in person at your local office. For South Shore residents, your local office is located in Quincy.

If your card has been lost or stolen, you can get an application for a free replacement card by calling the toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213, any time of the day. Or you can visit your local office.

Providing the correct name and Social Security number to your employer ensures that you will get credit for your earnings and that your Social Security earnings record will be correct. Your future benefits will be based on this record, so it's important that it be accurate. Workers can check their earnings by completing a Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate request form available from Social Security.

Just call the toll-free telephone number and ask for this form.

(Carol L. Boyle is Social Security Manager in Quincy.)

SUBTLE SYMPTOMS OF STROKE

Prompt medical attention for a stroke - within the first six hours at least - can minimize damage and save lives. Unfortunately, many people aren't familiar with the signs of stroke. One of the most ignored symptoms is a sudden tingling or numbness in some part of the body. If such sensations occur for no apparent reason, emergency help should be sought immediately. The same advice holds for any sudden, unexplained loss of hand strength, as in the inability to hold on to a cup of coffee. Other symptoms calling for quick action include a sudden inability to speak or understand someone else's speech, dimming of vision in one or both eyes, sudden onset of "rubbey" legs, or a sudden, excruciating headache.

P.S. At least half a million Americans suffer strokes every year, many during people's prime working years.

Never ignore puzzling symptoms. Don't assume the worst—but do seek prompt medical attention. For more information on this, or on any aspect of heart disease, call the doctors, myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our office is located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Cahill's Book Due In Fall

Councillor Tim Cahill may soon be spending as much time on the lecture circuit as on the campaign trail.

His first book—a four-year research, writing effort—will be off the press in the fall and it should bring him a few speaking engagement invitations as Quincy's newest author.

The book is entitled "Profiles In The American Dream."

It's not about wanting to be mayor, governor or president or anything to do with politics.

It's about the tough world of business, a subject Cahill, as a businessman himself, (owner Handshakes Restaurant in Quincy Sq.) knows pretty well.

The 150-page book with photos, profiles, four Horatio Alger-like figures in Quincy's business history from 1888 to the present:

• Louis Grossman, who as a door-to-door peddler with a sack on his back blazed the trail for the home building materials giant, L. Grossman & Sons.

• Howard Johnson, who didn't do too well selling cigars, but found success with a secret ice cream recipe, parlaying it into a restaurant-motel empire.

• William Rosenberg, who started out with a canteen truck bringing coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches to local factory workers which was the humble beginning of the now famed national-international Dunkin Donuts chain.

• Peter O'Connell, who sold newspapers in front of City Hall and at the Quincy Shipyard and used the money earned to buy a parcel of land which later was the starting point of one of New England's largest development firms.

"It's been a long four year project," says Cahill, "I didn't think it would take that long. But I'm glad I started it and happy that I saw it through."

Cahill selected the four as his subjects because they started from scratch and became successful after overcoming obstacles in the up-and-down, do-or-die world of business.

He is now poring over galley proofs and doing a little revision touch-up. Publisher is Christopher Publishing in Hanover. The initial printing will be 2,000 hard-cover copies.

Cahill plans to have a book-signing reception shortly after the book is off the press. He hopes to have Rosenberg and O'Connell, Johnson's son, Howard B., and Grossman's grandson, Mike Grossman as guests at the reception.

In case you are wondering, he has no plans to write a book on Quincy politics.

Well, not right now, anyway.

GOOD NEWS: Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland and former Assistant Tom Burke are both out of the hospital and recuperating at home.

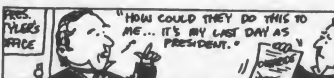

TOLAND

BURKE

Toland was a patient at Milton Hospital where she was admitted in April with a medical problem. She hopes to be back at her City Hall desk soon.

Congress first overrode a Presidential veto on March 3, 1845.

Burke suffered a heart attack around the same time and was admitted to Quincy Hospital. He was later transferred to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston where he underwent surgery and a pacemaker was implanted.

He says he's feeling good.

(P.S. He still has that old Tom Burke sense of humor.)

CAHILL

SMALL WORLD DEPT: Following a recent conference at the U.N. offices in Vienna, Austria, former state Senator Paul Harold was introduced to a friend of a friend, Elizabeth Maurer. When Harold told her he was from Quincy, MA, he didn't have to tell her where that was. It turned out that she was a German exchange teacher at North Quincy High School in 1976.

Senator Michael Morrissey's re-election announcement party was set for last night (Wednesday) from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quarry St. Tickets $12.50. (If you get the Sun on Wednesdays, you can still make it.)

School Committeeman Sean Barry has a "Reduce The Debt Celebration" tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at Coddingtons Presidents Place, Quincy Sq. Tickets $20 per person, $30 per couple.

Most of Barry's debt is for legal fees in the recount of that historic election battle with Christine Cedrone.

When the ballots were counted election night in November, Cedrone was an eight-vote winner. But a recount showed the pair tied—believed to be a local election first—with 5,734 votes each.

At a joint convention of the City Council and School Committee to fill the seat, Barry got the final nod on a 9-4 vote.

BARRY

A reception honoring Mayor James Sheets is scheduled for Thursday, June 2 at 6 p.m. at the National Fire Protection Association, Batterymarch Park. Tickets are $100 per person.

$2 M Borrowing Sought To Build Schools

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin presided at a meeting of city and school officials and legislators to discuss a bill currently before the Committee on Municipal Finance that would allow Quincy to borrow $2 million outside the debt limit for school construction.

May 19-25
44 Years Ago

The legislators present, Reps. Charles W. Hedges, Avery W. Gilkerson, Alfred B. Keith and William W. Jenness, were urged to put their prestige behind the bill to insure a favorable report from the Committee. The bill had been filed by Jenness.

City Auditor Alexander Smith said the present borrowing capacity inside the debt limit was $590,000 and that would barely cover anticipated borrowing to purchase New Haven Railroad property, the Rock Island sewer project and replace old equipment.

A borrowing of $2 million, he said, would mean 75 cents or less on the tax rate.

The proposed $2 million loan would cover three major projects on the School Committee's schedule for the next two years: elementary schools in Germantown and on Fenno St., Wollaston, and an addition to the Trade School.

LONG ISLAND BRIDGE

Boston Mayor John B. Hynes announced plans to proceed immediately with construction of a viaduct from Squantum to Long Island at a cost of $2.7 million to save Boston about $200,000 a year in ferry service to transport employees of Long Island Hospital.

The central span of the 3,450-foot bridge would have a clearance of 53 feet at mean low tide, which would allow all but deep water vessels to pass from Boston to Quincy waters between Moon Head and Long Island.

WATER ABATEMENT PROPOSED

Cit Councillor David J. Crowley proposed that the city abate all water bills for the first half of 1950 as a means of easing the financial burden on Quincy residents. It would, he said, have the effect of reducing the tax rate by about $1.30.

Deadline to purchase bricks for the granite statue to be dedicated at West Quincy's Shea Park in June in honor of the city's granite workers is May 31.

The $20,000 project is being funded by private donations collected by the Association 4 Neighborhood Association.

All Our Thanks, To All Of You

Editor, The Quincy Sun: The snow and cold of winter has passed and people's thoughts are turning to the warmth of summer.

It is at this time of year that the supplies of neighborhood and organizational food banks drop to their lowest point of the year.

On Saturday, May 14th, the National Association of Letter Carriers in conjunction with the U.S. Postal Service in Quincy, ran, what we hope to be the first in an annual collection of non-perishable food stuffs directed expressly for these food banks.

The results was more than we could ever have dreamed. Through the good hearts of the good people of Quincy the amount collected was approximately 8-10 tons of food. This food was collected on Saturday during the day, and by 6 p.m. that night, it had all been distributed to the various points in the city.

We are proud to be the postal service here in Quincy, and even more proud of the people we serve.

Quincy Teen Mothers Program Coordinator Janice Walsh:

'Quincy's Teen Birth Rate Is Not Increasing'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. Let's begin with the origin of the Quincy Teen Mothers Program. How did it all start?

A. It was started 16 years ago by (Quincy Assistant School Supt.) Dr. Carol Lee Griffin and Dr. Linda Shapiro, who is no longer with the school system. They came up with the idea, basically, to bring the girls of the City of Quincy who were pregnant and isolated at home with home tutors together for education, support and social services. And it was Dr. Shapiro who basically designed the program and found Bethany Congregational Church as space to rent.

Q. What was Dr. Shapiro's position with the schools?

A. I'm not sure. Dr. Griffin could tell you that.

Q. What are the main sources of funding for the program?

A. There are many sources. Part of it comes from the Quincy Public Schools; a lot of it is outside funding. A lot of it comes from federal and state grants, particularly the Department of Social Services, and a lot of it is fund-raising. We do a lot of our own fund-raising. We just had a Las Vegas Night at the Knights of Columbus; we recently had a Fashion Show sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women. We have a lot of different fund-raisers.

Q. What is the approximate annual budget for the program?

A. I'm not sure. I don't see the whole budget, mainly because the sources of the income are so diverse. You would have to speak to Dr. Griffin about that as well. [Ed. Note: Repeated attempts to reach Dr. Griffin by phone were unsuccessful.]

Q. How many people do you have on staff?

A. In the classroom, we have five teachers or guidance counselors. In the nursery we have five paid staff members, and then we have about six volunteers.

I just want to qualify that in the classroom, not everyone is full-time. We have a full-time guidance counselor, a full-time English teacher, a part-time business and math teacher and a part-time tutor. I am the full-time coordinator and also the family life education teacher.

And it's the same thing in the nursery: those five aides are the equivalent of about four full-time aides. There's two women that do a kind of job-sharing. And not all of the volunteers are there at once; on average, about two are volunteering at any one time. So therefore, in the nursery—we have an infant room and a toddler room—there are always three adult women in each room at all times. And in addition to that, the girls (mothers) also spend time in the nursery as well. So at any given time, there could be four, even five people in each room taking care of the babies.

Q. And all of the mothers are from Quincy?

A. Yes. Since the program is part of Quincy Public Schools, they must be living in the City of Quincy.

Q. How many girls do you help in the course of a year?

A. It varies from year to year; this year, about 25 and last year, about 35. On average, about 12 to 14 girls graduate from the program each year with a high school diploma.

Q. So it's definitely a pretty big problem here in the city.

A. Well, it's a national problem as well as a city problem. One interesting statistic that I just got from the Department of Public Health, however, is that Quincy's teenage birth rate has been stable for over 10 years. The birth rate to teenagers in the country is increasing; in the City of Quincy, it's not. And my belief why that's happening is that because of the Quincy Teen Mothers Program, while girls do get pregnant and have one baby, they don't have a second. And that's where I think the increase in the national teen birth rate is, and

FULL NAME: Janice L. Walsh

AGE: 41

ADDRESS: Braintree

OCCUPATION: coordinator of the Quincy Teen Mothers Program for four years; overall, has been involved with the program for nine years. Previously, she taught as a business teacher at Quincy High School for 11 years

EDUCATION: received bachelor of science degree in business education from Salem State College, 1974; received master of education degree from Boston University, 1979

FAMILY: the former Janice Leahy, she and her husband Tom have two children: Gregory, 14 and Kaiti, 11.

why I think Quincy's teen birth rate is not increasing. I've only researched the past 10 years' health statistics, but in that time, the city's birth rate has remained stable.

Q. Do the fathers of the babies have any involvement at all with the program?

A. Some do, some don't. They're not involved with the program per se, because this is a program for the mothers. The fathers can continue their education at Quincy High School, if that's where they are. We do encourage the fathers to be involved if they are, in fact, around; better than 50 percent of the girls no longer have any contact with the fathers of their babies.

But the ones that do, we do work with the girl and the boyfriend—or on occasion, the husband—if they need to get counseling together. The fathers of the babies are welcome to come to the program to visit; the fathers are welcome on field trips and wherever else we can allow.

Q. So the exact services of the program are mainly educational, as well as child care while the mothers attend classes?

A. Yes, that is exactly right. This is an alternative high school. They come to Quincy Teen Mothers and they remain in our, basically, one-room schoolhouse. And they take all of their academic subjects here; they take English, family life, computers, math and functional competency. And they can get a full five courses, which is equal to 25 credits, in a year, just like they could if they were at Quincy High School.

In addition, they take the course which is unique to us: family life education. And that, in particular, is their parenting class, but it covers a really wide range of topics, including prenatal development, labor and delivery, child psychology, nutrition, health, birth control, AIDS education, teen violence, and others. What makes this program unique is that course in particular and all of the social services that come with those subjects. We have a nurse who visits once a week; we also have an outside health educator who comes to the program. We offer services that are targeted particularly for this population that they can't get anywhere else in the school system.

Q. You also hold an annual graduation, just like Quincy High. That must be very emotional, since you have such tight, close-knit little groups here.

A. Yes, it is very emotional. And you're right, we do get very involved with the girls and the girls, in turn, get very involved with us. And it is difficult for everyone to separate after however long they've been here.

Another reason why it is emotional is that every one of the girls gets up and speaks at the graduation. And they basically give a brief review of their time in the program and what the program has meant to them. And every person who has ever attended a Quincy Teen Mothers graduation has said that it is the most beautiful and emotion graduation in the city.

Our next graduation is Thursday, May 26 at 7 p.m. in the Allen Parlor at Bethany Congregational Church, and everyone is welcome.

Q. Do you ever hold reunions for graduates of the program?

A. Yes we do, as a matter of fact. We do it about every other year. We do lose contact with some of the graduates, but we try really hard to keep current names, addresses and phone numbers of girls as often as we can.

Q. How do the girls initially come to you for help?

A. There are many different ways they're referred here. Frequently it's a guidance counselor from a high school; sometimes it might be nurse in a school or a clinic or a hospital. Sometimes they're referred by welfare or the Department of Social Services, and sometimes they refer themselves. Usually, somebody knows about Quincy Teen Mothers Program, and they'll just call us up and say, "I'm pregnant and I want to come to your school."

Sometimes there can be an obstacle after they tell their parents they're pregnant. Some parents are very supportive and very helpful to their daughters; some are not, unfortunately. As a matter of fact, we have some girls who live in shelters because their parents no longer want them in the house when they find out they're pregnant.

And unfortunately, we have very limited space and we have a waiting list for the program. So it's first come, first serve; the faster someone calls us, the better.

Q. The girls must be very scared and confused when you first meet with them.

A. They are afraid and apprehensive when they first come to Quincy Teen Mothers. But after awhile, they let their guard down, and they really become very comfortable. And they enjoy learning for the first time in their lives because this experience is unlike any school experience they've known before.

We have a very good rate of post-secondary education for these girls. Of the eight that are graduating May 26, six have plans for something after high school—whether it's Quincy College, or one girl, this year, who has joined the Air Force—and I think one or two are undecided.

Q. Is it especially hard for you seeing the girls' problems since you have a daughter of your own?

A. I think being a mother makes me a more sensitive and caring coordinator, if that's possible. Because I do see a little bit of a daughter in all of these girls, and so I understand some of what their mothers must be going through with them, and I do feel a maternal instinct to these girls. So I think, actually, being a mother only helps me with my job.

Chamber Board Endorses Independence For Quincy College

The South Shore Chamber Board of Directors is endorsing the plan for an independent board of governors for Quincy College.

Charles Simpson Jr., president of the Quincy Savings Bank and chairman of the Chamber board said, "Quincy College has become a vital resource to the entire South Shore as well as legitimate alternative for students seeking quality education at reasonable costs. We believe the time has come to separate the college from the school system and make it a department of the City of Quincy."

The chamber's legislative group made the recommendation to support the legislation moving control of the college from the Quincy School Committee to a separate board of governors because of its concern for education in the area. The chamber believes that Quincy College can play a larger role, particularly when it comes to job-related education.

"Jobs will more and more depend on a well-educated, highly skilled work force. We want to do everything possible to encourage educational opportunity both for young people and adults," said Anthony Agnitti, government affairs vice-chairman for the chamber and owner of Agnitti Insurance Agency, Inc. of Quincy. "Clearly, Quincy College has a mission extending beyond the City of Quincy to the entire South Shore, one which we see as very important since so many of the college's programs are career-oriented."

The chamber board's action is being communicated to the legislature, as well as city and college officials.

City's Crime Rate Down 21.3%

The city's crime rate in 1993 was 21.3 percent lower than that of the previous year, according to a recent state report.

Although the city's murder rate increased in that time period, numbers show that rates for rape, robbery, assault, burglary, theft and car theft were all down. The city's numbers are comparable to those of the state, which saw a 14 percent increase in murder last year but a 4.7 decrease in overall crime.

There were two murders in Quincy last year and one in 1992. However, the city saw a decrease in all other categories:

•Rape: 27 in 1992, 24 in 1993.

•Robbery: 76 in 1992, 64 in 1993.

•Assault: 224 in 1992, 222 in 1993.

•Burglary: 968 in 1992, 653 in 1993.

•Theft: 1,823 in 1992, 1,443 in 1993.

•Car Theft: 725 in 1992, 617 in 1993.

Mayor James Sheets said he was "thrilled" about the state report and attributed the decrease to a number of factors that have helped boost the strength of the Quincy Police Department. Among those he listed were the introduction of a K-9 Unit and Special Operations Unit, the addition of more motorcycles to the department and implementation of more foot patrolmen in city neighborhoods.

The mayor also expressed disappointment with another local newspaper that he said chose not to prominently display the crime statistics as it should have.

"In my opinion, it's a Page 1 story," said Sheets. "And I'm sure that newspaper would have put on Page 1 if the crime rate had gone up."

The only local community that saw a larger one-year decrease in crime was the Town of Norwood, which saw an overall decrease last year of 25.6 percent. The town did not have a single murder in 1992 or last year.

$40,000 Appropriated For Old Colony Station Design

The City Council Monday night approved an appropriation of $40,000 for the preparation of a design of the proposed Old Colony Railroad station in Quincy Center.

The funds were taken from the city's reserve for appropriation account.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, said the MBTA asked Sverdrup Co. of Boston, the design consultant working on the Old Colony project to prepare the proposal at Sheets' request. The city's contract is with the MBTA, but the T "subletted" in order for Sverdrup to prepare the proposal, she noted.

Mader said the $40,000 will fund the following work tasks:

•Study of the feasibility of whether one track can support a station at that location or whether it would be necessary to have two tracks.

•Preparation of a conceptual drawing of the station for presentation purposes.

•Preparation of a conceptual order of magnitude estimate of the capital costs necessary to construct the station.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said he feels it would have made more sense to put an Old Colony station in North Quincy or South Quincy, where the majority of Quincy jobs are, but noted that the city was recently informed that the Quincy Center was the only Quincy site considered for the station.

"That's (Cahill's feelings) just water under the bridge now," he said. "I think that some station is better than no station."

Sheets said Tuesday that the city should be able to get the $40,000 back once construction on the federally-funded project begins. He added that if all goes according to schedule, the Quincy station should be ready to open by the end of 1996.

Board Approves License For Merrymount Restaurant

The Custom House, a restaurant planned for the site of the old Fox and Hounds in Merrymount, was given the green light Tuesday by the License Board as the board voted to grant the madagers of the future restaurant a common victualer - all alcoholic beverage license.

The vote was continued from an April 26 board meeting. The board's decision was unanimous.

Paul, Flaherty and Susan Manning, co-proprietors of the future restaurant, also received approval by the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) recently, allowing them to move forward with their plans for the site's renovation. The site has always been occupied by a restaurant.

Counsel for the restaurateurs, John McGlone, said Tuesday that the ZBA approved Flaherty and Manning's plans but with 16 conditions, 13 of which deal with the restaurant's operation, including on-site entertainment.

City Clerk and License Board Chairman Joseph Shea said he would discuss several of these conditions with ZBA officials as they did not fall under the concerns of the zoning board, including the entertainment and lounge operating hours.

"I want to reserve the right to discuss the entertainment license with the zoning board. That condition is under the purview of the License Board," said Shea.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Suspicious Situations You Should Report: Suspicious Vehicles

The following situations concerning vehicles should be reported to the police.

1. Any vehicle moving slowly and without lights, or following a course that appears aimless or repetitive should be considered suspicious. Occupants might be "casing" the area for places to rob or burglarize. Vehicles acting suspicious around schools, parks or playgrounds should be considered suspicious and reported to police. These individuals could be drug dealers or sex offenders.

2. Parked vehicles, with one or more persons inside, should be considered suspicious particularly if they are observed at an unusual hour. These individuals could possibly be lookouts for other burglars.

3. Vehicles being loaded with valuables are suspicious if parked in front of a closed business or unoccupied residence. A thief may go to the trouble of placing signs on his vehicle to make the vehicle appear legitimate.

4. Apparent business transactions conducted from a vehicle should be considered suspicious. More so if the vehicle is parked around schools or parks. The occupants could be drug dealers.

5. Anyone being forced into a vehicle could be a kidnapping victim or a rape victim, call police immediately.

6. Abandoned vehicles parked on your block could be stolen cars.

While most, if not all, of the suspicious actions described could have innocent explanations, the Quincy Police would rather investigate a suspicious situation than be called when it is too late. Your call could save a life, prevent an injury or stop a criminal act.

What to Report:

Description of persons: clothing, age, race, sex, height and weight (approximate), any unique characteristics, such as scars, tattoos, jewelry.

Description of vehicle: make, model, body style (2 door, 4 door, station wagon, truck), license plate number and direction of travel.

Remember to get as much information as possible and report it to the police IMMEDIATELY. CALL 911 or 479-1212. You will not be required to identify yourself. The sooner you call the sooner we may catch the thief.

Leo Kelly Receives EPA Merit Award

Leo J. Kelly of Quincy recently received an Environmental Merit Award from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) at Faneuil Hall in Boston.

The awards are given annually to outstanding environmental advocates who have made significant environmental contributions in their communities. This year, 13 winners were selected from nearly 100 nominations in the Boston area.

Kelly, a former Ward 1 city councillor, has been chairman of the Quincy College Environmental Fair for the past six years and chairman of the Quincy Evergreen Program for four years. The Quincy Evergreen Program allows Quincy residents to recycle used Christmas trees and holiday wrappings.

Kelly's involvement in

the environment goes back a number of years. As a ward councillor, he brought charges against the Metropolitan District Commission which owned the then-running Nut Island pumping station after raw sewage overspilled into the water of Quincy Bay. He later helped initiate the EPA's $250,000 study of the bay.

Kelly received the EPA merit award after being nominated by Margaret Milne of Quincy.

Approximately $3,900 was raised Sunday for the Quincy Police Athletic League as more than 500 runners from throughout the South Shore region and beyond ran the third annual 3.5-mile Quincy PAL Road Race.

This year's race brings the three-year total to nearly $14,000. Proceeds benefit the Quincy PAL which sponsors activities and events for local youth.

North Quincy Routs Barnstable, 10-5

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

Friday the 13th turned out to be a lucky day for the North Quincy High School baseball team as they played their most exciting game of the season against the Barnstable Red Raiders and came out as 10-5 victors to improve their record to 4-10.

North was scheduled to play at Billerica on Tuesday and return to Adams Field Friday to play Taunton. The Tigers defeated North 3-2 in their first meeting this year.

After a quiet first inning, North went to work on Barnstable hurler Peter Princi in the second. Tim Zaniboni opened with a walk followed by two straight singles by Brian Oliver and Lee Hughes to load the bases. Steve Koch then grounded out to first, scoring Zaniboni for a 1-0 lead. After a George Wirtz walk and Dan Duncan single loaded the bases again, Jim Sapienza collected his first of three hits on the day, a single scoring Oliver and Hughes. Duncan scored on a wild pitch to give North a 4-0 lead after two innings.

Barnstable scored twice in the third on back-to-back doubles but North got one back in their half of the inning when Sean Dolbere opened with a single, then advanced and scored on wild pitches to give North a 5-2 lead.

Barnstable scored in the fourth on a walk, stolen base and sacrifice fly to make it 5-3.

North answered with two more in the fourth. Duncan opened with a double and scored on a Sapienza single. After a Zaniboni walk, Dolbere grounded out to second, scoring Sapienza. The run extended North's lead to 7-3.

Barnstable scored their last two runs in the fifth inning on a lead-off single, walk, RBI-single and sacrifice fly.

North bounced right back with a three-run attack. Hughes walked and Wirtz singled, and both scored on Sapienza's third single. Sapienza scored on a wild pitch to complete the 10-5 victory.

"Duncan did a nice job pitching," said head coach Leo Donovan. "We got some timely hits and the defense was outstanding. I'm pretty pleased, as the boys are, with this game."

Duncan pitched another outstanding game for North. In seven innings he allowed eight hits and walked two while striking out five (all in the last three innings). Mike Santoro played well for North in center field, making three putouts.

North's victory is even more sweet for Donovan and his players because it puts aside painful memories of a 26-2 defeat to Barnstable earlier this season.

13 Inducted Into Quincy High Baseball Hall Of Fame

A grand collection of baseball talent was on hand as thirteen former Quincy High School baseball stars were inducted into the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame.

The players, ranging from Jerry Hughes, class of 1923, to Jimmy Bandera, class of 1982, were honored by friends, family members and followers of Quincy High baseball.

Also inducted were Jay Desmond, '31; John Menz, '36; Lou Marini, '46; Vinny Moscardelli, '54; Bob Quintiliani, '67; Kevin Ryan, '68; Jay Caron, '72; Frank DiSalvio, '74; Steve Infascelli, '76; Paul Ferris, '76 and Mike Scurti, '80.

Hughes, who played pro ball with the New York baseball Giants, was the first man to be honored. He was represented by his son Jerry. According to event host and Hall of Fame committee chairman Joe Brill, Hughes' baseball ability took him away from Quincy High before graduating. He attended Dean Academy before going to the big leagues. The late Hughes was represented by his son Jerry.

The late Jay Desmond, class of 1931, also spent time with the Giants in their minor league system. Desmond was a man ahead of his time; he knocked in the game winning run in the first pro game ever played in Quincy, a 6-2 win over Worcester, and was a star soccer player long before the sport was popular among the youth of Quincy. Desmond's daughter Kathleen accepted on his behalf.

Menz was introduced by Bill Sullivan as a true hall-of-famer, "someone who consistently performs above and beyond expectations...one who leads by example." Also a member of the Quincy/North Quincy Football Hall of Fame, Menz became a three-sport star at William & Mary College. He served in the United States Navy in the Pacific during World War II.

Marini earned eight letters as a football, baseball and basketball star at Quincy High. As a soldier in the U.S. Army he played baseball in Hawaii and Japan during the post-war era.

"I have to thank my brother James for my being here," said Marini. "Our father died at an early age and James gave me the tools to succeed as an athlete." Among his fondest memories was practicing at Fenway Park as a young man and hitting the Green Monster while using bats that were used by players such as Johnny Pesky, Bobby Doerr and Ted Williams.

As a young man Moscardelli was a strong-armed quarterback and excellent southpaw pitcher at Quincy High. In turn he has served the youth of Quincy as a teacher and as principal for eleven years at Central Junior High School. He has been a good friend to the athletes of Quincy.

As a member of the first all-New England team, Moscardelli also had the chance to play at Fenway Park.

"I was fortunate enough to have a dad who spent tremendous numbers of hours in the backyard with me. Who knows how many windows were broken," he said with a smile.

Former Quincy High baseball coach Bob Basiliere introduced the next group of inductees.

"When I first saw Bob Quintiliani he must have weighed 110-pounds soaking wet," said Basiliere. "But he grew into a great second baseman on one of the best Quincy teams I've ever coached."

Quintiliani starred on the 1967 Quincy High squad that won the Greater Boston League title with a 14-3 record. "It was so much fun. I enjoyed the game of ball. No, I loved the game of ball," said the jubilant Quintiliani.

"Ryan epitomized what it meant to be a scholar/athlete. I had to fight to get him out for baseball because he was such a good football player," said Basiliere of the former Turkey Day MVP.

Ryan also pointed to family support as one of the main reasons for his success as a young athlete.

Caron provided the evening's best lesson, one that should be heeded by Academy Award winners. "I want to thank my mother, coach Basiliere and coach Mosher, and remembering to keep your speeches short - thank you," said the to-the-point Caron.

According to Basiliere, after high school Caron signed a contract with the Texas Rangers and "is a very unique individual and a fine product of Quincy High."

Bud Mosher introduced the final round of players.

DiSalvio was among the most surprised of the inductees. "When Brill called me to tell me the news it was really an unexpected honor," said the former star pitcher and 350 hitter.

Infascelli was thankful towards his former teammates and coaches.

"My experience at Quincy High was fantastic, but it also laid a very good foundation for me later in life," said Infascelli. And then, nodding towards Mosher, he added, "Coach had a special enthusiasm for the game that rubbed off on all of us - I'd like to thank you for that experience."

Ferris, a former catcher, was a "coaches dream" according to Mosher. "A hard-nosed, hard-working kid."

"You play for the love of the game," said Ferris. "You don't expect anything in return. When you're recognized by your coaches and your peers it truly means something special."

Ferris also pointed to his family as the foundation of his athletic career. "I'd like to thank my dad who's no longer here. If it wasn't for him I'd probably be a pitcher - and not a very good one," he joked.

Mosher admitted a mistake in dealing with Scurti, the next inductee. "As a coach I almost blew it with this guy. I sent him down to j.v. twice because I didn't think he could hit the ball. He batted over .400 his senior year."

"Joe Brill called me three or four weeks ago and told me about this evening. I was very taken aback by it all. Like the others said, you didn't play for the honors, you played for the love of the game," said Scurti.

Mosher reserved his loftiest praise for Bandera. He was celebrated by Mosher as "the best hitter in eastern Mass., maybe the entire state. He hit .510 his senior year, not an inflated .510, because I was very tough on him. If he was a questionable play I marked it an error, not a hit. He was a marvelous baseball player."

"After listening to the accomplishments of the other players I don't even know if I belong here," said the emotion-filled Bandera. "I'd like to thank my coaches who are all here...but most of all I'd like to thank my family. My mother and father and my high school sweetheart - the mother of my son Jack - my wife Karen."

KEEPING AN EYE ON AUTOMOBILES

Although the automatic transmission is the most complex mechanical device to be found on a modern car, its maintenance requirements are relatively simple. One task that car owners can perform for themselves in this regard involves checking the transmission fluid level on a monthly basis. In most cases, this means checking the fluid level on the transmission dip stick, with the car at operating temperature and the transmission shifted into neutral. Automatic transmissions also have filters which should be changed every two years (or 30,000 miles). This is a job for the auto technician. Filters are designed to remove metal shavings that result from transmission wear. If filter changes are neglected, it can leave these particles free to clog tiny valves and cause rough shifts.

HINT: If normally clear, red transmission fluid appears darkened and has a burned odor, it may signal transmission trouble ahead.

Let the professional service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO check over every system and device in your car. Your car is probably one of your most expensive possessions, so doesn't it make sense to have it serviced by the best technicians around. Come by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) and take advantage of our ALL-DATA computer system. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8am-5pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Big pleasures and great happinesses are but the consummation of many little pleasures and deeds of kindness bound together, as a loaf of bread in many crumbs in the aggregate.

Happiness is to be found among life's common things. It is not the rare gifts, the possession of the few; it is no great wealth, great learning, great genius, or great power; it is not these things that make the possessors happy. It is good health; it is friendship; it is love of home; it is a kindly word; a little gift bestowed anonymously; a little thoughtfulness here and there as the days slip by. . . . It is the blessings that are commonest, not those that are rarest; it is the gifts that God has scattered everywhere. These are the crumbs of happiness.

Do not scorn them, lest when the evening finds you, you may be hungered and disconsolate.

Sheets: City Could Score With Red Sox

reasons, particularly from a tourism point of view.

"We would love to have them come here," said Meade.

Both Sheets and Meade, however, agreed that it would take a lot of planning to ensure that all residential concerns were met. Sheets stressed that he would never support a Red Sox move to Quincy if there were even a slim chance of residents' lives being adversely affected.

"It could hurt the neighborhoods," said Sheets, "and we don't want anything that would disrupt the area."

Officials also agreed that another major problem would be location. Sheets said any ballpark built would have to be located in an "isolated" part of the city, rather than a residential area.

The mayor said the Crown Colony site in West Quincy, which is located off Route 128, would probably be the best bet "from a conceptual point of view," but questioned whether there would be enough space for a ballpark. He had similar doubts about a site near the Jordan Marsh warehouse in Squantum when asked if that might be a possibility, although he said that also might be a "potential" location.

Meade wondered if the State Street South site in North Quincy might be used, but answered his own question by saying there would probably not be enough land there either. He also noted that in the early 1970s, the New England Whalers (now the Hartford Whalers of the National Hockey League) were considering moving to the State Street location before meeting strong opposition from residents, mainly because of traffic concerns.

Both Sheets and Meade said the quarry area off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy would be unsuitable for building.

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers said he would have to consult his constituents before even considering a Red Sox move to Squantum.

"I think the process would be to see the impact on the community," said Ayers. "Everyone has the right to present their case, but it would take a lot of information to weigh the pros and cons about something like that.

"What you have to do first is protect the neighborhoods. I would want as much information as possible for Squantum residents before that would ever happen."

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, whose ward includes West Quincy, said he thinks the Red Sox should stay in Boston because of the longtime tradition of baseball teams playing in major cities.

"I'm a great Red Sox fan, and I'd love to have them around, but I think it would be a mistake for the Red Sox to go anywhere outside of the City of Boston," said Fabrizio. "I think it would take away from the ambience of going to a Red Sox game. Baseball belongs in the big city."

Ultimately, D'Aprix said he feels the whole idea of the Red Sox coming to Quincy may just be "a dream."

"My sense is that (Boston) Mayor (Thomas) Menino will structure a package to keep them in Boston," he said.

Eight Other Organizations Recognized Merrymount School PTO Wins Top Honors In DPW Community Service Contest

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The Merrymount School PTO has received top honors in the Quincy Department of Public Works' third annual community service contest.

The Merrymount School PTO was one of nine community organizations recognized for making significant improvements to public properties during a City Hall ceremony Tuesday. The ceremony kicked-off the local DPW's observance of national Public Works Week.

For its first place selection, the Merrymount School PTO received a $500 cash award for creating a scenic resting area across from the school. DPW Commissioner David Colton said the area was beautified with landscaping, cobblestones, a bench and other improvements.

"It's very attractive. They really improved the appearance of the entire neighborhood. One of the criteria for the award is community effort. They did all the work themselves," Colton said.

Other award winners were:

The Bernazzani School PTO, second place; Wollaston School PTO, third place; and the Ward 4 Neighborhood Civic Association, honorable mention.

The Bernazzani School PTO received a $250 cash award for extensive landscaping featuring a variety of shrubs in front of the school. Colton said the landscaping was especially needed because the school expansion project included limited resources for beautification.

"(The landscape improvement) was important to us because we were working on a very limited budget. A lot of people worked hard on it," the commissioner said.

The Wollaston School PTO also received a $250 cash award for landscaping and playground improvements to the school's "tot lot." Improvements included new sand, a new coat of paint on playground equipment, and a flag pole which had been removed from City Hall to make way for the Walk of Names project.

"They dressed it up to make it look nice. They (Wollaston School PTO) have participated all three years," Colton said.

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Civic Association received honorable mention for landscaping the front of its new community center at the Della Chiesa School.

Other groups participating were the Montclair School PTO, Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Squantum School PTO, Central Middle School PTO, and the Beechwood Community Life Center.

The improvement effort is a three-way cooperative effort, Colton said.

The DWP provides supplies, such as mulch and shrubs; the volunteer groups provide the labor, tools and equipment; and Buwning-Ferris Industries donates the cash "reward" money. The money can be used by the community groups to fund important activities they sponsor throughout the year.

In observance of National Public Works Week, the Quincy DPW has scheduled other events.

Today (Thursday), the DPW will hold an open house beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing throughout the day. The event will feature demonstrations and exhibits to highlight current public works related technologies and equipment. They include computerized drafting systems, recycling facilities and traffic control systems.

More than 250 Quincy school children are expected to participate. In addition, city officials will unveil the DPW's new logo which will be displayed on several pieces of new equipment recently purchased by the city.

The public is welcome to attend the open house.

At noon, the DPW will announce its "Employee of the Year" and recognize four employees who have reached 25 years of service.

Nominees for employee of the year are: Eleanor Gilligan, Russell Melanson, Nancy Allen, Brian Carlisle, Robert DeCristofaro and John Catalano. The selection will be made by DPW management staff.

Employees who will be recognized for 25 years of service are: John Catalano, Michael Gillan, Frank Reynolds, and Thomas Travers.

During the open house entries in the annual Department of Public Works poster contest will be on display. Dozens of entries will be on display and will be judged by a panel of DPW employees. Poster contest winners will be announced at a future ceremony.

The week will conclude with a Household Hazardous Waste College Day Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the 55 Sea St. Residents are encouraged to bring household hazardous waste products for environmentally safe disposal.

Pneumatic Scale Site Rezoned To PUD

recommendation of the Planning Board is also required before a 2/3 vote of the City Council is taken, giving the public an added layer of protection.

At a public hearing held earlier in the evening, Atty. David Mahoney, the legal counsel for Stop & Shop, and Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning organization, expressed support of the rezoning to PUD. Four residents, including Dorothy Kelly of 108 Davis St., voiced opposition because of traffic and other concerns.

"Newport Avenue is a mini-Southeast Expressway all day long," said Kelly, who read from a letter from the Quincy Citizens Association, of which she is the secretary.

"The proposed use (by Stop & Shop) will dramatically increase the traffic."

Councillors, however, said the zoning change will only help the residents and does not guarantee that a permit filed by Stop & Shop to move to the site would necessarily be approved.

Household Hazardous Waste Collection Saturday At DPW

Once properly secured, waste materials may be transported to New York state, Utah, or even as far away as Finland, said Wheelwright.

The DPW will spend approximately $47,500 in total costs to conduct Saturday's event, including payment of the contract awarded to Triumvirate Environmental, Inc. to remove the waste material collected. These monies will be taken from the DPW's account, according to Wheelwright.

Book Review Program At Library Friday

'Booked For Lunch,' an informal program of book reviews by library patrons and staff, will be held Friday, May 20, from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Participants are welcome to bring a sandwich; coffee and juice will be provided.

The program debuted during National Library Week and will continue meeting on the third Friday of each month. A dozen people gathered around the lunch table in April to chat about recent best-sellers as well as lesser known, older titles.

The program is modeled on lunchtime booktalks in other parts of the country and is planned for adults interested in exchanging views about books and authors. One of the authors up for discussion is Dr. Michael Palmer, whose medical thrillers have appeared on the best-seller lists. His most recent book is Natural Causes. On Tuesday, June 14, Palmer will present a talk at the library entitled, "From Country Doc to New York Times Best-Seller--Writer's Story."

Norfolk County Register of Deeds Barry Hannon announces the availability of the Registry of Deeds "Norfolk Compu-Search" System.

This is an on-line computer service allowing off site access to the indices and other information compiled at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham.

"We have 20 years of recorded information available - information from January, 1974, through yesterday," Hannon said.

"I expect that attorneys, banks and real estate offices will be our principal users. However, we have already had inquiries from as far away as California regarding our services."

The information will be available through a computer modem-telephone line. There will be a minimal charge for the on-line service which will help defray the cost of the computerization and modernization at the Registry of Deeds.

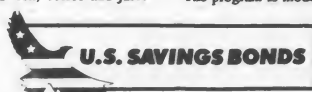

"This system will be a great convenience and will save time and money for those using our services," Hannon said.

The Registry of Deeds maintains records of all real estate transactions in the 28 communities (27 towns and the City of Quincy) that comprise Norfolk County.

Those wishing to apply for the service may write to:

QCA Asks City To Lift New Ban On Bird Feeding

Rescind the waterfowl feeding ban, increase visible daytime police presence to business districts, and restore the full five-day teacher schedule in the city's public schools.

Those are some of the sentiments and suggestions expressed by the Quincy Citizens Association in a recent letter to Mayor James Sheets after a series of recent meetings and a "Sound-Off Night." The letter also made recommendations regarding the city's infrastructure, senior citizen housing, and the environment.

The QCA opposed the new city ordinance which bans feeding waterfowl at Sailors' Home Pond in Wollaston. Members were angered that the City Council did not hold a public hearing on the ordinance.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, who introduced the measure at the urging of neighbors of Sailors' Pond, said a public hearing was not necessary for the ordinance.

Nonetheless, the QCA believes the matter deserves more consideration and public input. "We think that the whole issue should be reconsidered and enforcement rescinded, until such a public hearing is held," the letter stated.

In the area of police and public safety, the QCA made five suggestions to the mayor. They are:

- Increase visible daytime police presence in Quincy Center and the Wollaston and North Quincy shopping areas, as well as at night "to comfort residents and visitors, and to assure culprits that Quincy means business."

- Enforce the "No U Turns" in the middle of streets to prevent accidents and inconvenience to motorists and pedestrians.

- Enforce illegal parking regulations, such as at hydrants, crosswalks, 25 feet from corners; and issue more tickets to scoff-laws. Stop illegal parking at MBTA bus stops.

- Crack down on excessive overnight parking on residential streets, and restrict overnight parking.

- Implement a police-enforced speed limit on West Squantum St. near the Montclair School.

"The blinking lights near the Montclair School are useless--a waste of electricity--and the signal lights are spaced so far apart that motorists race between them to save time."

Another dangerous traffic situation cited by the QCA is fences, hedges and bushes at street intersections which exceed the height limitation. Cars turning into E. Squantum St. from Faxon Rd. into Beale St. from Harvard St. and from Davis St. into Quincy Shore Dr. is "extremely hazardous," the QCA said.

To get the cooperation of property owners, the QCA suggests the city enclose a note with tax and or water bills instructing owners as to the legal heights of fences, bushes and hedges at corners.

Concerning public education, QCA members want Quincy schools to restore the teacher schedule to five full days every week by eliminating the "Tuesday sojourn." "We need the full 180 days in school to be able to compete in the high-tech life the children will face in the future."

The QCA also congratulated Sheets, the City Council and the Quincy Housing Authority for "recognizing the necessity for protecting the residents of Quincy's senior citizen housing, and we trust that they will receive security protection year-round."

Regarding the city's infrastructure, the QCA said the city should continue replacing or retinning rusty and corroded water pipes. It suggested dividing Community Development Block Grant revenue equally among the six wards to help finance the improvements.

In addition, members urged city officials to apply for grants to help repair and replace hazardous sidewalks, particularly on residential streets, which have upheaved, cracked, or are overgrown with weeds.

The QCA saluted the mayor, council, merchants and others who have worked to beautify Downtown Quincy, as well as maintaining the various landscaped and planted plots throughout the city. However, members said they believe too many property owners have not done their share to maintain their property. To enlist more residents in the Cleaner, Greener effort, the QCA suggested notes in tax or water bills asking them to do a better job beautifying and maintaining their property.

Cheney Criticized Over Carnival Site

City Council President Michael Cheney was criticized by colleagues Monday night for allowing a fund-raising carnival to be set up at the former Grossman's site in Quincy Center without notifying the Ward 3 councillor.

The event, which is serving as a fund-raiser for Quincy's First Night celebration, is being sponsored jointly by the Quincy First Night Committee and Fiesta Shows of Salisbury Beach, N.H. Cheney serves as chairman of the First Night Committee.

The carnival is scheduled to run at the Grossman's site May 17-22.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien told Cheney he was upset because he only learned of the event after being contacted by Councillor Timothy Cahill who read about it in a story in last week's edition of The Quincy Sun.

"I think you overstepped your bounds," Chretien told Cheney. "This (not being informed) is the kind of thing that typically does not happen."

Chretien said he would have informed residents about the event in advance had he known about it. He also asked Quincy Police Capt. Terence Kelly, who attended Monday night's City Council meeting, to make sure there is plenty of protection for those attending the event.

"I want more than ample police presence," he said. "I want it to look like a Gestapo camp."

Kelly said members of the police department's Special Operations and K-9 Units would be on hand for the event as well as an officer stationed at an elderly crossing at the site.

Other councillors agreed with Chretien.

"First Night is a good family event, but I wish we'd had a little more notification," said Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, whose ward borders the site.

"I'm upset about this whole situation," said Cahill. "I think it stinks. Once again, Quincy Center is being treated like it doesn't count. This would never happen in Houghs Neck or in Squantum."

"The spot is inappropriate for the event. I'd like to see the thing torn down."

Cahill added that he has nothing against Fiesta Shows, which has sponsored previous shows at Marina Bay and has a good reputation.

"In a proper location, this carnival has never been a problem," he said. Cheney, for his part, apologized to Chretien and Phelan for the lack of notification. He said the original site chosen for the event at the Fore River shipyard was ruled out because tests conducted by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) showed that it was contaminated with lead.

Cheney added that the carnival was booked into the city for the scheduled dates and the event sponsors had to find an alternate location in a hurry.

"If I had it to do all over again, I probably would have canceled it altogether," he said.

Cheney said he did not like suggestions, however, that he would put residents' safety in jeopardy.

"I'm taken aback by those who would suggest I would compromise the safety of a neighborhood," said Cheney, adding that police presence and other safety controls had already been arranged. He also noted that he helped organize the city's first two First Night celebrations during which no one was injured.

Cheney also said similar events have been held in his home neighborhood of Houghs Neck.

"Don't tell me I wouldn't put it in my own backyard," he said, "because it has been in my backyard."

Another car, involved in a drunk driving accident, was positioned near a utility pole outside the school. The display was part of Violence Prevention Week and served as a grim reminder during the prom season of the dangers of drinking and driving. Neither accident involved Quincy public school students. The display was sponsored by Quincy Police Athletic League, Quincy Automatic Transmissions and Signature Signs.

Sheets Plans New Law To Ban Boston Bombs From Moon Island

Mayor James Sheets plans to have a new ordinance drafted to prevent the City of Boston from detonating bombs on Moon Island.

Sheets said he is planning the new law with Assistant City Solicitor James Timmins and Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers following a ruling last week by Norfolk County Superior Court Judge Robert Mulligan that Boston may take bombs to the site for detonation purposes.

The mayor said the new law will have much stronger language than a current similar ordinance. He noted that Timmins is confident that Boston will obey the new law, adding that Quincy will go to court to settle the issue if Boston does not comply.

"We will absolutely not back off from this issue," said Sheets. "We're in it for the long haul."

Sheets added he will ask the City Council to attach an emergency preamble to the new ordinance so that it will go into effect immediately.

Quincy had sought an injunction preventing Boston from taking explosives to a police gun range on the island, but Mulligan denied the request, saying granting the injunction would force Boston to detonate bombs in the congested areas where they are generally found.

"Obviously we're disappointed by the ruling of the judge," said Sheets. "It's unconscionable."

Mulligan said he understands Quincy's concerns but added that Boston's bomb disposal unit takes the necessary precautions before detonating bombs. Atty. Susan Prosnitz, legal counsel for the City of Boston, said Moon Island is the safest place to detonate the bombs, adding that Boston really has no other site for such detonations.

Sheets, however, has argued that someone could be hurt by the explosions in the future and that Boston should use another island it owns in Boston Harbor. In addition, Timmins said such explosions violate Quincy's zoning law, which prohibits the explosion of bombs or other devices, and that Boston police also violated the state fire code when they failed to notify the Quincy Fire Department.

Moon Island is owned by Boston, but falls within Quincy city limits in Squantum. Quincy and Boston have clashed since last fall over the planned expansion of the gun range, which is opposed by Quincy officials and Squantum residents, and other uses of the site.

Could Force Woolworth's, Bradlee's To Close, Say Managers Wal-Mart Called 'Disastrous Effect' For Downtown

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Construction of a proposed Wal-Mart in Quincy Point may force both the Woolworth's and Bradlee's stores in the city to close, the managers of the two stores said Tuesday.

Woolworth's Manager Don Russell said at a meeting of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) Tuesday that a Wal-Mart in Quincy would have a "disastrous effect" on business in Quincy Center.

"If the proposed store opens, Quincy Center will be a ghost town in three years," he said.

Russell stressed that he was only speaking on his behalf and was not acting as a spokesman for Woolworth's. However, he said that the Quincy Center store, which has been a staple of the city's downtown business district since 1948, would likely have to close its doors if a new Wal-Mart store opened.

George Laput, manager of the Bradlee's store in Quincy Point—which is just down the street from the site of the proposed project—also said his store would likely be forced to shut down if Wal-Mart became a reality in Quincy.

Although Laput attended Tuesday's meeting, Bradlee's is not a member of the QCBPA.

Hingham developer Donald MacKinnon is hoping to build both a Wal-Mart store as well as an as-yet unnamed supermarket on 242,800 square feet at a Quincy Point site near The Falls condominium complex. MacKinnon has said that the business attracted by a Quincy Point Wal-Mart would spill over into Quincy Center and help the downtown business district.

"That's like Home Depot saying, 'we're good for Grossman's,'" said Russell, referring to the West Quincy home improvement store that some have speculated forced the Grossman's store in Quincy Center out of business.

"Wal-Mart has a long history of barracuda price tactics," said Russell. "It's called 'market share'—we take it out of your pocket, and put it in ours."

"Wal-Mart is a great success story, but they've done it by making a fine art of taking business away from others. They sell things below cost to get business."

Russell said Wal-Mart's business tactics have led to a moratorium on Wal-Mart stores in the state of Vermont. He also said if a Quincy Point Wal-Mart would really be beneficial to Quincy Center, developers of the project would not have offered to place signs inside the proposed Wal-Mart and around the area of the site suggesting that people shop in Quincy Center.

Laput echoed Russell's concerns, saying that a 1995 overhaul planned by Bradlee's would likely be impossible because of Wal-Mart's business strategies.

QCBPA member Deanna Gazarian, owner of the Phase II Jewelry shop in Quincy Center, said she recently read a magazine article about how Wal-Mart uses a tactic called "predatory pricing policy"

Burial Service Saturday For Civil War Veteran

The burial of an unknown Civil War soldier Saturday in Mount Wollaston Cemetery is expected to attract at least 300 people, according to coordinators of the event.

Officials at the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum plan a proper, 1860s-style burial for the soldier who was recently discovered at the Massachusetts Military Archives in Natick. The burial will be part of a massive dawn-to-dusk encampment planned for Faxon Field on Friday and Saturday, the start of the Memorial Day weekend.

Mayor James Sheets will dress in clothing of the era and read President Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address" as part of the ceremonies, and a number of military re-enactment groups will also participate in the burial and encampment.

"It's something that's really brought people together," said Don Timmins, operations manager for the museum. "It really has been an exciting time, and it will be a good family event."

Timmins said that at least 300, and perhaps as many as 500 or more Civil War re-enactors, city officials and private citizens will attend the event. He also said dozens of Civil War groups as far as Virginia have called the museum to express interest in participating.

Both the burial and encampment will feature officials dressed in authentic garb of the Civil War period as well as food and music of the mid-19th century era. Quincy Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley said the interment in the Civil War section of Mount Wollaston Cemetery will mark the first burial of a veteran from that war in the city in 56 years.

The overnight encampment will begin Friday at 3 p.m. and will be located at Faxon Field to the rear of the Quincy Center for Technical Education on Coddington Street and Southern Artery. The official schedule of events for Saturday is as follows:

*8:30 a.m.: "Troops" will march from the camp site to Greenleaf Street, and then to Hancock United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

*9 to 11 a.m.: The body of the soldier will lie in state at the church to allow "troops" and the general public to pay their respects. Invited guests and others will be seated at this time. The public will be seated just before the church service begins.

*11 a.m., the ecumenical church service will begin with Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish, presiding.

*11:30 to 11:45 a.m., participants will leave the church and form a procession to the cemetery. Services at the cemetery will last about 20 minutes.

The Prime-Plus-1% Home Equity Line

Many home equity lines offer a low "teaser" rate for the first year or so. The problem is, they switch you to a higher rate down the road. Usually about 1.5% over the prime rate.

A Night To Remember

The death of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis brought me back to that special night in Hyannis Port—that night of so much promise and hope.

How could we have known then or even suspected that tragedy lurked so near in the future!

It was nearly 34 years ago—Nov. 10, 1960—and it was a night of celebration in the home of Ambassador Joseph Kennedy in the Kennedy compound.

Just a few hours before, Richard Nixon conceded the see-saw election to John F. Kennedy, who at 43, became the youngest ever elected President in U.S. history.

He and his 31-year-old wife, Jacqueline—soon to be known the world over as Jackie—were hosting a campaign windup party for the press.

Three of us weren't supposed to be there. The party was for the press that had traveled with Kennedy throughout the campaign.

I was with the Boston Traveler then and assigned to cover the election that week. With me were, Dave Farrell, covering for sister paper, the Boston Herald and photographer, Frank Kelly, a Wollaston resident, who was taking election photos for both papers.

The party was too good to pass up, an opportunity we would never get again. So, trying to look like we belonged there, we stepped aboard the press bus in front of the Hyannis Armory which was the press headquarters for election night. And we rode into the compound with the invited reporters. Nobody checked us out. Nobody stopped us.

So, there we were—party crashers—in Joseph Kennedy's home on a night to be remembered.

And there we were, mingling with the President-elect, his young First Lady to be, Rose Kennedy, the matriarch of the Kennedy family, Robert Kennedy, Ted Kennedy, the Kennedy sisters, Eunice Shriver, Jean Smith and Pat Lawford and Sargent Shriver.

Conspicuously missing was Joseph Kennedy who was somewhere in the house but nowhere to be seen that night.

The elder Kennedy, who seemed to be determined to avoid the press during most of the election campaign, would turn up the following day at the Barnstable Airport in Hyannis from where the family was to fly to Palm Springs, aboard the private plane, Caroline.

Little Caroline, not then quite three, and for whom the plane was named, was there at the airport, too, looking as cute as a young Shirley Temple.

That night at the party, John Kennedy had revealed that the family would be flying to Palm Springs. He said he would relax a little after the gruelling campaign "and maybe play a little golf."

He quickly caught himself, laughed and said "But don't mention the golf." He didn't want the country to think it was getting another golfer (Dwight Eisenhower) for President.

Someone came up with a number of Christmas wrapped bottles of bourbon, scotch and whiskey from under the counter in the kitchen.

And then came a sight you would never forget: the President-elect of the United States pouring drinks and carrying ice cubes for the press.

Would Eisenhower do something like that, I wondered.

Jacqueline Kennedy was smiling and looking beautiful. She was much prettier in person than in newspaper and magazine photos and on television.

She was radiant that night. Maybe it was that special glow of a mother-to-be. She was pregnant with John Jr. and would give birth to him in a few weeks.

She seemed to be shy and content to remain in the background. This was her husband's night. She didn't seem to be thinking about becoming First Lady. Her thoughts seemed to be more with becoming a mother again.

She certainly didn't appear to be thinking of herself as a co-President, something she never tried to become.

She seemed to have a great appreciation for history, but not for making it.

She would soon bring culture to the White House. She would also redecorate it—but not try to run it.

She would be what she wanted to be: a good wife and mother.

I think of that night now with fondness—and sadness.

Here was this handsome, charming couple who would occupy the White House for the next eight years—so we thought that night—and with whom the young people of the nation could identify with and be inspired by.

Who would have thought that night that two of the three Kennedy brothers at the party were doomed for assassins' bullets? What would be the odds on that?

I often wonder if the 1960's would have been less turbulent and not as rebellious if John and Robert Kennedy had lived. And if maybe the Vietnam War might have been brought to an end much sooner and before it really tore the nation apart.

A lot of things might have been different and better.

Council Continues FY95 Budget Sessions

The City Council Finance Committee was scheduled to hold its second and third sessions on Mayor James Sheets' proposed FY95 municipal budget Tuesday and last night (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall.

A fourth session focusing on the Quincy Public School Department budget will be held Thursday, June 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers. Budgets to be discussed Tuesday and last night included those for the police and fire departments, mayor's office, City Council and others.

At its first session last week, the City Council cut $50,000 from Sheets' proposed $133.7 million FY95 budget by reducing the city's fund for worker's compensation from $850,000 to $800,000. That was one of 23 funds and departments the council voted on during the session.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, chairman of the Finance Committee, said although more cuts are likely, he is unsure where further cuts could be made in the budget, which calls for no property tax increase since the mayor was first elected in 1989.

Last year, the City Council reduced Sheets' proposed FY94 budget by $329,066, bringing it down to $128.3 million.

FORMER SENATOR Paul Harold greeted Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis at the State House May 29, 1990 when she attended the dedication of the John F. Kennedy statue there.

SUPPORT FOR THOSE WHO CARE

"Till death do us part" has been the traditional seal on marriage vows in this country for generations. However, an even greater toll than the ultimate separation is being borne by increasing numbers of spouses these days, and that toll is the burden of caring for a chronically ill spouse. The type of round-the-clock, intensely draining demands of such care can be overwhelming. To provide support for these caregivers, the national Well Spouse Foundation has been established. Among the services of the organization are support groups, newsletters, and information on related health and financial issues. The group can be contacted at Well Spouse Foundation, Department RD, Box 801, New York, New York 10023.

P.S. Close to ten million Americans today are the primary caregivers for their chronically ill spouses.

Serious illness can place great emotional and financial strains on marriage. It can be helpful to have support in carrying out your vows—in sickness and in health. If you'd like more information, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE AT 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Our office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Horses have excellent memories, experts believe, and can recall pleasant or unpleasant experiences many years after they occur.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1967 postcard view of the Willard School in West Quincy before the Furnace Brook Parkway cut it's way through the gate where the group of children are standing. Trolley tracks in the foreground traversed Copeland Street which was still an unpaved dirt road when this picture was taken. Built in 1891, the school was sold for private development in 1964.

Concerned Medicare Program Could Be Cut

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

A lot of people on Medicare are worried that the program will be cut to pay for health care reform. They are also concerned that those cuts might make it harder for them to get health care or cost them more.

But if we don't get a handle on health care costs now, Congress will keep looking at Medicare as a place to find money to reduce the budget. Before we let them cut anyone from Medicare, we need them to look at what is hurting the health care system—the out-of-control cost of health care.

Those of us who receive Medicare can't sit back and be silent on health care reform. We need to make sure that Congress passes a health care reform bill that will help to control the costs that are eroding Medicare coverage and hurting the entire health care system.

What's more, reform plans that include long-term care and prescription drug coverage for everyone can actually improve benefits for older Americans.

We urge every voter to write to U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds and Sens. Edward M. Kennedy and John F. Kerry to support health care reform legislation that will control health care costs and provide prescription drug coverage and long-term care to everyone.

'Angels' In Our Lives

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Two years ago I lost my wife suddenly to a stroke. We had been happily married for 25 years and it was a huge blow. Yet out of my loss and loneliness has come something I could never have guessed at before, a sensing that at the level of spirit, or being, we are still one.

More than that, I feel the guidance and protection of that departed being as I continue on with my life.

Our society does not give a lot of weight to such perceptions, and at times I have wondered if I am out of step in a serious way! But another part of me thinks that the turbulent days in which we live may bring an increasing awareness of the importance of "angels" in our lives.

I am a recently retired BC weekly newspaper editor. I am writing to some weekly papers to ask if any of your readers have had experiences in this area that they would be willing to share with me?

Wartime Rules Restrict Sailors As Season Opens

Quincy's first war-time yachting season in nearly a quarter of a century faced the traditional Memorial Day opening burdened by new Coast Guard and Navy restrictions that included personal identification cards and boat licenses.

Licenses for Zone C, entitled the owners to sail their boats only in the waters of Quincy Bay. Other licenses were issued for Zone A, Winthrop Bay; Zone B, Dorchester Bay; and Zone D, Hingham Bay.

Enemy aliens, revolvers, explosives and cameras were not permitted on board and radio transmitters were required to be sealed at all times.

"It is desirable that owners put their boats in the water in order that they may not only be used for recreation but kept in condition for possible employment for war needs," said Rear Adm. W.T. Tarrant, commandant of the First Naval District.

INDIAN FIGHTER

Albert E. Gore of Quincy Point, 85 years old and a veteran of the Indian wars and World War I, was an honored guest at Quincy's Memorial Day services. The featured speaker was Thomas H. Buckley, a prominent legislator from Abington.

"We go forward proudly behind the men from this community and every other part of the United States who will again furnish the glorious pages of history with exploits of heroism, of sacrifice, of glory for their nation and its success and progress," said Buckley.

South Shore Mental Health President Harry Shulman:

'Mental Health Services Are More Acceptable Today'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. What are the specific services offered by South Shore Mental Health?

A. South Shore Mental Health is really one of the largest agencies in the South Shore area. We provide a broad array of services in the area of mental health, mental retardation, and education services. We provide services to over 3,000 clients a year; clients range in age from infants to senior citizens. The programs range from 24-hour crisis intervention which we operate every day of the year, to outpatient programs where the client may only come once a week or once every two weeks.

In terms of the numbers of programs, we have a comprehensive system of care, sometimes called an organized system of care, where we really can serve individuals who have acute problems or long-term problems. And people can avail themselves of different levels of intensity of services from outpatient to day treatment to crisis beds. It really is a fairly sophisticated system of care.

Q. And how long has the program been running?

A. Well, our agency has been providing services on the South Shore since 1926, so we're getting close to 70 years of services. But the agency has really changed its face over the past 10 years consistent with some of the changes we've seen with national health care and the change in health care delivery and mental health care delivery. So today, South Shore Mental Health really is the primary provider of mental health services, and most of the services are being provided in the community now rather than in institutions. Similarly, in the area of mental retardation, we're providing lots of care in group homes, in workshop-type programs, outpatient programs, and the size of our agency has increased substantially in the past 10 years. We now employ over 600 individuals, whereas 10 years ago we probably had a staff of about 75.

Q. Do you have volunteers as well?

A. We don't have a lot of volunteers, but some of our programs have volunteers that are specific to their area. For example, our Discovery Day Treatment Program, our Step One Early Intervention Program has a lot of volunteers and participation by family members.

Q. And you cover the entire South Shore?

A. Our primary service area would be what we call the "Ten Towns of the South Shore Area," including Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, Randolph, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell. In that geographic area, we really provide our full range of services to people. We also have what we would call a secondary service area, which goes down into the Plymouth area and into the Taunton-Attleboro area, where we provide a good deal of mental retardation services in the area of residential and crisis services and some outpatient services.

We are one of the largest providers of outpatient services in the Quincy-South Shore area. We do that through our program called Bayview Associates, which is a family-focused outpatient program with the ability to serve children and families as well as adults.

Q. What are the sources of funding for the program?

A. Our funding is really quite diversified. One of the major changes we've seen over the past 10 years is that we're generating more and more money from private insurance, working with managed care companies, and in our outpatient programs, a substantial portion of our funding is from insurance companies such as U.S. Health Care, Tufts and Pilgrim Health Care. We're doing a lot of work in the community with business and industry who will pay us directly to provide services.

Q. What is your annual budget?

HARRY SHULMAN displays some of the pamphlets available at South Shore Mental Health's main location at 6 Fort St. in Quincy. Shulman, a Newton resident, has been president and CEO of the company for 12 years.
 (Quincy Sun photo by Tom Gorman)

FULL NAME: Harry Shulman

AGE: 48

ADDRESS: Newton

OCCUPATION: president and CEO of South Shore Mental Health in Quincy for 12 years

EDUCATION: graduate of Boston Latin High School, 1963; received bachelor's degree in government from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, 1967; received master of social work degree from Boston College, 1969

FAMILY: married to the former Sheila Mallia. They have three children: Laura, 20; Liz, 17 and Adam, 9

A. Well, we have a very sizable budget; we're the largest human service agency on the South Shore, and our annual budget is about $18.5 million.

Q. There are many different kinds of mental illness, aren't there?

A. That's correct. There are many different kinds of disorders that people experience. I think today in our society, people are experiencing a lot of stress in their lives, whether that stress is at work or at home. And we get a lot of calls from people who feel stressed, who feel depressed, and who feel they'd like to come in to talk to someone. Those kinds of illnesses are very amenable to short-term kinds of treatment, maybe six, eight or 10 sessions. And people benefit a great deal, and are able to go back and be more productive at work, or be able to deal with some of the difficulties they might have at home. Raising families in these times is a challenge.

We also have individuals who have long-term mental illness, and we're really able through the service system we have to offer some ongoing treatment to those individuals, usually through a combination of counseling and medication. People in those kinds of programs can be with us up to two or three years at a time.

Q. So it is true, then, that some kinds of mental illness are temporary and some are permanent?

A. Many of our consumers live a very long time with their mental illness but still live very productive lives in the community. They live either at home or in group residences that we operate; they go to work during the day or to a workshop, they have some structured activities and friends in the community, and have a very positive lifestyle. And they could live with their illness in a very managed way.

I think generally, the vast majority of the clients we serve here in the agency are here for a very short period. They come through our outpatient program at Bayview Associates, or they may have some encounter with our crisis team.

Q. Would you say there's a stigma about mental illness that causes the mentally ill to be shunned?

A. I think there definitely is a stigma attached to being mentally ill. I think, however, that has abated a bit in the past number of years. Going to seek mental health services, I think, has become more acceptable in our society, although people don't necessarily indicate they're going to get help for their mental illness, they might say "well, I'm going to get help because I feel stressed" or "I feel strung out" or "I feel depressed."

I think the stigma is most associated with individuals who have more severe problems, more longer-term illness. And we experience that when we sometimes try to operate group homes in communities and run up against opposition because the individuals are mentally ill or mentally disabled. We've been working very hard as an agency to try to deal with the issue of stigma. In fact, we recently ran a legislative breakfast where the main topic of the day was on stigma.

I would say as I look at the people who are using services now, the stigma has been reduced. And we have a lot of requests for apartments at our Bayview Associates Program, or at our Community Support Program which we run at Quincy Avenue. People find that it's much more acceptable to seek mental health services today than it was 10 years ago.

Q. Part of the stigma comes from the fact that people think those with mental illnesses are dangerous. What you think about that?

A. I think that's a perception, but I don't think that's an accurate perception. There have been numerous studies which have demonstrated that individuals who suffer from emotional disorder are no more likely to be violent than the general population.

Q. At your recent legislative breakfast at Marina Bay, Eileen Elias, state commissioner of the Department of Mental Health suggested that President Clinton's national health care plan "shortchanges" the mentally ill. Do you agree?

A. Those of us in the mental health community have a good deal of concern about the direction of the national health care plan. As far as mental health is concerned, I think I'd first like to say that we're very strongly in favor of a national health care plan that would provide universal coverage and universal access, because we know, especially among our client group, that a good health care plan is an essential part of one's life and can contribute to their mental health as well. The concern we have with the mental health benefit in the plans we've seen—and there are, as you know, numerous plans; I think the president's plan is probably not going to pass as submitted under his act—but the plans we've seen have not provided the kind of flexible benefit that we think our clients need in mental health services; they tend to offer a limited inpatient benefit and a limited outpatient benefit with a co-pay. And we know that the kinds of services that work are those that are clinically and medically necessary, and that many of our clients need more than a specified amount of clinical hours, and many of them cannot afford a co-pay of 50 percent of the fee.

So we're looking for a mental health benefit that would have some equity with the general health care benefit, and we believe mental illness is a disease like heart disease or cancer, and should have a similar benefit package.

Q. What's the best part of doing your job?

A. It's definitely visiting our programs, talking with our consumers, meeting with families and seeing the good work we do. I think in running an agency the size of South Shore Mental Health, it's very helpful for me to get out to our residential programs, to our day care programs, to our early intervention programs, and actually see the work that's being done. So it's that interaction with our clients, the interaction with staff, that really is the best part of my job.

Christina Verderosa First Woman Commander Of Quincy Naval Center

Christina Verderosa recently became the first woman commander of the Quincy Naval Reserve Center, 85 Sea St.

Verderosa replaced Cmdr. Peter D. Ligman as commanding officer during ceremonies held at the center.

Verderosa had served as executive officer of the reserve center since last July. Previously, she held the same position at the Naval Reserve Readiness in Houston, Texas where she was awarded the Navy Commendation Medal for her outstanding performance during Operation Desert Storm.

This year, Verderosa played a major role in getting the Quincy Center ready for a comprehensive operational inspection by Readiness Command Region One, which covers New England and parts of New York.

Ligman had been commanding officer of the center since November 1991. During his tenure, the center was twice chosen for the best reserve center in Readiness Command Region One. He had also played a major role in coordinating the reserve center's consolidation with centers in Lawrence, Chicopee, and New Bedford, and the planned move to the Naval Air Station in South Weymouth scheduled for later this year.

Ligman will report next to Mobile Inshore Undersea Warfare Group

2, Williamsburg, Va., for a three-year tour as Chief of Staff.

WE'RE SHIFTING OUR STANDARD WAY OF READING METERS INTO AUTOMATIC.

We're gearing up to install automated meter reading in your neighborhood. If you are a Boston Gas customer, one of our representatives will be coming to your house to install a new automated meter.

However, if you are not at home when our representative arrives, please call the number on the card that is left to make an appointment for the work to be done.

Automated meter reading is definitely a turn for the better because it eliminates the need for estimated bills. It's also more convenient since you don't have to be home when we come by to read your meter.

This new system is just one more example of how we are constantly working to make our service as efficient as natural gas itself.

The new Boston Gas automated meter reading system. It's precise. It's convenient. And for these times, it's a natural.

REPACKING WHEEL BEARINGS

Car owners should take the opportunity of a four-wheel alignment or brake job to have their wheel bearings checked and repacked. If necessary, having the wheels off at these times eliminate duplication of labor. Wheel bearings come in inner and outer pairs. They cushion the contact between the wheel and the spindle upon which it sits and thereby allow the wheel to turn freely by virtue of their frictionless bearings and grease. Although the hub and brake drum protect the wheel bearings from dirt contamination to some extent, the grease in the bearings still tends to pick up dust and little particles. If so, this can lead to abrasive wear. Repacking the wheel bearings assures that a fresh supply of grease will enable the wheel bearings to continue to function effectively. HINT: Ade bearings (found on the rear wheels) must be replaced, not repacked, unless the car owner's manual states otherwise.

REV. DR. RICHARD MALMQUIST (right), pastor of the First Baptist Church of Wollaston, shakes hands with Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, founder and director of the youth group The Way Up which was officially welcomed into the church. The new partnership between First Baptist and The Way Up coincided with the youth group's 30th anniversary celebration.

'The Way Up' Celebrates 30th Anniversary

The 30th anniversary of the Quincy-based youth program called "The Way Up" was recently celebrated at the First Baptist Church of Wollaston with an open house, a special worship service and a reception after church with many displays.

The occasion was highlighted by the handshake extended to the founder and director of The Way Up, the Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, and to other members of The Way Up by the pastor of First Baptist, the Rev. Richard Malmquist, signifying the official beginning of a partnership in mission being undertaken by the two groups. Both men are American Baptist ministers.

The Way Up has actually been operating in the church since last September but, because of Dr. Langevin's hip replacement at the end of the year, it was not officially welcomed to the church until now.

"We are privileged to be associated with a mission group of the caliber of The Way Up," Rev. Malmquist said during the service. The youth program specializes in work with children and teenagers who are delinquent, neglected, abused or in need of some special services but it also ministers to teenagers who simply wander in and stay because they enjoy what goes on. For 21 of The Way Up's 30 years, it has also provided chaplaincy to teenagers in closed settings like the Brockton Y's Shelter Care Unit and the Diagnostic Assessment Center in the same place.

The celebration began with an open house in the large room which houses The Way Up in the basement of the south wing of the church. The room is equipped with several pool tables, a ping-pong table, wrestling mats, weights and various kinds of weight-lifting equipment, work tables and desks, a piano and a large sitting area formed by a circle of overstuffed chairs. The walls were decorated by young people in the program with brightly colored baptismal banners, examples of the silkscreening and drawing done by teenagers, and maps recalling various trips the youth have made. Four large wooden tables contained a display of historical memorabilia. Vinnie Santarpio greeted the visitors as they arrived at the door of The Way Up.

Dr. Langevin said he was "particularly delighted to see so many former participants in The Way Up, their parents and former staff persons coming back to remember the days when they were active here." He added that almost every generation of The Way Up was represented among the visitors.

At the same time, he also mentioned others who now live outside the state who had called or sent their congratulations. Dr. Langevin said he was especially happy to be reunited with the teenagers who had originally founded the program.

The Way Up was founded by Dr. Langevin and a group of Cambridge teenagers with whom he had been doing city missionary work for the Boston Baptist City Mission Society. He was a student at Harvard Divinity School at the time. The Way Up moved to Quincy in 1968 where Langevin had become a juvenile probation officer. Although he left the employment of the court after five years, he and The Way Up have continued ever since to

New Browsing Room For Young Adults At Main Library

Fresh paint and carpeting have transformed a utilitarian nook at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square, into an attractive browsing room for young adults.

The room, which opened in March, is adjacent to the children's room.

The spruced up area has attracted many young teens, reports Librarian Ann McLaughlin.

Parents of young readers caught between children's books which are too difficult and adult books which are too difficult have been enthused, too. The collection includes novels by such authors as Cynthia Voigt, Christopher Pike, Gary Paulsen and R. L. Stine. Many other authors of fiction and non-fiction are represented as well. Magazines popular with young people are also located in the Young Adult room.

Since the room opened in March, the number of items borrowed has increased dramatically, McLaughlin said. In comparison with the previous year, the number of items borrowed in March tripled, and in April, quadrupled, she said. Library staff anticipate heavy use of the area once summer reading lists are issued.

Staff members welcome suggestions of authors or titles to include in this growing book collection.

Talking With Kids About Violence

Violence. No one wants to see kids victimized by it.

No one wants to see kids perpetuate it. But peer pressure, community lifestyles and values, the media, even behavior of adults learned when they were children, are among just a few of the things that can give kids the message that being violent or being a victim of violence is OK.

Talking with children about violence, disagreement, frustration, anger, and conflict can start in a child's earliest years and continue through the teen years. Respect for self and others, examples about conflicts or arguments settled without violence, learning not to use hurtful words - each is a positive skill that can last a lifetime.

Child development experts tell us that for very young children, some physical acts, such as hitting, kicking and biting, may just be part of early development. But by age 3, most children are able to understand nonviolent ways to deal with the world, even if they're not perfect at practicing those skills.

Here are some ideas to help you in talking with kids, whatever age, about preventing violence.

• Be clear with other adults in a child's life about your values with respect to violence. It does not help to have a grandparent, cousin, and a parent sending contradictory messages.

• Don't wait until the issue comes up because of a specific incident; talk about family values, about violence in advance and in as calm and neutral a setting as possible.

• Be clear that you do not approve of violent behavior by the child or of violence done to the child. Explain the difference between feelings of anger and frustration and acting out those feelings.

• Don't cram everything into one short discussion. Make the discussion an ongoing affair, occurring in natural installments.

• Know who the child's friends are and what their views on violence are. Know the child's whereabouts and companions at all times.

• Set a good example. Even in tense or difficult personal situations, refuse to resort to violence to settle disputes or relieve frustrations.

NEXT WEEK: More ideas to discuss with your kids.

Wal-Mart Called 'Disastrous Effect' For Downtown

to unfairly take business away from smaller companies.

"My concern would be their methods," she said. "Fair competition we could deal with, but unfair competition would not be right."

Gazarian said she is uncertain what the effect the proposed Wal-Mart would have on Quincy but added "I do not think it would enhance the downtown."

"And if Woolworth's goes, that would be devastating to the downtown," said Gazarian.

Also expressing opposition to the proposed Wal-Mart was Andrea McArdle, owner of Hancock Tobacco.

MacKinnon, who attended the QCBPA meeting, maintained that his project would in fact make Quincy Center stronger, and he was not entirely without support.

Tony Agnitti, owner of Agnitti Insurance Agency, said the competition from Wal-Mart would force downtown businesses to progress in order to stay competitive and would ultimately help make those stores stronger. And Joseph Hajjar Sr., owner of Joe's Pub (also known as the Yardrock Cafe), said such competition is "the story of life" and that merchants should take a positive approach about the matter.

Mayor James Sheets has said he will only support the proposed Wal-Mart project if it is determined that it would not have an adverse effect on the city's downtown business district.

The North Quincy High School volleyball team is hot.

No, it's not the girls' team (it's not fall yet), but the boys' team, which is having its most successful season in the eight-year history of the program.

North (14-3) will participate in the MIAA state tournament for the second time in its history and second time in three years. They are expected to get a high seeding when the pairings are announced June 1.

The Raiders played their final home match of the season Tuesday against Milford and close out the regular season tonight (Thursday) at Medfield.

North features one of the finest and strongest starting line-ups in the state and with this group excelling in serving and setting, this team should produce a few league all-stars.

"Setting is the strength of our team," said head coach John Perkins, the only coach in North's boys' volleyball history. "We seem to get a lot of points from our servers and from there we control most of our matches."

North Quincy's starting lineup is led by senior co-captains Matthew Groom and Robert Johnston. Groom, a setter, is one of the best servers in the state. Averaging eight aces per match, he has emerged as the team's number two hitter.

Johnston, a terrific setter and fine passer, is averaging nine kills per match.

The other starting setter is senior Warren Fong. Fong is having an outstanding season, proving himself as a fine hitter and defensive player.

Junior Ken Goon, a starting middle blocker, shows good speed as one of the quickest middle hitters on the team. He's also an excellent server.

Sophomore Jason Liu, a starting middle hitter and blocker, is developing in these positions quite well and will be a force to contend with in his next two years.

Rounding out the starting six is sophomore James Rendle. Rendle has become the team's second leading server while averaging three aces and nine points off serves per match.

The bench has also been strong for North. Coach Perkins relies on the services of senior Diep Nyguen and sophomore Peter Tse and David Lee. The freshmen, coached by Kipp Caldwell, are also having a solid season with a turnout of 16 players.

Playing in the South Alliance, the Raiders, coming off a 10-10 record last season, expected a tough season playing the likes of Quincy, defending state champion New Bedford, Brockton and Weymouth. North came out strong, starting the only level of this program to enjoy success this season. The J.V. team went 16-0 before losing its first match to New Bedford recently. The J.V.'s are coached by James Berger and some of the top performers are juniors Erik and Samson Lee (no relation) and sophomores Peter Tse and David Lee. The freshmen, coached by Kipp Caldwell, are also having a solid season with a turnout of 16 players.

Playing in the South Alliance, the Raiders, coming off a 10-10 record last season, expected a tough season playing the likes of Quincy, defending state champion New Bedford, Brockton and Weymouth. North came out strong, starting the season 8-0 before falling to New Bedford in late April.

The streak was not an easy one as they trailed at some point in most of their matches such as their opening match against Newton South when they trailed in the second game 14-11 and came back to win the game and match. In a match against Weymouth, North trailed the Wildcats 11-2 in the second game, but strong serving and defense brought the Raiders back to win the game 15-13.

After losing to Holliston, North Quincy caught fire again and qualified for the state tournament with a 2-0 win over St. John's Prep. In that match, North won the first game, 15-0.

"Everyone plays," said Perkins. "That's the depth of our team. Our practices are even competitive."

Perkins is also assisted by his "right hand man", Robert Sullivan, and with all this success the boys program is enjoying, the girls' team better get ready for some serious competition for another volleyball program is here to stay.

North Sweeps Quincy In Boys', Girls' Track

North Quincy High swept crosscountry rival Quincy High in boys' and girls' track on Thursday.

The talent of Quincy High was unable to overcome the depth of North Quincy High as the Red Raiders beat the Presidents, 82-44, in girls track.

The undermanned Quincy girls took first place in six different events but could not counter the points racked up by North as they continually captured the second and third spots. The Raiders swept in the 2-mile, long jump and shot put. North's top performers were Aja Jackson (first place, triple jump, high jump) and Jen Pineo (first, shot put, discus). Jackson also took second in the 400-meter run while Pineo placed third in the 200-meters.

Quincy was not without their top performers as well. Super sophs Kasey McNaught (100 and 200) and Liz Sawa (400 and mile) won two different events. Senior captain Michelle Civitarese set a school record in winning the 300-meter hurdles with a time of 50.6 seconds.

Other North Quincy winners were Erin Duggan (800), Mel Gaziano (2-mile), Phyllis Poon (100 hurdles) and Katy Deady (long jump). Quincy's other first place finish was captured by senior Jaime Graham (javelin).

In the boys meet North beat Quincy 76-55 for their first win of the season.

Senior Red Raider Kevin Ross has his best day of the year as he out-dueled President junior heavyweight Butch Palazzo to take first in the shot put and discus. Quincy's Peter Kolson and Mike Feeley placed third in the shot put and discus, respectively.

The Red Raiders took first place in most of the events, but strong second and third place finishes allowed Quincy to keep the meet close. Derrick Epps (110-meter high hurdles, long jump) was North's other double-winner. First place performances were also turned in by Shawn Johnson (400), Jeremy Gott (800), Eric Torvi (mile), Brian O'Donnell (2-mile), Mike Duffy (high jump), Toby Odom (triple jump) and Matt Kietly, Toby Odom, Epps and Gott (4x100 relay).

Chris McArdle (100), Tim Dowling (200), Kevin Carey (300 hurdles) and Ashley Davis (javelin) were the Quincy first place winners. Damon Blaco and Mike Sheffer followed Dowling as Quincy swept the 200. Sheffer also took third in the 100. Other top President performers were Jim Lencki (second in the 800 and mile) and Doug Gallagher (second in the 2-mile). Kolson captured second in the 110 high hurdles.

Quincy and North Quincy athletes who turned in qualifying performances this season will take part in the State Class Meet on Saturday, May 28.

Babe Ruth

Ryan Does It All For Bryan Post

Jon Ryan turned in top-notch performances behind the plate and on the mound as Bryan Post won two consecutive Babe Ruth League games.

On Sunday Bryan Post handed the Elks their first loss of the season, 9-6, behind the work of pitcher Mark Kelly.

A five-run sixth clinched the win for Bryan Post. Ryan and Steve Wiltshire led the barrage with back-to-back doubles. Ryan ended the game with two hits. Brian Gates belted three base hits and Kelly, Pat Cummings and Shawn Manning had one each.

Catcher Ryan and center fielder Mike Eddy were the top defensive performers. Second baseman Gates made several terrific stops.

Rusty Corner, Matt McLaughlin, Andrew Byrne, John Daly and bull-like backstop Eric Wood had top games for the Elks.

Ryan switched to the other side of the battery as Bryan Post beat Tirrell Services, 7-1. Ryan hurled a 3-hitter and K'd nine batters.

Bryan exploded for five runs in the third off hits by Matt Norton, Kevin Cellucci and Kelly. Kelly ended the game with two hits.

Wiltshire and Michael Shaw connected for one base hit each. Eddy was outstanding behind the plate. Matt Graham and Michael Sullivan also played well.

Cibotti Awarded Trinity Varsity Letter

Robert Cibotti III, son of Chad Feetham, Randy Feetham and Bill Armstrong belted the Tirrell hits.

The Elks rebounded from their first loss of the season with a 9-1 win over Sons of Italy.

Third baseman Chris Bregoli smacked a double and a single and drove in three runs in the winning effort. Ranga left fielder Ted McGillicuddy also cracked two hits.

Cornor recorded the win as he pitched three innings of 3-hit ball, giving up one run. Bregoli scattered two hits in four innings of relief work. Byrne was outstanding at shortstop.

Steve Verlicco notched two of SOI's five hits.

DeLisle Hurls 4-Hit Win Over Barnstable

By KERRY BYRNE

Error-free defense, clutch hitting and a 4-hit performance by pitcher Chris DeLisle propelled the Quincy High School baseball team to an 11-3 win over Old Colony League opponent Barnstable.

The victory edged the Presidents (10-6) to within two wins of qualifying for post season play and provided a tune-up for Thursday's battle against North Quincy High School at Adams Field. The North game could prove to be a must-win for the toumey hungry Presidents.

Pitching on short notice, DeLisle scattered four hits and three walks and allowed just two runs before being replaced after 5-1/3 innings of work. His performance freed the arms of big guns Tom Malvesti and Shaun Kivlin for starting work later in the week.

"That was a big outing for Chris," said coach Bob Sylvia of his starting pitcher. "He hasn't pitched much this season, so to come out and do a job like that was just fantastic. If he didn't do such a good job we'd be hurting for arms down the stretch." Sylvia was heard praising DeLisle as he trotted off the field, having thrown 80 hard pitches.

DeLisle was aided by a batting order that took advantage of every error and gap in the Barnstable defense. Three times, in the third, fourth and sixth innings, Quincy batted through the entire lineup.

Four fielding errors by Barnstable led directly to six Quincy runs. At least six balls found the tiny gap between outstretched Barnstable infielders or fell in the pocket between racing infielders and outfielders.

With two out and nobody on in the third, and trailing 1-0, Steve Miller (2-for-4, BB, SB, two runs) and Malvesti (3-for-4, RBI, SB, three runs) got things started with consecutive singles and steals of second base. Miller scored on Malvesti's hit.

Designated hitter Kivlin followed with a sharp grounder that was mishandled by Barnstable shortstop Mike Scioletti, allowing Malvesti to buff around third and slide under the tag attempt by catcher Mike Duffley.

Following a Joe Biagini (2-for-4, RBI, two runs) single, Pat Donovan (2-for-3, BB, one run) reached on an error to load the bases. Steve Barrett (3-for-3, BB, two RBIs) cracked a single that drove in Kivlin and Biagini to make the score 4-1. The hit by Barrett proved to be the eventual game-winner.

The Presidents did a repeat performance in the fourth. With one out and nobody on they again pelted Barnstable. Catcher Jon Gangi (1-for-4, 2B, sac RBI, one run) clubbed a long double then went to third on a Miller single. Gangi stole home when pitcher Joe Machado threw to first to hold Miller.

A Malvesti single moved Miller to third. Miller then came home on a wild pitch. Kivlin reached on a fielders choice that saw Malvesti slide safely into home for the second time. The inning would end with the bases loaded but with Quincy holding a commanding 7-1 lead.

DeLisle recorded his second consecutive 1-2-3 inning in the top of the fourth, thanks to an impressive 4-6-3 double play. After Scott Rose walked, Machado hit a sharp ground ball to the gap between first and second. Second baseman Chris Cotter made the snag and threw to Malvesti who made the relay to first. Donovan anchored the play by scooping the ball off the dirt.

The DP was one of several great defensive plays turned in by the Presidents, who were flawless in the field. The other gem was turned in by first baseman Donovan in the seventh inning. With Miller on the mound in relief, Barnstable's Brett Coughlin hit a grounder towards right field. Showing Deion Sanders-like quickness in moving his John Kruk-like body, Donovan raced to his right and stretched to make the stop before throwing to Miller who was covering first for the putout.

Miller also combined with catcher Gangi for an out on a heads-up play by both boys. Coming to the mound in the sixth with the bases loaded, Miller faced Duffley. Duffley hit a sharp high bouncing ball that Miller fielded while racing towards the plate. Gangi squared off in front of the plate and caught the ball as Rich Tibbitts came bearing down. Gangi held his ground for the second out of the inning, an inning that would end for Barnstable with the bases loaded.

Quincy put the game out of reach in the sixth with when Malvesti, Donovan, Biagini and pinch runner Tim Messing came across the plate.

Miller allowed one hit, no runs and walked one in 1-2/3 innings of work.

Mike Caporale drove in the final Quincy run when he walked in the sixth.

Due to several cancellations due to rain, the Presidents must race to get in as many games as possible before the end of the season. If they finish with only 18 games played, 11 wins will qualify them for post season play. Under normal circumstances 12 wins in 20 games qualify a team for toumey play.

Rain, thunder and lightning nearly cancelled this contest, too. The game was delayed one-half hour before the skies cleared. As if on cue, rain came down again within seconds of the final out.

One Inning Costs North Against Taunton

Jesse Casler pitched 4 2/3 scoreless innings against Taunton but the third inning proved very costly for North Quincy as the Tigers scored all their runs in a 7-0 baseball victory.

North (4-12) will close out the season by hosting Bridgewater-Raynham Wednesday and playing Quincy today (Thursday) at Adams Field. The game will be part of a day-night doubleheader as the Quincy and North Quincy softball teams will do battle down the street at McCoy Field at 7 p.m.

Dan Duncan, the North starting pitcher who has been pitching well of late, left the game in the second inning when he experienced soreness in his pitching elbow after hitting a Taunton player with a pitch.

"He (Duncan) said he felt fine before the game," said head coach Leo Donovan. "He just threw a fastball and it hurt him."

The one inning that cost North the game was the third when Taunton sent 12 batters to the plate but collected only three hits in scoring their seven runs. Four of their runs were aided by North Quincy errors and walks.

Taunton's rally was stopped when North turned a double play, the first of two such plays turned in by North on the day.

North's closest chance of scoring came in the fourth inning when Steve Koch and Casler singled, but George Wirtz hit into a double play and Jim Sapienza struck out to end the inning.

North also put runners on base in the fifth inning when Tim Zaniboni reached on an error and Sean Dolbere walked but could not move the runners any further.

The Raiders had a tough time getting anything together against Taunton freshman pitcher Brian Smith. Smith pitched the first three innings followed by Tom Angers who pitched the last four to combine for the shutout.

Casler pitched well in emergency relief for North, giving up only two hits and retiring the last eight hitters in a row to finish the game.

"Case finished up pretty nice," said Donovan. "We just had that one tough inning."

Justin Ackerman Honored As Scholar Athlete

Justin Ackerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Ackerman of Larry St., West Quincy, and a senior at Boston College High School, was honored at the annual awards banquet for scholar-athletes sponsored by the Eastern Massachusetts Chapter of the National Football Foundation and the Hall of Fame.

Ackerman joins 14 other BC High scholar-athletes who have been similarly honored over the years. BC High's total of 15 honorees surpasses the total of any other eastern Massachusetts high school.

Coach Jim Cotter noted: "Justin is certainly more than worthy of the honor bestowed upon him by the National Football Foundation. Justin was a split end and a three-year starter on the varsity football team. In my 30-plus years coaching football at BC High, he has caught more passes than any other player. Justin is an all-star both on and off the field - a perfect gentleman, a hardworking athlete and a leader in the school."

Ackerman was recognized earlier this year as a Boston Globe, Quincy Patriot Ledger and Catholic Conference All-Star. An honor roll student at BC High, he was accepted early at Colby College in Maine where he will continue his education in the fall. He will play football for Coach Tom Austin at Colby.

Five runs in the bottom of the fifth secured BFI's 14-8 win over Campbell.

Thirteen walks and two hit batters allowed BFI to win the game.

A 10-run fourth inning led Continental Cable to a 24-6 rout of Bolea-Buonfiglio.

Leading the explosion was strongboy Brad DiMartino who nailed one dinger and knocked in five runs. Winning pitcher Julio Ochoa mowed down seven in three innings of work. Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

North Quincy's record-breaking 6'8" center Jason McLeod is likely to sign a letter of intent to play basketball at Mt. Ida College next season. McLeod led the Red Raiders in scoring, rebounding and blocked shots this season.

Among his season highlights: In a 76-75 win against Bridgewater-Raynham on January 14, he set a school record for blocked shots with 10 while scoring 25 points (including the game winning free throw with 13 seconds left) and grabbing 21 rebounds. In a double overtime win against Quincy on January 26 he scored 31 points, including eight in the deciding session.

Michelle Civitarese, senior captain of the Quincy High school girls' track team, broke a school record as she ran the 300-meter hurdles in a time 50.6 seconds in Quincy's meet against North Quincy. The Red Raiders won the meet, 82-44.

Rotary Club, of Quincy Junior League baseball, is 6-1, due in no small part to the strong arm of Adam Goodrich.

Goodrich has pitched 21 innings in four appearances this season, including two complete games, and his "fan" clue is growing fast - he has 29 K's to his credit. In the two complete games he whiffed 22 batters in 14 innings. He's only given up two earned runs.

In Rotary's 2-0 win over Beacon Sports he fell one swing short of pitching a no-hitter. In a 5-2 win versus Continental Cablevision he allowed just five hits.

Baseball/hockey star Kiva Tupe has also been a weapon on the mound for Rotary. He whiffed nine and gave up three hits in their 14-2 win over Burgin Platter.

Several ball players have been nothing less than spectacular at the plate.

Tommy "Bombs Away" Callahan has been blasting the opposition for Reggie's Oil of the St. John's Farm League...In a 5-3 win over DiBona Plumbing & Heating his grand slam was the difference in the game...in a 5-4 loss to Sweeney Funeral Services he cracked a two-run double...he chalked up two more hits in a 4-0 shutout of Nation One Mortgage.

Farm League Bruise Brothers Nick Transaglia and A.J. Goodman both hit grand slams as Sweeney edged Donut King, 10-0. Nick's blast came in the first inning; A.J.'s in the second.

Thursday's Quincy/North Quincy baseball game (Adams Field, 3:30) will be a big one for both teams. North, who has had it's way with Quincy in most other sports this year, will try to avoid a season sweep at the hands of the Presidents. Quincy is making a late push at post-season play.

The softball teams will play Thursday at 7 p.m. North will be looking for their first win and trying to avenge an earlier loss to Quincy.

Brian O'Hanley can do it all. Hockey, soccer, baseball, you name it. On the ice he was one of the most potent scorers in all of Mite hockey, feared by goalies near and far, and he has the same effect on the soccer field.

As a member of the Quincy boys under 10 Div. IB travel team, he's been an irresistible force. In the last two games he has two goals and four assists. Although impressive, O'Hanley's play in soccer has been overshadowed by that of teammate Michael Roche. Roche has five goals and one assist in the same two games, wins over Hanson and Raynham.

What Roche lacks, however, are nicknames, lots of nicknames. For O'Hanley is long on talent and on monikers. This past hockey season he was dubbed the "Flying Irishman" because of his speed and grace on the ice (reminiscent of Pavel Bure). But according to baseball coach Scott Campbell, "Butchie" has long been his name on the diamond. A bold, daring infielder, willing to dive for the tough grounder and "take it for the team," he reminds one of Red Sox manager Butch Hobson, back when Hobson was a tough, hustling Sox third baseman.

Little Brenna O'Brien finished first in the 15 and under age group in the Quincy PAL 3.5 Mile Road Race. Big deal, right?

Well, Brenna is just 8-years-old. She was competing against girls nearly twice her age, yet she still managed to come out on top.

By the way, her 12-year-old sister Genevieve came in second in the 15 and under age group.

Wollaston, North Quincy Parking Meters Removed

Parking meters are being removed in Wollaston Center and North Quincy this week as part of Mayor James Sheets' plans to revitalize the city's main business districts.

Sheets said he feels the financial loss from the parking meter receipts will be minimal compared to the business that the meter-less districts should attract. The mayor, who said he does not know what how much money the city receives from the receipts, ordered meters in Quincy Center removed last year.

Traffic department workers dismantled 30 meters on Beale Street Monday and at press time Tuesday were busy removing the remain 72 meters on Hancock Street in Wollaston. Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon said North Quincy's 77 meters would be removed by the end of the week.

Gillon said he, also, is unaware of the total revenues the city receives from the parking meters.

Sheets said motorists will be able to park for free in either one or two hour free parking zones that will replace the meters. Signs will be posted stating the time limit for each zone, and the limit will be negotiated with the merchants in the areas, he said.

Gillon said the only parking meters that will be left in the city's three central shopping districts will be at the Vane Street parking lot off Billings Road in North Quincy and on several streets near the Ross parking garage on the downtown Parkway. The Parkingway meters will be removed in midsummer, when the city takes over management of the Ross Parking Garage, he said.

The 62 meters in the Vane Street parking lot will probably remain, Gillon added. Officials hope North Quincy merchants and their employees will make use of the lot to free the street parking spaces for customers. It will cost only 5 cents an hour to park in the lot, and drivers can stay up to five hours without feeding the meter.

The meter removal is part of Sheets' plans to revitalize the Wollaston and North Quincy business districts with new roads, sidewalks, street lights and traffic signals. The $2 million Wollaston project is expected to begin by the end of next week, while the North Quincy plans are still being designed.

Sheets said he originally planned for the North Quincy meters to be removed in the summer of 1995 when the work in that area begins, but he recently had a change of heart.

"It just seems right, feels right, to do it now," he said.

LaRaia Would Change Taxi Cab Parking Spot

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia is hoping to change a parking spot specifically designed for taxi cabs at the corner of Cottage Avenue and Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

LaRaia said recently the spot was "put up when Quincy Center was active" and once served a useful purpose but now only causes friction. Any other vehicles parked at the spot are slapped with a $15 fine by meter maids, something that LaRaia said local businesses find discouraging.

"I've talked to a number of merchants, and they're uptight," he said.

LaRaia said he would like the sign designating the spot as a taxi stop torn down and the spot changed to a 15-minute restricted parking area. He added that there are four parking spots further down Cottage Avenue currently used as a loading zone and he would like at least one of those made available for 15-minute restricted parking.

"It's just going to help out the downtown in a small way," he said.

The City Council agreed to look into both matters at a recent meeting.

New Restaurant Planned At Kelly's In The Square

By LISA CONNELL

City Licensing Board officials heard a request Tuesday from Boston restaurateur Timothy Colton for a common victualer, all-alcoholic beverage license for a 170-seat restaurant at 15-19 Cottage Avenue, site of the former Kelly's In The Square.

Colton currently operates and manages Four's Boston, a sports-theme restaurant on Canal St. near Boston Garden.

"We're looking forward to opening an up-scale restaurant with a historical sports theme," said Colton. Colton's attorney, Louis Cassis of Quincy, said Colton has "an unblemished record in the city of Boston at a difficult, very busy site."

Because of his successful restaurant management track record in Boston, Colton's proposal met with support from board members, community organizations, residents and a priest.

City Clerk and Licensing Board Chairman Joseph Shea also read letters of support for the proposed restaurant from Merrymount School Principal Kathleen Morris, Maralin Manning of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix, Bay State Community Services (BSCS) Executive Director Kenneth Tarabelli, IMPACT Quincy Director

Mitch Finnegan and Chamber of Commerce Community Development Manager Maureen Rogers.

Of Colton himself, the Rev. William McCarthy of St. John the Baptist church wrote, "he is very community and civic-minded. [This restaurant] will be a great addition to Quincy."

Carol Sheehan, of 64 President's Lane, wrote that she wanted to lend support to the efforts of Tim Colton to obtain an all-alcoholic beverage license as "this is a community-appropriate restaurant for the city."

D'Aprix, noting that the goal of his development corporation is to attract new business to Quincy Center said, "It's in keeping with the type of business we want to attract."

"The previous owner [Peter Kelly, former proprietor of Kelly's In The Square] created activity, but not the kind of activity we wanted!" said Police Chief Francis Mullen.

As reported previously in The Sun, Kelly's In The Square received a 30-day suspension of their license by the board in February. The business closed suddenly, and without warning, in April.

"With the history that's gone on there...we want to be very careful about who occupies that spot," said Building Inspector and Board Vice-Chairman Matthias Mulvey.

"This is a very positive step; this is a very positive transition for this space. While we don't feel there's a shortage of liquor licenses in the city, we feel this is a very good space for this type of establishment," said Finnegan.

"There will be less emphasis on entertainment and more on a restaurant. It's not a bar. This will not be a bar. There will be more emphasis on service and on good food," said Cassis. "Colton runs a good management team all of his staff are properly trained and TIP certified."

TIPS is an acronym for "training for intervention procedures by servers of alcohol," according to Quincy Police Detective and City Liquor Inspector Sergeant Richard Laracy.

"All of our wait-staff is TIP-certified and there will always be one to two people acting as hostesses to guide and direct people," Colton said.

"Barnaby's is opening soon and Darby's will be opening at the site of the former Nally's. With the addition of The Custom House, this changes the complexion of restaurants in the city, and perhaps some restaurateurs feel we're cutting into that," said Shea. "But if people know we have quality places in Quincy, this will increase the traffic and create a good atmosphere of competition."

Colton said he expects to spend close to $250,000 in renovations and hopes to open for business in mid-July.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

On this Memorial Day let us remember that this day signifies, perhaps more deeply than any other patriotic observance, the soul of America. The patriots to be remembered on this day represent every generation of Americans. They fell in battles widely separated by distance and time. Some came from families long established in America; many others were new to the land. These patriots differed in color, in religious beliefs, in political faith and in other ways which historically have divided the human family...

And so, on this Memorial Day, let us solemnly pay tribute to these fallen heroes... Let us spare a prayer of thanksgiving that there have always been men and women willing to offer the ultimate sacrifice so that our national ideals could endure.

work with young people referred by officials of that court. Even now, he receives between three and nine referrals from the court each week. The Way Up is open to teenaged girls and boys. The religious programs are optional.

Greeters at the service were Janet DeRusha of the church and Kristy Pedersen and Chris Chetwynd of The Way Up. Rev. Malmquist led the responsive call to worship, then officially welcomed The Way Up to the church and stressed how the two groups would be cooperating in their ministries.

Rev. Malmquist mentioned that members of the congregation had decided more than a year ago to make themselves available to a number of ministries that serve children and youth. The Way Up is now added to that list which includes the Sunday School, various church youth activities, Girl Scouts, a dancing school, a church-sponsored nursery school and Common Purpose, a counseling group that focuses on domestic violence. Matt Chetwynd received the right hand of fellowship on behalf of the teenagers of The Way Up and David Williams, also of The Way Up, read the scripture.

The Chancel Choir was directed by Virginia Grimes. Guitarist Mary Ruth Scott taught the children one of the songs of The Way Up, "I Head the Lord Call My Name."

Dr. Langevin preached on the subject, "Somebody Else's Pilgrims" and concluded with a prayer of thanksgiving. Soprano Chris Malmquist accompanied by the choir sang. The service concluded with the singing of "The Communion Hymn of The Way Up," a hymn written by Dr. Langevin. The Chancel Choir also sang a benediction that had also been written by Dr. Langevin.

The reception for the visitors to the service was sponsored by the Diaconate of the First Baptist Church. It was held in the church's Fellowship Hall which was dominated by the presence of nearly 40 puppets made by young people of The Way Up. The walls were covered with Bible cartoons which had also been conceived and drawn by the teenagers. Each cartoon was a paraphrase of a story in the Bible.

Activities of The Way Up are held Saturday mornings, Sunday evenings and at various other times during the week. The ministry of The Way Up is paid for by the gifts of individual contributors, women's groups and congregations from throughout the state.

Some of the visitors testified to the importance of the program in their lives.

"If I had not become involved in The Way Up," said one man, now an adult, "I would have ended up in prison." Many there said the same was true of them.

'A Day Of Thanksgiving,' Owner Says Chelsea Celebrates A Very Special Birthday

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Eleven months ago, it didn't seem possible.

Chelsea, a terminally ill Doberman Pinscher who has helped teach countless individuals at schools, community organizations and other groups about disabilities, celebrated her eighth birthday Monday with Clara Irvine's second grade class at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School in Quincy.

Although the birthday has been celebrated annually at the school, it seemed not long ago that last year's would be the final celebration. Chelsea was diagnosed last June 30 with cirrhosis of the liver, a disease that is particularly fatal to dogs.
